

Financial Growth.

A large, strong bank does not lose dignity or conservatism when it encourages the small depositor.

The large balances of the future are having their beginnings to-day in modest accumulations.

We want to place within the reach of all, the privileges of an association with a strong, helpful bank. No serious minded person who has a regular income and a desire to conserve it, need hesitate to become a depositor here.

Sheriff Crenshaw had James Smith and Floyd Wilson, son of James Wilson, arrested in Portland on Monday. It seems that Smith decoyed Wilson out of the county, who drew $70.00 from the bank before he left. They went out by way of Astoria. Hosford and Charles Nelson. The Portland & Tillamook Corporation will be dissolved and Mr. Branstetter, as the sole owner, will dispose of the vessel to Mr. Doe and eventually it is expected that she will sail under the colors of the North Pacific fleet. Two routes are said to be under consideration for her, one being between Coos Bay and Eureka, connecting at Eureka with the steamer Kilburn from San Francisco, and at Coos Bay with the Alliance from Portland. Another run talked of is on the Southern California coast, probably from San Pedro or San Diego to Mexican ports.

SLICK SWINDLER.

Obtains the $10 Subscribed by U. B. Church.

On Monday a strange man went to the Rev. I. E. Meese, pastor of the U. B. Church, and stating that he represented City Marshal Myers, asked for the $10 which the U. B. church had subscribed toward the relief of Mrs. Dudley and children. He claimed that they were leaving the city that day and wanted the money before doing so. The reverent gentleman hesitated at first, but told the stranger to write out a receipt, after which the money was turned over. Mr. Meese cannot give the officers a description of the man, so they are baffled in tracing him, and how he came to find that the money had not been paid. The receipt is as follows:

Tillamook, Ore., Jan. 27. Received of Rev. Meese Ten Dollars, payment in full for U. B. Church, for lady whose husband was killed by train.

LOSS IS $150,000 TO THE P. R. & N.

Passenger Service will be Resumed Friday or Saturday, Perhaps.

Fate willing, the Pacific Railway and Navigation Company's line between Portland and Tillamook will resume operation tomorrow or on Saturday for the first time in five weeks, for it was the heavy rain and wind storm that swept the Pacific Coast on the night of December 28 and continued for several days which put the railroad out of commission. This was followed by other heavy rain storms during the month of January, and it was only the last week that the weather took a change and the rain ceased. This road has been the victim of the most harrowing series of misfortunes that has ever befallen an Oregon line.

Since the first slides and wash-outs of the present period of disturbance which began during the holidays the company has suffered damage to roadbed, track and other property which will aggregate at least calculation $100,000, and will probably come closer to $150,000, according to estimates made over a week ago by General Superintendent D. W. Campbell and Division Engineer F. L. Burkhalter. This is entirely outside the loss of traffic both freight and passenger, and means that the company's loss through the hostile play of the elements in one single month has amounted to, roughly speaking, 3 per cent of the original cost of building the line.

In speaking of the repeated difficulties which have been encountered in trying to keep the line in operation this winter, Mr. Campbell said a week ago last Monday: "Few people realize the hardships we have been up against in battling with the storms and other forces of nature. We have done the very best we could under circumstances and conditions that have been extraordinary, to say the least. The road is new and is through a country where almost any kind of a storm is apt to interfere with operation of trains until the road is well worn down."

"The task of keeping men at work clearing the line and making repairs has been no small one. Imagine what it is to be working up in the mountains far from civilization, day in and day out, in mud and slush knee deep most of the time, and you will have some idea of what we have been up against. I have been surprised at the loyal way in which our men have stood by us, and we hope to be able to get the line open clear through from Portland to the coast not later than Wednesday. We may possibly get through tomorrow. We are going to try it, anyway."

An enormous amount of freight, baggage and mail has accumulated during the weeks the line has been out of commission.

The Cheese Situation.

Cheese is not moving very fast, but from all accounts Portland and other coast markets are getting rid of their surplus stocks and will soon be in the market for more. There are about 800 cases November cheese left in the country and it is expected that this will be moved out within the next two weeks. Anyway, the cheese should all be moved before new cheese comes in in large quantities this spring. The price remains at 16 1/2 cents Tillamook, which is a good price. We understand one of the independent factories sold their cheese at 15 1/2 cents for balance of last season, but this is lower than the co-operatives have sold any cheese. It seems that the high prices prevailing in cheese the past year has caused a mushroom growth of factories in different parts of the northwest especially in the state of Washington, and all of these are now factors in the market.

The make for past season will be higher than first supposed. Carl Haberlach says that his sale will be over 3,200,000 lbs. and should bring in over $25,000, unless the market declines further, which of course is uncertain. The highest gain was at the Maple Leaf factory, which had 735,000 lbs. more milk than the year before and it also sent some of its milk to another factory during the flush season. Central factory made a gain of 462,000 lbs. or 72 per cent.

A Cougar Story.

B. J. Stephens and Al. Perry were up on the former's homestead on Monday, and on their return they gave out the information that they had been attacked by a cougar. Bert made all possible haste to shoot the ferocious animal as their lives were in danger. Loading his gun, the shell jammed, and having no time to lose Bert used the butt end of his gun on the animal and beat out its brains, while Al climbed a tree in moral fear that the cougar would attack him and send him to David Jones' locker. The cougar, so they claim, measured 11 feet 2 inches. After the mortal encounter was over both hurried to the shanty in the darkness and locked themselves in where they felt safe from further attacks of the large number of cougars which were prowling around the homestead that night. The Headlight man is reliably informed that they became horribly scared after dark and next morning they found that instead of a cougar they had been in mortal combat with it was a bob tailed squirrel measuring 11 inches. Bert looked at Al and Al looked at Bert as they beheld the poor little victim on the ground, when Bert remarked, "Say, Al, don't say a word about this; they'll jolly the life out of us if you give it away." Al promised that he would hold his whist, but he squealed. Next, please.
