The Tillamook Headlight,

Editorial Snap Shots.

The cheese makers who won the loving cups will, of course, fill them up with Christmas "cheer" and invite their friends to partake of some well known bread that tickles the appetite.

Before another issue of the Headlight is issued Christmas will have come and gone, so we take this opportunity of wishing our readers the compliments of the season and a happy new year, with the hope that Democratic tariff tinkering won't put everything on the bum.

It is impossible to please everybody when it comes to making public improvements. In fact, if it came to waiting until everybody's consent was obtained nothing would be done, and as the spirit of fault finding is in the air, it is not surprising to hear that the city improvements are to be thrashed out in the courts.

In the death of George Eichenor the county has lost an upright, industrious, model young man, who was respected on account of these admirable traits of character. When we see so many indolent young men loafing around, apparently with no object in life, it is a mystery how an industrious young man's life is so suddenly cut off. George was a good and true young man, and this sad bereavement and another link broken in the family circle adds to the heartfelt sympathy the citizens have for the sorrowing parents and relatives.

Before the soap shot man takes a few cracks, are there any other citizens who want to stand sponsor for the city administration which allowed the Sunday trading department saloon to get started here? Let the chips fly where they may, no harm can come of placing the responsibility where it belongs. But we are told that it was such an excellent administration. Yes, but not in the eyes of four out of the five saloon keepers, who "beefed" because it was one-sided, favoring the other fellow, who wouldn't comply with the law when the county was "dry" and won't do so now it is "wet."

The address of Deputy Dairy and Food Commissioner E. T. Judd on Saturday was interesting so far as the advice he gave teaching on the sanitary conditions of the farm and the barn and the care of milk, which cannot too often be impressed upon dairymen, for herein lies the whole secret of a pure and wholesome article placed upon the market. No matter how perfect the sanitary conditions may be about a cheese factory, and how much care and practical experience there may be used in the manufacture of cheese, the milk must be clean and wholesome. Mr. Judd's address was another proof that anyone who is not acquainted with local conditions in Tillamook are not in a position to give the dairymen practical advice as to how dairying should be carried on in this county, for soil and weather conditions are different here to most other sections of the country.

The matter of fire protection is something that every business man and property owner should be highly interested in, for the first thing to do in fighting fire is to have everything in readiness. It seems that the Hose Company has decreased in numbers that there are now only sufficient members to man one hose cart. It is also said that the pressure in the water system is cut down. It is true that the city has been exceedingly fortunate in not having any serious fires of late, and it may be that on account of this that a certain amount of laxity have crept in. With buildings increasing and becoming more congested, the risk of fire becomes greater, and for that reason there should be increased vigilance in having everything in readiness whenever the fire alarm is sounded. The boys who have kept the hose company together for many years are deserving of a good deal of credit, but the business men must take a little more interest in the volunteer fire fighters.

When anyone publishes or makes a statement that our editorials are "inspired" no one can blame us for taking up the gauntlet thrown down by F. R. Beals in defending our honor and character from such an untruthful charge as that. We challenge Mr. Beals or anyone else to prove it. It is true that we have at times consulted with some of our citizens on matters of public policy and defended the names and characters of some of our best citizens when a little sneak used to write a whole lot of venomous matter and publish it under an assumed name, Mr. Beals being one of the persons attacked in those scurrilous letters and inspired articles. But the point which we take exception to is that Mr. Beals not only brings into ques-

After the Picnic.

One of the first speeches made by Mr. Wilson after his nomination last summer was at a rural gathering in New Jersey. "Here we are at a farmers' picnic," he said, "and on this day I suppose we might say that the farmers occupy the center of the stage in our politics. I have seen the interests of a great many classes specially regarded in legislation, but I must frankly say that I seldom see the interests of the farmer regarded in legislation." As governor of New Jersey, the state of monumental favors to inflated corporations, the farmer may seem a small figure in business. But there are forty-seven other states, chiefly much larger in area. They know more than Mr. Wilson seems to know about the homestead law passed by the Republican party early in its history, about many other laws to promote agriculture, irrigation, rural free delivery, protection and development of native production, crops doubled in a decade, and other accomplished facts of the same sort.

Starting with the fancy that American farmers have been overlooked in national politics Mr. Wilson draws further upon his imagination by adding: "And one of the greatest impositions upon the farmers of this country that has ever been devised is the present tariff legislation of the United States." Mr. Wilson is an academic free trader, and now in a special position to urge upon Congress the passage of a free-trade law. He has already told the farmers that a protective tariff is one of the greatest impositions that have afflicted them, and they have been crowded away from the center of the stage to their loss and neglect. Look out now for a great farm uplift from this professor lately emerged from the classic shades of a college where political economy is taught in books and the woes of the downtrodden farmers are learned by instinct. Mr. Wilson is about to put his horny handed vigor to the plow and drive his furrows straight and deep. It will be another farmers' picnic and undoubtedly a novel, if not enjoyable season.

A new church is said to have a creed resembling a political platform. If like a Democratic platform it will be merely a flourish of the outs to be discarded when they get to be ins.

Mr. Underwood says the tariff is to be revised from agate to zinc. This is the bugle note before the fray. The special session next year may end with agate still shivering on the doorstep.

An incubator said to have been used by George Washington was made in 1712. If the Father of the Country had ever tried a contrivance of that kind he would not have been satisfied with one made twenty years before he was born, nor would Benjamin Franklin have failed to originate something better.

A lecturer blames trusts upon New Jersey's loose incorporation laws. This trouble, whatever its extent, is just the same as when Woodrow Wilson was elected governor.

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture has lived in Washington for more than forty years. The shrewdest politicians in the land concede this to be a remarkable feat.

Night.

Who brings darkness?
 Thou, Oh, Night,
 Thou that drives
 Away the Light.
 And swiftly over
 The clouds so white
 Comes the darkness
 Of Thee Oh, Night.
 The stars add moon
 Shines out so bright,
 And Silence reigns
 With Thee Oh, Night.
 You come with a voice
 That is clear and deep,
 And sing the birds
 And men to sleep.
 Written by Elizabeth Griggs, when nine years old.

Keep Abreast of the Times

IN OLDEN DAYS, when buying a cook stove, people would buy the one they could get the cheapest; that's because there were only a few makes on the market and were all practically the same in construction and material.

Majestic Ranges stand the test And Cook and Bake and are the best.

It's Different Now! There are close to a thousand different ranges on the market today—good, bad and indifferent. Wise people use a little foresight in selecting their range, and they make no mistake in selecting THE RANGE WITH A REPUTATION—the range that is recommended by every user; the range that has stood the test—

The Great Majestic Range

the range that is made of MALLEABLE and CHARCOAL IRON—the range that SAVES FUEL—LASTS LONGER—COSTS PRACTICALLY NOTHING FOR REPAIRS—HEATS MORE WATER QUICKER AND HOTTER, and GIVES BETTER GENERAL SATISFACTION THAN ANY OTHER RANGE MADE—and we can prove it!
