MAYOR AT TILLAMOOK.
Colonel Poorman Tells About Its Development.
From the Woodburn Independent.
Mayor Poorman, who was over at Tillamook last week, talks very interestingly of what he saw in that section, which became connected by rail with the outside world less than two years ago.
The city is building up rapidly, with a new bank, hotel and opera house under construction—and strange to tell, the finest residence in the city is the property of a newspaper man.
But the roads are really the most notable feature of this region now. The county has just expended $35,000 in building seven miles of hard surface road from Tillamook around the south end of the bay to the beach at Netarts, where there is not more than twenty permanent residents, but where a great summer colony is enjoying the bathing and the sea. This road was cut through big timber and graded like a railroad. Some of the forests that line it have trees from six to twelve feet in diameter, and the trees in the tidelands grow closer than anyone would believe were we to tell it. When it comes to getting out stumps eight feet in diameter and making big fills and cuts the cost of the railroad often exceeds that of the concrete road itself.
That the roads there are the best in Oregon is Mayor Poorman's candid opinion. The county has built two half mile stretches of asphalt paving in the neighborhood of the city while in the city itself seventy blocks have just been put down, where it was voted to build but seventeen. None of this has been paid for yet, the matter being in litigation, but it is probable that the lot owners will get off with about a dollar a yard.
One reason the county is spending so much money for roads is that most of the cost is paid by the non-residents who hold the title to so much of the timberland of the county. And the visible supply of timber runs into the billions of feet and is altogether beyond imagination.
In some places the soil is so spongy and creepy that it is given a coating of clay before the gravel or crushed rock is put on, and road material is no more readily available there than here, some of it being brought from the sea beach.
While the roads are thus being taken care of by three supervisors for the county, each having charge of a third of its area, Uncle Sam is looking after the bar and the deep sea channel across to the mainland, about three quarters of a million having been appropriated for that purpose by the last congress.
The receipts at Tillamook and vicinity for cheese and butter fat reach $75,000 a month, and not a pound of butter is made there, even the butter used by the residents being shipped back from Portland. After the butter fat has been taken out of the milk and the whey made into cheese, there still remain possibilities of profit in the residue, from which they are beginning to make milk sugar—which commands a high price for medical purposes.

Good Reason for His Enthusiasm.
When a man has suffered for several days with colic, diarrhoea and other forms of bowel complaint and is then sound and well by one or two doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as is often the case, it is but natural that he should be enthusiastic in his praise of the remedy, and especially in this case of a severe attack when life is threatened. Try it when in need of such a remedy. It never fails. Sold by all dealers.

Farm for Sale.
For Sale, 16 acres of bottom land 1 1/2 miles from town. Good house and barn. Will run nine cows. Esquire of the Headlight office.

FOUND ITS GOLDEN HEAD.

Riddle of a Marble Column in Italy Read by a Beggar.

Near the monastery of San Vito, in Naples, stood a marble column that had been erected by an eccentric Frenchman about the beginning of the last century. On it were written in French the following enigmatic words: "On May 1 every year I have a golden head."

The inscription sorely puzzled the inhabitants of Naples. On May 1 the year after the erection of the column a great crowd came to it in the hope of finding the top covered with gold pieces. Needless to say, they went home with their pockets as empty as they were when they came.

For several years people came to see the promised wonder and went away disappointed. At last the authorities had the column taken down in the belief that treasure would be found beneath it. Nothing but earth was found, and so the column was set up again. Obviously the words had a mystic meaning, but no one was clever enough to guess it, and for years the riddle remained unsolved.

Finally in 1841 a ragged beggar named Annibale Tosci noticed the inscription. He stood looking at it for a long time while he pondered its meaning. Then suddenly the solution of the puzzle flashed into his mind. He waited patiently until May 1 before he tested the accuracy of his interpretation of the mystic words.

On the day mentioned in the inscription Tosci, bearing a pick and shovel, set out at daybreak for the column. He arrived before any chance visitors, and as soon as the monastery's bells tolled he started digging in the ground covered by the shadow of the top of the column. He had not dug long before he came on a satchel that contained 80,000 francs. The inscription was a true one—the head of the column covered the golden treasure every year on May 1.

Annibale Tosci, the beggar whose sharp guess had given him comparative wealth, became a landowner near Mantua. He died at the age of ninety-four.—Youth's Companion.

HISTORIC RAILROAD TRIP.

Fillmore and Webster on the Erie's First Through Train.

The completion of the Erie was the most important event in the history of railroad building down to that time—a matter of national consequence. Recognition of this fact was made when in May, 1851, a special train carried on a two days' trip through the mountains and valleys of southern New York, sweet with the leaves and blossoms of early summer, President Fillmore, four members of his cabinet and other guests of national distinction.

Daniel Webster, majestic even under his heavy burden of age and ill-health, was secretary of state in Fillmore's cabinet and rode on that first through train. He made the journey in a rocking chair lashed to a flat car, that he might lose nothing of the scenery and the sweetness of the fresh verdure. Nor was he too feeble to enjoy the great barbecue at Dunkirk, where oxen and sheep were roasted whole, pork and beans were cooked in vessels holding fifty gallons each, bread was baked in loaves ten feet long and two feet thick, so heavy that two men staggered under their burden, and the whole was served at a table 300 feet long, spread under a specially built shed along Railroad street from Deer to Lion street.

It was a great day for Dunkirk; it was a great day for New York state and the nation, and it was a great day also for President Fillmore, who found the pork and beans especially to his taste.—Wells Fargo Messenger.

Soaking the Clothes.

Mrs. Browning had a new domestic named Agnes.
"Agnes," said the mistress, "did you put the clothes in soak?"
"Oh did not," answered the girl.
"Did you want me, mum?"
"Why, certainly," was the reply.
"Very well, mum," said Agnes.
About two hours later Agnes presented herself to her mistress.
"Oh hee put thim clothes in soak, mum," she said, "but the pawnbroker wud give me only chew dollars on the whole outfit. Here be th' money, an' it's sorry Oi am that ye bees so harrud up."—Harper's Magazine.

"Sapsy."

"At Liverpool street station, London," said an American, "I asked a booking clerk whether he could tell me where Sapsworth was. His answer was that he had never heard of such a place. "But," I urged, "is not that the way the country people pronounce Sawbridgeworth?" "No, indeed," he laughingly replied. "They call it Sapsy."

Kipling's Response.

The Cantab, the Cambridge university weekly, once asked Rudyard Kipling to contribute to its columns. In response came the following reply:
"There once was a writer who wrote, "Dear Sir—in reply to your note of yesterday's date, I am sorry to state it's no good at the prices you quote."
