

NEW FIRE MAP of Tillamook City Received.

INSURANCE SURVEYOR VISITS OUR TOWN.

On Thursday C. P. Bandin, insurance surveyor of the Pacific Department of the Sanborn Map Co. arrived in the city for the purpose of making a complete revised map of Tillamook City, which will be the forerunner of a reduction in the insurance rates for Tillamook County, and will save thousands of dollars annually to our citizens. Mr. Bandin, who will be here about three weeks, will make his headquarters at the office of Rollie W. Watson. Mr. Watson has been endeavoring for some time past to have the fire map of Tillamook City revised and it has been through the earnest solicitation of Mr. Watson that Mr. Bandin was sent to our relief.

(Editorial from TILLAMOOK HERALD, October 18th.)

THE DETAILS OF THIS FIRE MAP.

An up-to-date Fire Insurance Map of Tillamook City has been received at this office. The purpose of this map is to locate correctly all risks that Fire Insurance Companies assume. The map of this city contains to full page sections, shows all buildings, giving data in each instance covering class of construction, location, height and outside plans, construction of flues and chimneys, exposures of buildings and distance between each. There is also complete information covering the water pipe lines, hydrants, stand-pipes, connected hose in buildings, location of Fire Apparatus, condition and character of the paratus. The source of water supply and etc.

We will be pleased to show you this new map and explain any other detail in regard to Insurance.

If there is such a thing as an organized "white slave" traffic in this country, the decision of the United States Supreme Court on Monday will arm the officers of the law with full powers to soon extirpate it, if such powers are vigorously used. The court decided, in a case coming up from the New Orleans Circuit, that the interstate commerce law applies to such a traffic as fully as to any other, when it can be shown that it is organized for profit and uses interstate lines of travel and communication to further its ends.

The case grew out of the transportation of a number of women for alleged immoral purposes, from New Orleans to Beaumont, Tex. The "state rights" contention had been set up by the defendants, but the court, in the opinion delivered by Justice McKenna, is evidently of opinion that state wrongs, masking as state rights, can not be made paramount to public decency. The decision seems to rest more upon a basis of public policy than upon any interpretation of the interstate commerce law's meaning and intent.

A concentration of troops at Galveston can have no other meaning than the one officially expressed at Washington. The movement was made in anticipation of the early coming of a new administration to be charged with the duty the Taft administration relinquished on Tuesday last. It was a part of the evident policy of Mr. Taft in leaving all matters of purely executive work in as complete as possible for his successor to take up. When this is understood the act acquires a larger significance than it could have without such an understanding that, in spite of assertions made by the Huerta Government in Mexico of its ability to protect foreign residents of that country, their danger not only remains but grows. This increase in the armed power of the United States near Mexican borders must have been made in view of an increasing possibility of their employment at an early date.

James Irwin.

James Irwin, who last Friday, February 21, was laid to rest in the A. F. and A. M. cemetery, was born in Fermanagh, Parish of Aughalaugher, Ireland, in 1851.

At the age of 14, with his parents he came to America and located in Canada, near Marmora, Ontario. There he acquired an academic education, being especially proficient in mathematics.

After finishing school James taught a number of terms in the public schools of his adopted country, giving universal satisfaction and displaying the rare thoroughness which was such a striking characteristic of his whole life. There was no faltering nor hesitating in anything he understood. Like the Old Guard at Waterloo, he never acknowledged defeat, but, when reverses came he sprang undaunted into the fray and pressed on to final victory.

After his experience in teaching he and his brother George engaged in farming in Canada. An August frost killed their grain and left them penniless. Disappointed, but not discouraged, they turned their faces to the west, locating in this state in 1883. They first engaged in the logging business in Tillamook county, after which they purchased Meadow Green farm, three miles above Seaside on the Necanicum river.

The only persons present at the funeral who knew James Irwin in his early life were his brother George and W. M. (Billy) Hamilton, of Gardner, Tillamook county, who attended school with James in Canada. The boyish friendship formed in school days endured through life and brought Billy two hundred miles over rough mountain roads to attend the funeral of his life-long friend.

James Irwin was a quiet, unassuming gentleman, fonder of a book than a crowd; hospitable, generous, kindly, always ready to lend a helping hand to anyone in distress, a noble generous hearted man whose friends will miss him as the years go by and who will remember him for the kindly deeds that characterized his whole life - Seaside Signal.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief-it cures. For sale by all dealers.

White Slave Law Is Declared Valid.

On the theory that traffic in women in interstate commerce may be regulated by legislation as well as the traffic in drugs or cattle, the Supreme Court of the United States upheld the validity of the federal white slave traffic law of 1910. It has been contended that this question of morality was reserved for action by the states. Justice McKenna delivered the court's opinion.

"Our dual form of government has its perplexities," said he, "state and nation having different spheres of jurisdiction, but it must be kept in mind that we are one people and the powers reserved to the states and those conferred in the nation are adopted to be exercised, whether independently or concurrently, to promote the general welfare, material and moral. This is the effect of the decisions, and surely if the facility of interstate transportation can be taken away from the demoralization of lotteries, the debasement of obscene literature, the contagion of diseased cattle or persons, the facility can be taken away from the systematic debauchery of women and more insistently, of girls."

The Supreme Court had several cases before it in which the constitutionality of the Mann act was at stake, but made its decision on the case of Effie Hoke of Beaumont, Tex., and Basilo Economides, a New Orleans saloon keeper, sentenced to six years each for illegal transportation of women from New Orleans to Beaumont. Their conviction was affirmed.

On Tuesday the Republican party passed into the opposition, having been replaced after an unusually long period of executive control, and for most of the time full congressional authority also. In what shape is the country as the Democratic party takes charge, holding both branches of Congress as well as the presidency? It must be admitted by the fair minded that no other party ever went out of power with such a favorable record, and such satisfactory working conditions for a successor. At the end of the last Democratic administration there were financial difficulties. The treasury had been struggling with a deficit for three years and had run $135,000,000 behind for this period. But the last four years shows a large excess of revenue over expenditures. At this time the treasury reports a current surplus, and it will be much augmented before the books are closed for the fiscal year, June 30, next. Financially, the change of parties puts no burden whatever on the incoming party. In all respects the treasury is in excellent running order.

HUMOROUS QUIPS

A Wasted Smile.

She looked at me and sweetly smiled.
No fairer face I'd ever seen,
As winsome as a little child,
I'll bet she wasn't past eighteen.
Her hair was golden as the sun,
Her eyes were orbs of wondrous blue.
She looked at me and smiled as one
That I might well have spoken to.

She sat alone, and so did I.
This damsel with the form divine,
Her lips were red as cherry pie,
But only once her eyes met mine.
Oh, there was glory in her face!
Her cheeks were pink as any rose.
Her every move was one of grace,
And Grecian was, I think, her nose.

I do not know the maiden's name
Nor where she got upon the car.
To tell the truth is now my aim.
I give the facts just as they are.
I only know she smiled at me
And that she smiled at me in vain.
I'm married, and, though fair was she,
I never looked her way again.

Couldn't Multiply.

Little Willie's father found his youthful son holding up one of his rabbits by the ears and saying, "How much is 7 times 7, now?"

"Pah," the father heard him say; "I knew you couldn't! Here's another one. Six times 6 is how much?"

"Why, Willie, what in the world are you doing with your rabbit?"

Willie threw down the rabbit in disgust. "I knew our teacher was lying to us," was all he said.

"Why, how?" asked his father.

"Why, she told us this morning that rabbits were the greatest multipliers in the world."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Better Left Unsaid.

Here is a case of misplaced generosity. The guilty party meant well, but her manner of showing it wasn't what you might call tactful. It was at a bridge party. Ice cream and wafers were served.

"Miss Ghyoans," urged the hostess, "do have some more ice cream."

"No, really, I—" "Oh, don't be so dainty or I'll think you don't like it."

"Well, just a mouthful." "Ah, that's right, Jane, fill Miss Ghyoans's plate for her!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Own Idea.

Two little girls became involved in a quarrel the other day which culminated in physical violence. One of the mothers took her little daughter to task very severely. Wishing to emphasize the enormity of her offense, the mother said, "It's the devil who tells you to do such naughty things."

The little girl replied between sobs, "He may have told me to pull her hair, but I thought of kicking her shins all by myself."—McCall's Magazine.

His Present.

"I don't know what to buy for my husband's birthday. He has stacks of neckties."

"Cigars?" "He gives them to his friends."

"Suspenders?" "He wears a belt. I know what I'll do. I'll buy him a ball rug and a pair of bedroom curtains."—New York Journal.

Startling.

Manager of the Breezy Burlesque Barnstormers—Isn't there some sensational stunt we could pull off here in your town, some original advertisement that would get talked about and catch the crowd? Rural Landlord—Yes; you might try paying your board in advance.—Satire.

Fairy Tales.

"Why don't papa ever tell me fairy tales, mamma?" said the little boy whose mother had just told him one.

"Oh, my son," replied the mother, "it keeps your father busy telling them to me."—Yonkers Statesman.

Strange.

"There goes Biffels. He's a good friend of mine. You have never heard him say anything unkind about me."

"I never have. And, strange to say, he knows you quite well."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Sardonic Glee.

"I've got a new attachment for the family piano," said Mr. Growcher, "and it's a wonderful improvement."

"What is it?" "A lock and key."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Explanation.

Stranger—How does it happen that your name is Smith and your mother's name is Brown?

Small Boy—Why, she married again, and I didn't.—New York Globe.

Some Shine.

Old Gent—What do you wear specs for, boy?

Boothblack—Cos I puts such a shiny shine on gentlemen's boots that it hurts me eyes.—Tit-Bits.

No Sentiment.

"I see you carry a lock of your wife's hair in your pocketbook."

"Oh, I just brought that downtown to try to match it for her."—Wisconsin State Journal.

Light Lunch.

Mr. Eskimo—What are we to have ourselves again today for lunch? Mrs. Eskimo—Light lunch, my dear. Light lunch.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Anger.

"Why did you destroy Algy's letter?" "I was tearing mad."—Philadelphia Ledger.
