

School Notes.

The husky Tillamook City football eleven defeated the fast little High School team in a clean game on Election Day, by a score of six to nothing. The Tillamook team made their one and only score in the first quarter when they scored on a play from the right end, fell on the ball and kicked a field goal. The High School team was touched by the safety quarter back, H. Ebinger, as they were going over the line, a touch down was scored. From that time on the game was evenly played, and on account of wet ground the play was rather uncertain. In the last quarter the High School started a kicking rally, but it was too late, as the whistle blew as the school boys were nearing the enemy's line. Another game will be played Thanksgiving and both teams will be strengthened. This promises to be a more interesting contest than the first.

Some one started the rumor that two of our High School students had united in a matrimonial bond. At least she has the ring, and he has the smile. Whether or not this is true will be ascertained in the near future; if it is true we wish to extend to the newly wedded couple many hearty congratulations and wish them happiness. Both parties are still in school, but probably that has no significance.

School did not take up on Monday morning because of the fact that the gasoline engine which circulates the hot air was broken, and the rooms of the school house were too chilly. The engine was repaired and school was resumed on Tuesday morning.

If you should hear some one say, "Stop! Stop! I tell you to stop," and you don't know what they mean, just ask John E. and he will probably tell you that the command was first spoken on Hallowe'en, near the south-west corner of the school building. Ask him any way.

On Friday the Emersonian Literary Society gave their first program of the year which was given very smoothly and showed ability. Only one number being omitted, which was a male trio; the reason for the omission being "the fact that one member of the trio was absent."

The dramatically gifted students will give a four act comedy drama at the Gem Theatre on Friday and Saturday nights entitled, "Uncle Rube." This play is full of merriment, excitement and life from start to finish. There are eleven characters namely:

- Ruben Rodney, (Uncle Rube).
- Justice of the Peace, School Trustee, and a master hand at "swapping hosses," Benley Stam.
- Simon smiley, a smooth and cunning old villain, Verle Stanley.
- Mark his son, a promising young rascal, Harvey Ebinger.
- Gordon Grey, a popular young artist, Verne Bain.
- Upton Asterbilt, an up-to-date New York dude, Thos. Shea.
- Like, the hired man, I want to know, John Ebinger.
- Hub Green, a comical young rustic, Frank Ebesson.
- Bill Tappan, a county constable, Bruce Wade.
- Millicent Lee, "the pretty school-teacher," Pauline Beals.
- Mrs. Martha Bunn, a chaming young widow, Helen Beals.
- Taggs, a waif from New York, Elora Phillips.

No Difference.

It was a breezy morning, and the city train was packed. A crusty old gentleman with his back to the engine "preferred the window down for ventilation," while a wheezy individual facing the window persisted in pulling it up again, as he "hated these beastly east winds."

"I can't stand this stuffy herring box!" chortled the crusty man, tugging the strap and letting the window drop for the fourth time.

"Nor I these Siberian blasts that only convicts could stand," rejoined the wheezer. "Don't you know it's an old adage that 'when the wind is in the east 'tis neither fit for me nor you?'"

"Ha, ha!" laughed the crusty man, appealing to the passengers to laugh also. "Here's a man who doesn't know that old proverb. Why, sir, the last words are 'man nor beast.'"

"Well, there's no difference in what I said," chuckled the wheezer as the passengers roared in chorus.—London Tit-Bits.

Fun For the Elephants.

A queer elephant yarn is told by the captain of a trading steamboat. On one occasion he had on board a cargo of forty elephants. The vessel was anchored in a perfectly smooth sea off the coast of Zanzibar, but to the great surprise of the passengers the steamer began to roll. At first they supposed the motion to be caused by the ground swell, but when the motion kept increasing there was general alarm, and the captain instigated an investigation. Then it was revealed that the elephants had in some way found that by swaying to and fro all together a rocking motion was produced that seemed to please them immensely. So the great beads and bodies rolled and swung in unison until the steamer, which had no other cargo and rode lightly, was in imminent danger of rolling clean over. The attendants hurried down into their hold and after a great deal of shouting and thumping, managed to stop the dangerous amusement.

When Musicians Were Scarce.

In these days of conservatories and music schools, when each house has its piano or its organ, to say nothing of devotees to the cornet, violin and banjo, it seems strange to assert that there ever was a time when musicians were in demand, yet such was really the case. "In the fifteenth century," says Henry M. Brooks in his "Olden Time Music," "musicians were so scarce in England that they were impressed by government order, as in more recent times seamen had to suffer in like manner. Henry VIII. also issued warrants for the impressment of children with good voices for the choirs of the cathedrals, and in Elizabeth's time children with the proper qualification for her majesty's choirs were taken from their parents without any compensation being given to the latter."

He Could Prove It.

"How long can a human being exist without air?"
"For at least four hours."
"Quit your kidding. I'm asking a plain question, and I expect a serious answer."

"I'm giving it to you. I have proved to my own satisfaction, and very recently, that a human being can live four hours when absolutely deprived of air."

"You're a fool. A boy can stay under water for two minutes if he has strong lungs. Even an amphibious animal can—"

"Oh, cut that. I've proved it. I rode from here to Buffalo in the upper berth of a sleeping car the other night. And I was taken out alive. I can prove it!" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Grant's Quick Wit.

Once during the civil war, when Grant was in subordinate command, he was reconnoitering alone near the enemy's lines. Suddenly he found himself confronted by one of the Confederates pickets, who was for arresting him. "Sho! Sho!" said Grant, with the utmost coolness. "Can't you see I am reconnoitering in the enemy's uniform? Don't make a noise. I shall be back directly." And he walked away quietly until out of the picket's sight, then ran as nimbly as he could.

Dust in One's Eyes.

To "cast dust into one's eyes" perfectly explains itself. It is, however, interesting to know that Epaminondas at the battle of Tegen defeated the Spartans by masking his movements with a large body of cavalry. He caused the horsemen to gallop to and fro in front of the enemy in such a way as to raise a cloud of dust and so veiled the movements of his infantry and enabled them to take up a new and more advantageous position.

His Way.

"Blinks apparently likes sea food in his sport."
"What do you mean?"
"If he goes for a row he invariably catches a crab, and if he motors his car always turns turtle."—Baltimore American.

The Answer.

"I tell you, society is to blame for the criminal. Why are the majority of convicts in prison?"
"I think very likely because they can't get out."—Baltimore American.

A Subtle Hint.

Lady Tourist—The sphinx hasn't spoken in 5,000 years. Her husband—Darling, try to be like her just for a day.—New York Globe.

Let thy speech be better than silence or be silent.—Dionysius.

Two Travelers.

Largely as a matter of experiment a gentleman determined to ascertain how thoroughly he could familiarize himself with a country by means of maps and books of description. To make the case as difficult as possible he chose Madagascar, of which to that moment he had no knowledge except of a most general character. He pursued this inquiry diligently and with increasing relish. At the end of four or five years a man who had just returned from Madagascar came into his office. The conversation naturally turned upon the island whence this man had come. The traveler finally asked, "When were you last in Madagascar?" "I have never been there," was the response. "Why," exclaimed the other, "you know more about it than I do." A similar story is told of Von Humboldt, who never saw Jerusalem, but produced a thoroughly reliable account of the Holy City. The traveler has often discovered that the persons who apparently know least about a place are those who have lived in it all their days.—Christian Advocate.

Prophetic Bells.

At 2 a. m. on Sept. 27, 1899, the world famous clock in the great cathedral at Strassburg commenced to chime without rhyme or reason. It sounded 1,870 peals, then stopped, and after an interval slowly began to toll as if for a great one dead. The political atmosphere of Europe at that time was indicative of profound peace. Nothing of danger or disgrace could by any possibility be conceived of as threatening Strassburg or its inhabitants. Yet less than a year afterward the German armies had encircled the city with a ring of steel and fire. The German shells were falling thickly in her streets and squares and exploding even within the precincts of the stately cathedral itself. And precisely at 2 a. m., Sept. 27, 1870, General Ulrich signed the capitulation which was to deliver Strassburg into the hands of the invaders.

The Curious Limpet.

The limpets are a curious kind of shellfish. They resemble the abalones in their habits. The interior is made of the most brilliant colors, bronze and iridescent hues predominating. They are found on the west coast of Mexico and are so large that the people use them for wash basins. They are ferocious animals and prey with great voracity on clams. The process seems slow, but the limpet always gets there. He gets his cover over the unsuspecting clam and puts his big foot on his shell, generally on a weak spot. Then he whips out a long, wiry tongue and proceeds to bore a hole in his captive. When this is done the shell flies open, and the limpet is free to feast on the poor clam's carcass. He eats but a part and leaves the rest for the fishes of the sea.

How Canada Was Named.

According to an eminent authority, when the Portuguese under Gaspar Cortereal in 1500 first ascended the St. Lawrence they believed it to be the strait of which they were in quest, through which a passage might be discovered into the Indian sea. When, however, they arrived at the point where they could clearly ascertain that this was no strait, but a river, they exclaimed repeatedly in their disappointment, "Ca nada," ("Here nothing"). These words, remembered by the natives, were repeated to the next Europeans who visited the land. The newcomers, hearing the phrase so frequently, conjectured that it must be the name of the country, so "Canada" it remains.

Earthquake Gowns.

In 1750 there was a great earthquake in England, and Horace Walpole records that "several women have made 'earthquake gowns'—that is, warm gowns to sit out of doors all night." Walpole also tells that "Turner, a great china man at the corner of the next street, had a jar cracked by the shock. He originally asked 10 guineas for the jar. He now asks 20, because it is the only jar in Europe that had been cracked by an earthquake."

An Unnecessary Sacrifice.

Reginald—I love you, Madeline. For you I would give up family, position, wealth—
Madeline—Half a minute, Reginald. Giving up family is all right. I don't want a mother-in-law. Give up your position if you can get a better one, but please hold on to your wealth. We may need it.
He took her advice.—New York Telegraph.

Born to Luck.

"This is the third time you have been here for food," said the woman at the kitchen door to the tramp. "Are you always out of work?"
"Yes'm," replied the itinerant. "I guess I was born under a lucky star."
—Yonkers Statesman.

Perfectly Plain.

"So you're hungry, eh?" Smythe said to a beggar one day.
"Yes, boss," the beggar replied. "I ain't had nothing to eat for three days."
"Well," said Smythe, "that's why you're hungry, ma'am!"

Cunning and Knavery.

Cunning leads to knavery. It is but a step from one to the other, and that very slippery. Lying only makes the difference. Add that to cunning, and it is knavery.—Bruyere.

It takes ten pounds of common sense to carry one pound of learning.—Persian Proverb.
