

THE CHEESE SCORING CONTEST.

Good Interest Taken—List of Prize Winners.

The cheese scoring contest on Saturday, which was arranged by the Tillamook County Creamery Association, created considerable interest among the cheese makers, the est amongst the cheese factories, and the cooperative cheese factories, and the dairymen. The committee having the matter in hand was composed of George Williams, Carl Haberlach and F. W. Christensen, and everything was carried out satisfactorily. There were a large number of entries and beside this there was a nice display of Tillamook's famous cheese in the rooms of the Tillamook Commercial Club, where the contest was held. To make it pleasant for the visitors and those interested in the contest while the scoring was proceeding the committee had arranged a program. President Shrode, of the Commercial Club, was the first to speak, and his remarks were confined to a speech of welcome and commending the cheese scoring contest. Mrs. F. W. Christensen played an instrumental piece, Mrs. D. A. Mackenzie rendered a vocal solo, Mrs. L. L. Baker gave a recitation and James Hiner also rendered a solo, all of whom received hearty applause, and as the scorers had not completed their task they were called upon again to entertain the audience, which they did in their usual pleasant and pleasing way. It was no easy task that the scorers had to perform, for the reason that the make up of the cheese is more uniform, especially the factories which are under the supervision of F. W. Christensen, the inspector and cheese grader. The scorers were E. T. Judd, Deputy Dairy and Food Commissioner; O. Friedl, of Portland, and C. Christensen, formerly a local cheese maker. Mr. Judd was the speaker for the afternoon and touched upon many matters pertaining to dairying. He made a point of sanitary conditions about the barn, recommending that they be well lighted and ventilated, remarking that no cheese maker could make good cheese if the milk was not taken care of and cooled off immediately or contaminated with germs which originated from the manure pile or other putrid matter about the farm or barn. That is where improvements were needed, and as it looked as though the whey would be all disposed of to one concern before long the bacteria from the whey tanks would be eliminated. With better sanitary conditions he did not see why we could not make a better grade of cheese than that produced in Wisconsin. He also recommended that when grass becomes scarce it was a good thing to have good fodder, such as kahl and roots to supply the shortage of green feed, for in that way it would keep up the flow of milk. Mr. Judd paid the dairymen a compliment for the manner in which they had organized for the marketing of their cheese.

The ten receiving the highest scores, each of whom received a prize, were as follows:

Who's Who in Panama?

Sir Edward Grey's official communication of the British protest of proposed Panama Canal regulation and control has reached Washington and been taken up in cabinet council. No decision was reached in the cabinet meeting, the paper being referred to Secretary of State Knox, who is to prepare a formal answer which will be made the subject of cabinet consideration. Washington dispatches say that the tone of Secretary Knox's reply will be as pacific as is that of the British protest. The fact is hardly worth stating, since it can go without the saying that a belligerent exchange of opinions is not warranted in the discussion of a question which, however, diverging may be the points of view from which it is seen by the participants, can never result in belligerent action.

The points of view in this case certainly diverge widely. The protest is against the action of the United States Government which will admit the passage, through the canal, free of tolls, of vessels engaged in our Atlantic and Pacific coastwise trade. The British minister makes an excellent use of poor material. Predicting his entire case upon the assumption that discrimination in the laying of tolls is expressly provided against in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty of a few years prior to our acquirement of sovereignty in the canal zone. He proceeds in reason that to levy tolls upon commerce passing through the canal in all foreign ships, while leaving vessels plying in the coastwise trade of the United States to pass free, would be to place the cost of building the canal, and of its maintenance, upon foreigners. What we gather from Sir Edward's contention on this point is that he thinks the accumulating tolls levied upon foreign commerce using the canal would, in time, equal the entire interest and sinking funds of the debt. Since the debts and the interest must be paid, and our government has not only made itself responsible for the payment but has done all of the work, that contention is tantamount to one that, in financial enterprises, preferred stockholders, paying more for their shares, are entitled to no guarantees not enjoyed by the holders of common coming in at a much lower price. It would put first mortgage bondholders on a par with the holders of debenture bonds. Acknowledging the debt, and the necessity of payment, the pith of the British position is that those who have created the tangible property from the proceeds of the debt, and are charged with its administration, shall have no compensating advantages for their greater burdens and responsibilities.

This new and rather strange idea is worth a closer analysis. The protest of the foreigners against building the canal, and carrying its interest charges, made by Sir Edward Grey estops them, equitably, from protesting against the management of the property by others who have assumed all the risks and brought success out of the failures of such foreigners as had once undertaken the task. It can be said, further, that since there was no obligation upon foreigners to build the canal, neither is there any obligation upon them to use it. That they will not use it unless they find its use profitable to them is as plain as the various tricks and devices through which, Sir Edward Grey says, the discriminatory toll regulations could be avoided. There is no question for submission to the Hague Tribunal, which Sir Edward names as a last resort, unless it might be the interpretation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which we have a right to interpret for ourselves according to the dictates of equity and sense, and in pursuance of many precedents in English history.

MUCH BITULITHIC LAID IN ALBANY DURING SUMMER.

Season's Contracts Will Aggregate Sixty-three Blocks.

ALBANY, Oregon, Dec. 11, 1912.—Over 60 blocks of Bitulithic Pavement are being completed this year. The people are much pleased with gravel bitulithic, as used, and are looking forward to a long period free from repairs as Bitulithic has an excellent reputation for wearing. Albany is now on a par with any city in the country as to the quality of its paved streets.

What is an armistice? All Europe is looking up the word and finds the dictionaries defective.

Los Angeles reports eleven automobile casualties in one day. Maybe aeroplanes next year will be less risky than venturing out of doors on foot.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Thou hast given a banner to them that fear that it may be displayed because of the truth. Psal. 68: 4. Time of Prayer—Noontide each day.

It is always noontide somewhere, and across the wakening continents. From shore to shore, somewhere our prayers are rising evermore.

Our Badge. A knot of white ribbon; our methods, preventive, educational, evangelistic, social and legal; our watchwords, agitate, educate and organize.

Why do we wear the white ribbon? It is the beautiful badge of an organization, heaven born, to promote a holy cause. It is the bond of fellowship among our members.

It is a privilege of which we are proud. It is a plea for purity of life. It is a pledge of total abstinence. It preaches the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

It proclaims the gospel of peace. It is a prayer for home protection. It predicts a safe path for children's feet.

It is an emblem of patriotism. It is a protest against the drink habit.

It is a promise of hope to the temp'ed and help to the suffering. It prophesies the coming of Christ's kingdom in all hearts, all homes and all governments.

Let us wear the white ribbon and follow its gleam.

The Bible on civic duty.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" is the whimpering cry of Cain. It is the cry of every moral coward in the world. Every man who sets his heart to do wrong to his brother or his neighbor straight way disclaims any responsibility for his brother's welfare and justifies the cruel wrong which he does him with the cowardly cry of Cain. The individual who manufactures, sells, or in any other way provides intoxicating drink to his neighbor knowing that it will do him both physical and moral harm, does it in the spirit of Cain. For his wicked act there is no defense, so he defiantly repudiates his obligation to do good, and not harm to his neighbor, and puts himself forever in the class of the first murderer. Taken from the final chapter in the great debate, Does the Bible stand for prohibition and abstinence. By Rev. E. L. Eaton, D. D. and Geo. G. Brown.

The quickest way to excite Democratic incivility is to mention civil service.

An up to date navy is urged as a war preventive, and it is undoubtedly one of the best, if not at the head of the list.

Last year Japan spent $600,000,000 on military aeroplanes, the United States $11,000,000. Carry the news to the Democratic House.

Some of the big European powers speak of themselves as peacemakers. Their increasing army and navy budgets don't exactly look it.

Rear Admiral Wainwright remarks that "Many believe in the navy as something that gratifies the pride but has little to do with the real business of life." The Democratic House omits even the pride.

Mr. Carnegie is said to have planned a final gift of $475,000,000 through his philanthropic trustees. This is about the size of Uncle Sam's investment in the Panama Canal, which also suggests peace on earth, good will to man.

Secretary of the Treasury McNeagh, in the annual report of the operations of his department, just transmitted to Congress renews his earlier urging of an improved banking system. There can be no denial of the necessity of improvement in the present system, and the secretary can not even be charged with exaggeration in saying that the Federal Government, so long as the present faulty system is retained, will be responsible for the commercial, financial and industrial disasters which flow from panics. But the desirability of having a better system being generally disapproving for the business world to find that the secretary sees only the end but not the means. The present system promotes and develops panics, he declares, but he seems to offer nothing more than glittering generalities by way of providing a better one. The revision of the law, he says, should, aside from affording flexible and elastic currency and reserves, bring the banks into an organized co-operation and provide for a central agency through which they can work free of political or trust control.
