THE TOP OF THE WORLD. How an Explorer Would Know When He Was at the Pole. The question arises in the mind of every one who is not an expert in using measuring instruments, "How do the explorers know when they are standing on the rotating point of the world?"

Named All Their Women Maria. Socotra, an island in the Indian ocean, was for many centuries a place dreaded by the mariner. In the tenth century it was notorious as a pirate haunt, and one devout authority described its inhabitants as "Nestorian Christians and pirates."

Johnson's Definitions. Dr. Johnson perpetrated many jokes in his dictionary, but among his most famous blunders was his definition of "pastern" as "the knee of a horse."

A Strong Hand. "You was a big loser when de game broke up, wasn't you?" "Yes. Dat's why it broke up."

Qualified. "What! You marry my daughter," thundered old Roxley—"you, a mere clerk!"

A Reminder. Clerk—Mr. Sapielgh complains in his letter that he is not hearing anything further about his suit. Lawyer—Send him a bill.—Fillegende Blatter.

It Depends. "Don't you think there is something to inspire enthusiasm for kings?" "Not when the other fellow holds the scepter."—Baltimore American.

Fast Color Too. Mrs. Moneybags—Why do you apply for the position when I stated specially in my advertisement that I desired a colored chauffeur? White Applicant—Because, madam, I am quite sure that I could fill the position. I am very green.—Judge.

Some Improvement. "Jane got her new bonnet wet." "Did it ruin it?" "I should say not. It made it look more fashionably rippled than before."—Detroit Free Press.

Making Perfectly Sure. Jack—Are you sure that I am the only man you ever really and truly loved? Ethel—Perfectly sure, dear. I went over the whole list only yesterday.—Boston Transcript.

Changing Fashions. Father meditating on time's changes—Ah, yes, the fashion of this world passeth away! Daughter—Indeed it does, papa. I shall want a new hat next week.

BUILT UPON QUICKSAND.

It Makes a Firm Foundation For Many New York Skyscrapers.

Quicksand, to the popular mind a lurking monster that swallows up the unwary, while often treacherous, has been safely built upon, and several of the second class skyscrapers in New York rest directly upon it.

The ground in the lower end of Manhattan Island is a quicksand extending from the surface to a maximum depth of eighty feet below Broadway.

Ordinary ground will bear safely from two to four tons per square foot, dry clay from four to six tons per square foot, good gravel from six to ten tons and bedrock from 50 to 200 tons per square foot.

SPOILED A SPANISH PLOT.

Reward of Dutch Boys For Saving Amsterdam's Stock Exchange.

Of the many quaint and curious customs, traditions and privileges prevailing in Holland none is more extraordinary than a certain privilege that has been enjoyed by the boys of Amsterdam for nearly 300 years.

At a fixed time each summer these boys gather by the hundreds in the great square called the Dam, situated in the center of the city.

The origin of this custom, it is said, is as follows: One afternoon in the year 1622 a crowd of boys playing in the Dam lost a ball in the canal that in those days skirted one side of the square.

When the burgesses asked the boy what reward he desired for the service he had rendered the town he replied that so long as there was a stock exchange in Amsterdam the boys of the town would like to be permitted to make the floor of the exchange their playground during a certain part of the year.

Nightcaps. For external application the nightcap is rarely seen. It is first mentioned during the time of the Tudors. In the inventory of Henry VIII's wardrobe we come across the following item: "A nightcap of black velvet embroidered."

The Sailor's Toothbrush. A bluff and coarse old time sea captain caught a sailor one morning cleaning his teeth with a toothbrush.

A Satirical Reward. There was perhaps more satire than gratitude in the reward bestowed by a French lady on a surgeon for bleeding her—an operation in which the lancet was so clumsily used that an artery was severed and the poor woman bled to death.

The Hunters. "I'm going off on a hunting trip with Binks, Dawson and Bidad," said Hickenlooper.

Fast Color Too. Mrs. Moneybags—Why do you apply for the position when I stated specially in my advertisement that I desired a colored chauffeur?

Some Improvement. "Jane got her new bonnet wet." "Did it ruin it?" "I should say not. It made it look more fashionably rippled than before."

Interesting Facts About Labor Agitators.

In talking with some of the members who are associated with organized labor as well as other independent workmen, both of whom recognize in the work the Employers' Association is doing something that will assist labor in general in holding up to view dishonest leaders who have so grimly entrenched themselves in position which they now occupy in labor's ranks and who are using the word "labor" for purposes of self aggrandizement to line their pockets with the funds that are contributed by the man who earns his living by the sweat of his brow.

These men whom we refer to have asked us to do something to inform their brethren and the world at large of the great injustice that is being perpetuated upon working men, especially they who are connected with labor organizations, by the blood-suckers who by their piratical methods and by the levying of defense funds extract the last possible nickel from the pockets of the poor, patient worker.

These credulous dupes paid on an average of $17.00 per head in the State of California for the defense of the McNamars, not quite so much per head in Oregon and Washington, but still a considerable amount.

Organized labor in California alone paid $780,000 for the defense of these confessed murderers. This is but one state in the Union. In Canada the screw was turned as relentlessly as it was here.

Throughout the country the assessment was 25 cents a week, and it was continued for months. On the basis of two million membership, using their own figures, if the levy had lasted four weeks the proceeds would have been one million dollars, so that we have a sum, including California's levy, which was about the heaviest, amounting to at least one million seven hundred and eighty thousand dollars.

It is perhaps from two to four times greater than this, but we will let the lowest estimate suffice.

The McNamara trial was but one excuse out of many for a continuous graft upon labor collected unceasingly by itching fingers at the command of leaders whose greed was colossal and insatiable.

Every man and woman in the ranks have paid a good many dollars during the last year in assessments over and above the McNamara swindle. Only the grafters themselves have the least idea of the disposition of this vast hoard.

It is a fraud that dwarfs the South Sea bubbles, greater far than any of the historic swindles that are remembered for their impudence and their success.

Never yet was there a body of men so "easy" as organized labor, so willing to be robbed, so abject under imposition and threats. Even sheep bleat against the shearing process.

Members of unions generally expect those who are enjoying the fruits of this system of defense levy to give an accounting. They are not only wondering but protesting as to how this money is being spent.

Darrow admits the receipt of $10,000, but this is a mere drop in the bucket. It is a question of millions, not of thousand, and we are not surprised that the members of the unions should be anxious to know where the millions went.

It came from the pockets of the individual laborers, and we have a suspicion that they will ask where it went and what has been done with it as soon as their dumb patience is exhausted.

And yet in a sense this is also a matter of public concern. That the incompetent are entitled to protection against imposition is a wholesome axiom of law.

Village school teachers, country clergymen and the sophisticated in general are protected against the bucket shop, the mail order swindle, and the gold-brick adventurer.

The post-office issues fraud orders against thieves and impostors and does what it can to stand between the hawk and the pigeon. Why should not organized labor be similarly protected, even against its will, since the spectacle of wholesale robbery is demoralizing to the public at large?

There never was a servant girl in greater need of aid; never a country clergyman or a village postmistress so helpless, so innocent, so guileless, in presence of the extortioner. The protest against the high price of living comes mainly from the class of workers who feel the pinch more severely than some others.

It is to be feared that the difficulty of making ends both ends meet will grow more grievous still so long as Messrs. Gompers, Tviemoe, Clancy, McCarty, Darrow et al remain at the seat of custom and issue their tax warrants with no other restraint than their estimate of what the traffic will bear.

Hope is to be seen, however, in the dumb questionings of the men of whom we refer to in the opening paragraph. Organized labor will soon assert its manhood, and while refusing to be robbed for the personal interest of a few pirates, it will conform itself once more with an economic law that is as old as civilization and that demands efficiency as the price of prosperity.

It will recover from the mesmerism of the noisy loafers who lead them and some of whom in our sister state recently visited one of the principal detention establishments for lawbreakers, not with a view of inspecting appointments of what should be their place of residence for a time, but for the express purpose of intimidating the men in charge, fearing that something might be brought out by some of the inmates now in that institution that might lead to evidence of their connection and participation in this defense fund and thus couple them with the uses to which it had been put, leading ultimately to their sharing the same fate as the men now incarcerated who had been used merely as pawns in the great game of political labor preferment and self-aggrandizement, as practiced by the present heads of Union Labor!
