

DEATH OF JOHN JOHNSON

Another Tillamook Pioneer Passes Away at Garibaldi.

Death claimed another of the early pioneers of Tillamook County on Tuesday, when John Johnson responded to the last call. It is not known exactly what time he died, as he was found dead in bed at his home at Garibaldi early that morning. The deceased had been failing in health for several months, but no one thought the end was so near. He died on the homestead he took up in 1871. The deceased was one of those who had voted for Lincoln, and attended a Republican meeting in this city last fall voting for President Taft at the general election.

The remains were buried this (Thursday) at the Bar View Cemetery.

The G. A. R. had charge of the services at the grave and religious services at the house was conducted by Rev. Kiehl, of Bay City.

Captain Romulus Johnson, father of John Johnson, was one of the best known of the mariners plying an ocean craft between New York and Liverpool during the fore part of the last century, a sturdy son of England and a natural follower of the sea. Nevertheless, in his younger days the captain was equally at home in shouldering arms, and in this capacity served in the war of 1812 under the American flag. He married Anna Johnson, a native daughter of Denmark who accompanied her husband on many of his ocean voyages. March 27, 1830, while his ship was in New York harbor, his oldest child, John, was born. Besides him there were three daughters. It happened that Captain Johnson changed his course in 1845 and made a trip to Hamburg, Germany, and while there he died, while yet in the prime of life, and the height of popularity as a sea captain.

After the death of his father, when the son was thirteen years of age John Johnson remained with his mother in Germany until her marriage to John H. Glashoff in 1848. He then came to America and settled her affairs in Albany, N. Y., after which he went to Fond du Lac county, from there to Racine county. Here he attended the public schools for three years, and, being pleased with 1849, was increasingly interested in the discovery of gold on the coast. An opportunity came his way in 1852, and he crossed in the same train with his uncle, having two yoke of oxen of his own, and a complete outfit. Leaving Calumet, Wis., April 4, he arrived in Marysville, Cal., after a journey of six months, during which time his party experienced terrible deprivations, and suffered from cholera and Indian outbreaks. In 1851 he was a member of the vigilance committee in San Francisco. That Mr. Johnson remained in the vicinity of Placerville for eight years argues a fair measure of success as a miner, and a particular liking for that means of making a livelihood. In 1859, in company with one hundred men, he started on an expedition into Arizona. Indians stampeded and stole their horses, and from Fort Yuma they had the protection of the United States Cavalry. A pan yielding $18 was all the gold they secured. In 1861 he went to the Elk City mines of Idaho, but returned to Portland in the winter of 1861-62 and engaged in teaming until 1871.

From Portland Mr. Johnson came to Tillamook county and located on his present place of one hundred and sixty acres, where he farmed and raised stock for many years and where he died. He had seen much of the pioneer life of the west, had practically grown up with the country, and had a hand in many of its dearly won battles. As a private he enlisted in Company D, First Oregon Infantry, and served under Captain Powell on the frontier and at Fort Hall, being discharged after a service of eighteen months. He belonged to Tillamook Post, G. A. R., and at the reunions of the company always had many interesting stories to tell of his border days which are now a matter of history. In politics Mr. Johnson was a Republican, and he had served as school director, and as road supervisor for three terms. In 1872 Mr. Johnson married Mary Rose, who was born in New York State, November 7, 1832. Charles A. Johnson the only child of this union is assessor of Tillamook county. In Wisconsin and Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were members and active workers in the Methodist Church.

Washington hears that President Taft has decided to accept the offer of the Kent professorship of law at Yale University and if so will take up his duties next spring. He will not be restricted to lecturing to Yale students.

Now that the governor of Arkansas emptied the Penitentiary he might offer the vacant building to a consumers' league for the storage of eggs pro bono publico. The Legislature should at least make an appropriation to keep down the cobwebs.

A poor wretch has surrendered himself at Springfield, Ill., and confessed to having taken $25 from the safe of a great trust corporation some years ago. His conscience troubled him. This increases the wonder of why it is that conscience afflicts only poor offenders. The corporation from which this money was taken has several times been indicted for extortion and none of its officers has ever confessed anything which was proved.

Denial that he had any idea of partisan advantage in mind when he placed the fourth-class postmasters in the civil service is contained in a message from President Taft to Congress. He declared he had deeply regretted the failure of Congress to respond to his repeated request for authority to place all local offices under the civil service and thus to end the evils of the spoils system. He advocated the admission to cabinet members to sit in Congress with right to debate, but not to vote; the legislation for coal land leases in Alaska and authorizing of a court to review food law decisions.

GREEK STRATAGEM.

Military Tactics That Won Where Strength Was Lacking.

After the decline of Rome the center of the world's military progress was for seven or eight centuries transferred to the Greek empire. Constantinople ruled elements of a much less homogeneous nature than Rome in her prime had depended upon. There was less loyalty to the central rule there and far less liberty under it.

The decisive military fact of the east was, however, that Byzantium had to contend against overwhelming numerical superiority in its enemies. South of it, from the Indies to the Atlantic, was the Saracene empire, burning with the zeal of a new religion. To the east were the Seljuk Turks, while to the north were the Bulgarians and the Slavonian and Hunic tribes.

Against such odds it was useless simply to match man for man. The military leaders of the empire were full of military spirit and took keen delight in war as a game, but they were the descendants of Ulysses, and they made of war a game of finesse, of cleverness—in short, a war of wits. By their spying and bribes, by stirring up treason in the enemy's camp, by surprises, simulated retreats and ambush, they illustrated the saying of Bacon that stratagem is a weaker kind of policy used by those who are not strong enough to win by fairer methods.—Edward D. Jones in Engineering Magazine.

THE GAME OF GOLF.

It is a Very Serious Matter With the Real Scot Enthusiast.

In Fife and the Lothians every one plays golf—men of leisure, workingmen and loafers, the last class producing the finest players. Many of the Scotch towns have public courses, and even where they are private the artisan clubs may use them on generous terms. Says Stewart Dick in "The Pageant of the Forth."

"There is something very Scotch about the Scotch golfer. He seems to suit the leisurely and contemplative game. 'Keep your eye on the ball,' 'Slow back' and 'Aye be up' are written all over him. As a nation one would say the Scotch were professional, the English amateur, golfers, for there should be nothing dilettante about the game of golf.

"How serious a matter it is may be judged from the old story of the Scotch minister. Emerging after a hot and unhalloved strife in the bunker, his profane words still echoing in his ears, he mops his heated brow and exclaims bitterly:

"'Ah maun gie it up! Ah maun gie it up!'

"'What?' cries his partner in consternation. 'Gie up golf?'

"'No,' he replies, with sublime scorn; 'gie up the meenstry!'

"This is the real old golfing spirit which still survives round the shores of the Forth."

The Peacock at Home.

The real home of peacocks or peafowls is in India. There they were and are hunted, and their flesh is used for food. As the birds live in the same region as the tiger, peacock hunting is a very dangerous sport. The long train of the peacock is not its tall, as many suppose, but is composed of feathers which grow out just above the tail and are called the tail coverts. Peacocks have been known for many hundred years. They are mentioned in the Bible. Job mentions them, and they are mentioned, too, in 1 Kings x. Hundreds of years ago in Rome many thousands peacocks were killed for the great feasts which the emperors made. The brains of the peacock were considered a great treat, and many had to be killed for a single feast.

The Mystery of Sleep.

It is impossible to give any precise explanation of the phenomenon of sleep. Yet many theories have been advanced. Legendre has shown by fairly conclusive arguments that it is due neither to "brain pallor," nor to intoxication by carbonic acid, nor to the presence of narcotic substances in the blood, theories that have been in turn advanced. Legendre intimates his preference for the view that sleep is not the result of fatigue, but is an inherited instinct designed to protect the organism against the ill effects of fatigue.—Harper's.

A man had sixty ducks for sale and divided them into two lots of thirty each. One lot was to be disposed of at three for $1 and the other at two for $1. In his absence his clerk sold the sixty ducks at five for $2, realizing the sum of $24. If sold according to instructions one purchaser would have got thirty ducks for $15 and the other thirty for $10, making $25 for the lot. What became of the missing dollar?
