ROUND TRIP FARES FROM PORTLAND

OUR FEARLESS SAILORS.

An Incident of the Old Days Off the These Cape of Good Hope.

American vessels in those days (1833) surpassed the sailing records of ships of every other nation. Once when are eatin' me alive?" down nearly to the latitude of the Cape of Good Hope we encountered the most severe gale of our outward bound voyage. A mountainous sea was heaving in from the south, and the wind, which had originally come from that direction, was now blowing directly from the west with hurricane force. High as the Washington stood above the water, occasional crests would sweep her main deck and she steered so hard that I had to keep two men continually at the wheel and have them relieved every half hour.

The wind, however, was fair, and therefore every man on the ship, from Captain L, to the cook's boy, would have felt disgraced had the order been given to heave the ship to. Under double reefed topsails and fore course she was logging upward of sixteen knots, and all hands were as pleased as if they had just been granted a week's shore leave at New York.

Later in the day, when the wind had moderated somewhat, we sighted a large British bark hove to under short canvas. She was flying distress signals, so Captain L. ordered the wheel put up and ran down to have a look at her. As soon as our signals could be clearly seen he asked what she wanted, and the bark replied with a request to stand by. Captain L, then ran up flags demanding if the bark were injured or anything wrong on board. The Britisher replied again, "Stand by. Do not like look of weather."

When the second mate read the meaning of this signal out of the code book a great laugh went up in our cabin, and Captain L. replied with flags reading, "See nothing wrong in this weather," and hoisted the American ensign above the signal in order to give point to his remark. No doubt the British captain said, "Another of those crazy Yankees!" when he read our flags, but we were in Batavia a week before he appeared .- From "The Journal of Captain Nathaniel Webber" in Outing.

TODAY IS YOUR ONLY DAY.

Yesterday is a Record and Tomorrow May Never Come. Good days and bad days exist only in your own head. The weather has nothing to do with it. Each day is what you make it for yourself. Bad weather is only an unfortunate opin-

Suppose it is raining pitchforks. You get word that your salary has been doubled or that a forgotten uncle has left you $1,000,000. What do you care about the weather then? Or suppose the person you love is dying. Unexpectedly a turn for the better comes. The doctor says your dear one will live. What if it is hotter than Tophet? It is a good day, a great day, a happy day. It's what you think and feel about it that makes each day what it is. You, within yourself, can make each day, every day, a good day. Put down in the notebook of your soul the poet Runeberg's thought:

FEROCIOUS DOGFISH.

Ravenous, Sharklike Gluttens Would Eat a Man Alive.

"'N' he said, 'My God, Frank, shoot me quick, shoot me quick-th' dog

"I hauled up my shotgun, 'n' I pulled back th' hammers, but i couldn't do it though I warn't more'n ten feet frum him 'n' could hev blown his whole head off. I don't b'I've th' Lord would hev called thet murder either.

"I gasped for air 'n' dropped my gus on th' seat, 'n' then I looked at Charile again, 'n' it was all over-jest a dark red in th' water 'n' a hundred ugly shouts 'n' shinin' rows of teeth jest gleamin' 'n' snappin' that in th' gray of that October afternoon."

it was Frank Oleson, a fisherman of Rockland, Me., who spoke. He was telling a little group of oilskin ciad fishermen about a tragedy of 1885, when he and Charles Freeman sailed out of Tenants Harbor, Me., one October morning. Oleson brought the fittle sloop Alpine back the next morning alone. Freeman had fallen overboard in the midst of a school of dogfish, which had eaten him alive before the eyes of his helpless companion. They were bound for the fishing grounds off Matinicus island. Free man had taken along a shotgun. When five miles from Criehaven a bunch of coots, flying low, came skimming along. Freeman fired into them, and three or four dropped. The Alpine was brought up into the wind, and with her mainsail and jib flapping the gunner jumped into the dory and started to pick op his game.

There was a shout, a splash, and Freeman was struggling in the water. In reaching over the side of the dory he had lost his balance and fallen into the choppy sea. In a moment the bungry, sharkish dogs were after him, The opening paragraph tells all there is to tell.

Many stories are related to show the ferocity of the dogfish. It was not more than half a dozen years ago that two New York yachtsmen were lolling along in a sloop yacht in Penobscot bay one July afternoon. One of the yachtsmen, a physician named Bowker, decided to take a plunge. He stripped and dived off the bow of the sloop, intending to pull himself into the tender trailing behind as it passed him. He had scarcely bit the water before he let out a yell. He just managed to catch the gunwale of the rowboat when his companion reached him and hauled him in. Three ugly wounds showed in his legs where the voracious dogfish had bitten out chunks. He was taken into Rockland, where a physician treated him for several weeks before he was out of danger .- New York Sun.

Chemistry and Truth.

Dr. Benjamin E. Smith, the noted lexicographer, once made an autobiographical statement which may interest advocates of scientific education, says the Manchester Guardian. Some one had asked his opinion about the best methods of teaching truthfulness to children. "Frankly," he replied, "I know I told the truth as a child purely from a desire to please my mother, as I would have carried out any other course of action on which she insisted. But I never saw any other reason for doing it until as a lad I worked in a chemical laboratory. Then I realized that nothing that was said made the slightest difference to the elemental fact, and I believe I bare loathed exaggeration and falsehood ever since."

When you get up in the morning throw back your shoulders, take a deep breath. Meet the new day like a man. Say to yourself: "Another day-another life!"

"Each day is a life."

For all we know, it may be the only day we'll ever have. Let's make it the best day we can. Let's strive to see that it is a day worth while. Let's move a step forward in our work. Let's do all the good we can. Let's get all the happiness we can-today. Right now is the only time you can control. Yesterday is a record. Tomorrow is a secret. Today is yours, is mine.-American Magazine

A writer in Bailey's Magazine of England has been figuring on the cost of the annual boat race between UIford and Cambridge and says the erpense to each crew may be approximately estimated at $3,000 for each. He then says that as the contest rare ly takes more than twenty minutes the cost works out at about $300 per minute, or about $8 every time the oars dip into the water. The cost of the boats is placed at $250 and the oars at $70, the rest of the money going for preparation from October until the day of the race.

Room Doors on the Stage.

In real life room doors always open in toward the room itself. On the stage, however, room doors, as a rule, open outward, or away from the room. Exits are one of the most difficult parts of the actor's art, and if he or she had to fumble with the handle, pull the door toward them, step round it and pass through they would probably make a clumsy dodge of it. That is why, as a rule, duors are constructed to open outward at a push.
