Waves and Surf.

Long and oscillatory waves run by avity, the first agitating the water to early the same amount at all depths, hile the chief disturbance due to the tter confines itself to the upper lays of the water. These oscillatory aves, the most typical example of nich is perhaps furnished by the well," or regular rolling waves hich continue to run in deep water fter a storm, will break on a shelving ore when their height is about equal o the depth of water. When the depth sufficient to allow the oscillations to roceed unimpeded no progressive moin takes place, each column being ept in its place by the pressure of urrounding columns. If, however, ee oscillation is prevented, as by the terposition of a rock or by the shelvng of the shore, the columns in the p water are not balanced by those the shallower, and thus they acquire progressive motion and form "break-For this reason waves always reak against the shore, whatever is he direction of the wind.

The Influence of Flowers.

Centuries ago great, elaborate books ere written about flowers, and the nds even then were many and some the forms were marvelous. Worhip and praise have centered about wers and garlands rather than about e fruits that we eat. This marks em to have been considered as of e higher things. All holy and great casions need them if the occasions e complete. Not a soul but responds blossoms even though he knows it . No soul passes a lily in blow, an ople orchard in May, a clover field ept with red or a good garden lying his feet, but that some mere reflecon of it enters into his mind and dges itself in some nexus of the ain. It would be difficult for any an to imagine a flowerless world, and he conjured it in his dream he would nd himself sitting in some casis of reenery and bloom. - Flower Maga-

No Parallels In Nature,

The wise men say there are no paralis in nature, that no one thing in the ide universe exactly mates and natches any other one thing, that each oud has differed from every other oud form in any hour of the day and ight or day or yesterday, and so on ck through the forgotten centuries, d no two leaves in form, color or exture lift the same faces to the sun any day of the millions of years; at no wave on any beach curves and ills as any wave has curved and fala before, not since this planet cooled. nd so it is with the whiris and the ystals of driving snow, with the sand d splash of rain and so, too, with the ight of birds, the dash and tumble of e restless brook and the roar of lawthunder and the cry of birds .- F. opkinson Smith.

An Expensive Luxury.

Richard Harding Davis, who knows uth America intimately, told at a cheon at the Philadelphia club a th American story.

The Florida in Buenos Aires," he ld, "is very elegant and charming. in the past the young men were shopping and promenading there. cordingly a law was passed which oosed a fine of $50 on any one who uld dare to accost or annoy in the ghtest degree any lady in Buenos

Trying a Joke

Some years ago in a North Caroline court, Judge Shipp presiding, the trial of a cause had been protracted till near midnight. The jury were tired and sleepy and showed flagging attention. Willie Murchison, who was addressing the jury, thought to arouse them, so he said, "Gentlemen, I will tell you an anecdote." Instantly the judge, the jury and the few spectators pricked up their ears and were all attention, as Murchison was admirable in that line, had a fund of anecdotes and no one could tell them better. But he soon proceeded to tell one of the dullest. prosiest and most pointless jokes possible. Everybody looked disappointed. The judge, leaning over, said in an unmistakable tone of disappointment, "Mr. Murchison, I don't see the point of that joke." "Nor I either," replied the witty counsel. "But your honor told it to me on our way down here, and as I thought the lack of appreciation must be due to my obtuseness I concluded to give the joke a trial by jury."

Remarkable Feats of Strength.

Louis de Boufflers, who lived in the sixteenth century, could break a bar of iron with his hands. The strong est man could not take from him a ball which he held between his thumb and first finger. While standing up, with no support whatever, four strong soldiers could not move him. He remained as firm as a rock. Sometimes he amused himself by taking on his shoulders his own horse, fully harnessed, and with that heavy load he promenaded the public square, to the great delight of the inhabitants. At about the same time there lived a Spanlard named Piedro, who could break the strongest handcuffs that could be put around his wrists. He folded his arms on his chest, and ten men pulling in different directions with ropes could not unfold them. Augustus II., elector of Saxony, was a man of great strength. He could carry a man in his open hand.

The Puppy's Fault,

An enthusiastic feminist is entertaining frieeds by reading the lines which Sheridan Indited to the puppy with a canister tied to its tail. Lord Erskine, it appears, had likened wives to that same canister, and, Lady Erskine being justly annoyed by the remark, Sheridan dashed off the following impromptu: Lord Erskine, at woman presuming to called a wife a tin canister tied to one's

And fair Lady Ann while the subject he carries on

Seems hurt at his lordship's degrading wherefore degrading, considered aright?

A canister's polished and useful and bright, And should dirt its original purity hide. That's the fault of the puppy to whom it is tied.

Flying Powers of Birds. The rate at which some birds can migrate under favorable conditions is extraordinary, and as one listens to their plaintive cries coming from the darkness overhead it is difficult to realize that in a few hours these same birds may be within the arctic circle prone to accost the beautiful wom- and a little later may be even crossing the pole itself. • • • Less is known of the actual dates of the departure of the migratory birds in autumn than of those of their arrival earlier in the year, and this for obvious reasons. The way in which our most charming songsters sliently skulk out of the country in the autumn is very different from that in which they make their triumphal entry in the spring. when every wood and copse resounds with their melodies.-Windsor Maga-

Blue Balloons. In case you ever feel tempted to buy a balloon don't buy a blue one. Re ones are the best. There is a scientific reason why. According to the researches of M. Reynaud, caoutchouc is strongly attracted by the ultra violet rays from the mercury vapor lamp with a quartz tube, which is a powerful source of such rays. This fact has a practical bearing in connection with balloon envelopes, which are treated with caoutchouc. Aeronauts are familiar with the discovery that the envelopes suffer during ascensions, and this is explained by the greater effect of ultra violet rays at high altitudes. Experiment had already led to using yellow coloring matter on the envelopes, and red balloous are sometimes seen, but never blue or violet. M. Reynaud considers that red is the best color to use, as it not only absorbs the ultra violet rays, but also the blue rays, and these last are likely to share in the bad action of the sun's rays upon balloons .-- New York World.

Rock Salt Discovered by Accident. The great rock salt deposits of Louisana were discovered by accident in May, 1862. Salt was very scarce at that time, and the proprietor of the Island's salt works, John Marsh Avery. determined to profit by it. With this end in view he commenced to deepen his wells. One negro workman, after going down sixteen feet, came to Mr. Avery with the news that he had struck a sunken log. and could proceed no further. Mr. Avery investigated and found, not a log, but the great rock salt deposit that has made Louislana famous throughout the country. The discovery did not come altogether as a surprise, as Thomassy had predicted that a great rock salt deposit would one day be discovered in each of the five Gulf islands, and perhaps in other portions of the state. Since the close of the war, rock salt has been an important contributing factor in the mineral wealth of the state.-National Magazine.

The Wagon Wheel Paradox,

A very interesting paradox is the one concerning an ordinary wagon wheel. which is solid and rigid, yet, when fastened on its axle on a wagon, when the wagon moves part of the circumference of the wheel which is in contact with the ground is for an instant at absolute rest, while the point directly perpendicular to it is flying along at a high rate of speed. The two points borizontal with the center of the wheel are traveling pretty fast, but only hai! as fast as the topmost point, and as the up going horizontal point increases in speed the down going one slows up until it is at rest for a moment when in contact with the ground. Yet the wheel is one solid piece and there are only two points going at the same rate of speed at the same time. Yet if the wheel is taken off the axle and rolled down an incline every point of the circumference moves at the same rate of zine.

General Washington wore at his inauguration a full suit of fine cloth, the handiwork of his own household. At a ball given in New Jersey in honor of Mrs. Washington she wore a "simple russet gown" and white handkerchief about her neck. On one occasion she gave the best proof of her success in domestic manufactures by the exhibition of two of her dresses, which were composed of cotton, striped with silk and entirely homemade. The silk stripes in the fabric were woven from the ravelings of brown slik stockings and old crimson chair covers.
