ARE the size of the Paige "36" with any other car. It isn't a small car, but a big roomy comfortable, easy-riding car. It has 116 inch wheel base, 34 x 4-inch tires, deep luxurious upholstered elliptic scroll rear springs and a perfectly balanced distribution of weight that make it as able as any car you ever saw.

Paige "36" clutch is not simply a steel disc clutch but a Cork Insert Multiple Disc Clutch in oil. This clutch is one feature of Paige cars that has never been equalled for mechanical strength, control or real service. Look for this type of clutch in other motor cars and then note those of those cars. There is no better evidence of Paige "36" value than this clutch or two other features of this great car are too good to pass without mention here. The tank of the gasoline tank is one instance of the many conveniences of this car. It is carried under the dash and is filled from the outside. The break drums are so large that they insure safety of break control, being 14 inches in diameter and unusually wide.

who know motor cars recognize instantly that this Paige "36" is unequalled for value. And yet searching investigation must convince you likewise. Look at it from any angle—measure it by known standard—ride in it—drive it—the answer is the same. Paige cars are designed and men who know motor car values to the last detail—and the Paige "36" is their expression of value. The Paige "36" today enjoys the distinction of being the most remarkable motor car of the year—an achievement we are naturally quite proud of because it so truly reflects policy. PRICE, $1,390 f.o.b. Portland. We also have the Paige 25 at $1,050.

DRESSING FOR ROYALTY.

The Proper Caper When One is Invited to Windsor Castle.

Those who are invited to spend a few days with the king at Windsor are sometimes apt to be rather overcome by the grandeur they find, and an excess of shyness, something like stage fright, is in some cases the inevitable accompaniment of the first evening at the castle.

In Queen Victoria's time guests were bidden only to "dine and sleep." Therefore all they saw of their royal hostess was comprised in a few moments' conversation in the drawing room after dinner unless they happened to be near the queen at the dinner table.

This is all altered now. Guests are bidden to stop two or three days and consequently see much more of the king and queen than in former times. The question of dress always is a great problem with the ladies "commanded" to Windsor castle, for, instead of acquiring only one smart evening toilet and suitable jewels for a "dine and sleep" visit of one night, quite an outfit must be laid in for three or four days' stay. No particular dress is required on arrival, as guests are shown to their rooms, but next morning it is necessary to appear rather smartly dressed for breakfast, which is quite a formal meal at the castle.

Then another change of toilet is required when the time comes to join the shooters at luncheon and yet another on returning to the castle for 5 o'clock tea. Every night, too, a different toilet must be worn, suitable to the royal surroundings and proportionately expensive.—London Answers.

GLEAM OF THE EMERALD.

Its Brilliant Green Light Has No Rival on Land or Sea.

"Interesting," said a gem expert, "is the word that most persons apply to an emerald. There is only one other jewel which shares this quality, and that is the opal, which at its best has also green lights, although, of course, they are entirely different from those of an emerald. The reason that makes an emerald 'interesting' apart from its beauty and value is the same that makes the woman with green eyes the most interesting of her sex. It's a light that never was on land or sea; it's a brilliant gleam that gives the accent to any sort of costume and a sad green or so-called 'artistic green.' The emerald is the soul of life, light and beauty."

The emerald has the advantage of being one of the most becoming of gems. Light haired beauties claim it for their own, for they declare that nothing else, not even the sapphire, accentuates their delicate fairness so effectively. Brunettes are adorable in emeralds, especially the brunette with brilliant coloring. Strangely enough, blue eyes, instead of being dimmed by the jewel, gather fire and depth from its close neighborhood. They take on a delectable green blue gleam and seem much larger than when the emeralds are not near. As for the aurea haired beauty, it is her stone par excellence.

The Servant Problem.

There was but one cook in the intelligence (why do they call it that?) office, and two housewives were bidding for her services, with fire in their eyes.

"Come and cook for me," said one, "and you won't have to work on Thursdays and Sundays."

"Cook for me," said the other, "and you won't have to make your own bed."

"With me you can entertain your friends in the parlor."

"I always give my servants my best clothes and wear the old ones."

"You don't have to wash and wipe the dishes if you take the situation with me."

The first housewife was desperate. "Come with me," she exclaimed, "and you won't have to cook."—Kansas City Star.

Coat Tim at His Word.

"That coat of yours," said the passenger with the chin beard, smiling genially, "has burned about half its length down one side."

"So?" frowned the man with the curled mustache, turning his head slowly and looking at him from head to foot. "Well, that is the way I like my cigars, sir."

So when a spark from his cigar fell on the skirt of his new sixty dollar overcoat and proceeded to burn a hole in it the man with the chin beard reflected, "Perhaps that's the way he likes his overcoats," and said nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

A Distinction.

"How do you pronounce the word pa-p-a. Miss Jibley," asked Hickenlooper "pop-paw or popper? I am writing an article on 'How American Girls Speak.'"

"Why, I say pop-paw, of course," replied Miss Jibley. "I want to distinguish my father from my fiancé, who is my popper."—Harper's Weekly.

A Genius.

"So you insist that your boy Josh is a genius?"

"Yes," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "I don't know exactly what a genius is. But we've got to give some excuse for his not doing any regular work."—Washington Star.

BEGINNING AT HOME.

Pertinent Question a Bright Boy Put to a Governor.

The late Governor Larrabee, the "grand old man" of Iowa, was extremely fond of children. One day while looking over his mill at Turkey River he found an urchin, dirty and ragged, sound asleep near the water-wheel. The boy was Mickey Burke, son of a poor family in the neighborhood.

The governor asked the boy why he was so dirty and ragged. The boy explained his mother had a large family and had to work hard and could get him no better clothes.

"But you can keep clean," exhorted Larrabee. "You could wash your face and hands if you wanted to. That costs nothing."

Mickey said he would try.

"Well," said the governor, "now is the time to begin."

He procured a washbasin, some soap and a towel and watched Mickey scrub himself until he shone. Then the governor got Mickey some clothes and dressed him neatly. Mickey looked fine.

"Now," said Larrabee, "we'll see about getting you a job."

He took Mickey to the store of an old German of whom the governor was very fond. Mr. Schneider had no place for Mickey.

"But you must have," expostulated Larrabee. "Just look at him and see what a nice boy he is. He is clean and neat. He is a good talker and would make a good clerk. There is no finer boy, Mr. Schneider, than Mickey here."

Schneider was obdurate. He had no place.

The governor and Mickey walked out of the store, much disappointed. As they reached the sidewalk Mickey turned to his benefactor and asked, "Mr. Larrabee, if I am such a darned fine boy as you say why don't you give me a job yourself?"—Saturday Evening Post.

CURIOUS ACACIA TREE.

It Gets Peevish and Ugly and Odorous When Disturbed.

In Idaho there exists a species of the acacia tree which is entitled to be classed as one of the wonders of plant life. When full grown it closes its leaves together in coils each day at sunset and curls its twigs to the shape of pig tails.

When the tree has thus settled itself for the night's sleep it is said that if touched it will flutter as if agitated or impatient at the disturbance. The oftener, it is averred, the foliage is molested the more violent will become the shaking of the branches. Finally, it is further alleged, if the shaking is continued the tree will at length emit a nauseating odor quite sufficient to induce a headache in the case of the person disturbing the tree.

In Idaho it is called the "angry tree," and it is said that it was discovered by men who on making camp for the night placed one end of a canvas covering over one of the sensitive bushes, using it for a support. Immediately the tree began to jerk its branches sharply. The motion continued with increasing "nervousness" until at last came a sickening odor that drove the tired campers to a more friendly location.—Harper's Weekly.

Queer English.

Tokyo contains some queer specimens of English. One would scarcely be familiar with the name "Howlindu Maru" painted on the bow of a Japanese junk, and yet "Howlindu" is not a bad reproduction of "How do you do" but probably the only English phrase that the owner of the boat had ever heard. The having the courage of his ignorance, he treated it as a single word, combined it with a Japanese suffix applied to sailing vessels and gave it with pride to his honorable junk.

Another Japanese refers to himself as the "cheerful barber," a laundryman gives notice that he is a "high wash-man," and a sartorial artist describes himself as "the sublime tailor." A shop signboard bears the words "Nourishing Drugs."

An Apt Pupil.

A little boy was advised by his father to use illustrations in his conversation whenever they should occur to him.

"For," continued the parent, "there is no more forcible way of conveying or impressing your meaning."

Shortly after the boy was being lectured on generosity.

"It's better to give than to receive, Johnny—far better."

"Illustrate it, papa. I think I shall understand it better."—New York Journal.

THE CHAFING DISH.

Antiquity of This Now Popular Cooking Utensil.

The chafing dish is not a product of modern invention. Looking backward over history's pages, many allusions are made to its use. Among the ruins of Pompeii have been found bronze chafing dishes of unique design, and Mousning, in his "Romische Geschichte," asserts that in those days a well wrought cooking machine came to cost more than an estate. Louis XV took much delight in cooking and, according to Goncourt, often amused himself by making "quintessential stews in silver pans." The palate of Louis XIV. was often tickled by "piping hot dishes brought in on a chafing dish."

Napoleon Bonaparte, when laying down the affairs of war and enjoying home life for a short period, cooked in a silver chafing dish an omelet for the enjoyment of the empress and himself. Mme. Recamier, the beautiful and intellectual society leader, used the chafing dish, while Mme. de Staël, the greatest woman in literary history, when exiled from her beloved France took with her the chafing dish.

We of today are doing much to keep alive the true spirit of hospitality by bringing the chafing dish into popular use.—Woman's Home Companion.

PETRIFIED BODIES.

Their Organic Materials Are Replaced by Mineral Particles.

In answer to the query, "Do biologists or chemists know the process of petrification or the reason why a human body or a plant in some cases takes the course of petrification instead of decaying?" we would say:

The process is at first one of decay slowly and replacement particles by particle of the organic material by inorganic or mineral. Water holding siliceous minerals in saturated solution is necessary, the flesh or plant disorganizes, the carbon, oxygen, nitrogen, hydrogen compounds disintegrate and escape, and the minute portion is replaced by the mineral particle, the shape or form of the decaying body remaining intact.

Now, the carbon in the bodies does not change to siliceous minerals. It disappears in its combination with the other elements. No element changes into another; this would be mutation. Replacement is the word used here. Thus an organic petrified man or plant—no organic matter can be found—only inorganic, and this weighs far more than did the animated body. The entire process of petrification is a mysterious process of nature.—New York American.

Authors and Novel Reading.

The objection pressed by many women novelists against reading fiction may be based on the same grounds as those raised by the little boy at the tea party who refused to eat jam "cos father makes it." Some distinguished writers in other fields have been voracious novel readers. Concerning the author of the standard work on the British constitution Grant Duff relates: "Bagehot, like Sir Henry Maine, Sir James Stephen and Sir George Venables, had a perfect passion for novels and would read and reread them with the greatest delight. He had been reading 'Rob Roy' half an hour before his death." Tennyson, too, according to William Allingham, was "a constant novel reader. 'What I dislike,' he once said, 'is beginning a new novel. I should like to have a novel to read in a million volumes, to last me my life.'"—London Standard.

The Dead Watch Ticked.

A strong box containing family records and heirlooms was opened a few days ago to examine an old manuscript. The box had not been disturbed for several years, and the women who had taken it into a private room were surprised when they removed an old fashioned open face watch from its resting place to hear it tick loudly. This to them was evidence that the box had been tampered with. But everything was found intact and in keeping with the memorandum of contents, and they were much perplexed because of the ticking watch, which ceased its activity before the box was returned to its place. A watchmaker who was consulted said that such "momentary life" in "dead" timepieces when disturbed was not unusual.—New York Tribune.

Where He Shone.

The prisoner was charged with larceny, and a lawyer of dubious reputation was defending him.

"I submit, gentlemen of the jury," shouted the lawyer, "that the facts disclosed do not constitute larceny, although I will concede that the district attorney is usually a better judge of stealing than am I!"

"But a less successful practitioner," was the disconcerting reply.—Judge.

Clear Proof.

"You may talk as you please about the intelligence of animals, but dogs cannot reason."

"Of course they can't. If they could reason like human beings dogs wouldn't stick so to a man when he's down."—Baltimore American.

Shoeing Horses.

The art of shoeing horses to protect their hoofs against the evils of hard usage was unknown to the Greeks and Romans and is first mentioned in the history of the Cris as late as the fifth century.

There is not any virtue the exercise of which even momentarily will not impress a new fairness upon the features.—Ruskin.

Good White Wash.

Slack half a bushel of fresh lime, by pouring over it boiling water sufficient to cover it 4 or 5 inches deep; stirring it until slacked. Add 2 lbs. of sulphate of zinc (white vitriol) dissolved in water. Add water enough to bring all to the consistency of thick whitewash. Apply with a whitewash brush, and get your lime from Lamb-Schrader Co., Tel. M 177, who handle the largest and freshest line of LIME, HYDRATED LIME and LAND PLASTER in the City. Prices always right.
