

Lobby Committee's Report.

The report of the House committee that investigated a charge that an insidious lobby, the "worst in history," was working at the capital to prevent the enactment of tariff legislation is mild and cautious. The main charge is ignored, as might have been expected. The proof showed little activity except on the part of the beet sugar interests, which were threatened with extinction by the Underwood bill. Their activity was balanced by that of the sugar importers, who worked for the bill. The report deals almost entirely with the lurid charges made in a $10,000 confession to a New York paper by a former employee of the National Association of Manufacturers, which did not concern the recent tariff revision at all, but dealt with public men and measures of the past. The committee exonerates all individuals implicated in the Mulhall "exposure" with the exception of Representative John A. McDermott, a Democratic congressman from Illinois. And he is accused only of "acts of grave impropriety, unbecoming the dignity of the distinguished position he occupies." The report adds: "That which a private citizen may do with impunity must frequently be shunned by one in an official position."

But the committee was not ready to throw this mantle of charity over ex-Representative James E. Watson. He was censured for representing, following his retirement from Congress, the National Manufacturers' Association at the capital. It charges him with conduct of "doubtful propriety when he capitalized his influence with members of Congress." The committee showed gross carelessness in dealing with facts when it says that Mr. Watson was thus employed during the passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. Mr. Watson was a member of Congress at the time and according to all the evidence was not in the pay of any association. Mulhall went back on the stand to correct the statement that Mr. Watson had been employed while a member of Congress, following a threat of criminal prosecution for libel. Further testimony supported Mr. Watson's contentions. Whether former members

Marriages at Wholesale.

A clergyman at Waterbury, Conn., is establishing a reputation for marrying couples at wholesale. Five bridal parties took the vows simultaneously at the altar of his church one evening and the evening before six couples were married with a single ceremony. The second ceremony attracted the attention of the correspondents and the language used by the clergyman was included in the dispatches. He asked the assembled grooms: "Do you take these women for your lawful wives?" Without rehearsal the bass chorus responded: "We do." Evidently Waterbury winds up its marriage ceremonies more quickly than it can its watches. But sticklers for form will attack the language of the ceremony as vague, indefinite, uncertain and promiscuous. It has too great an appearance of a pledge of wholesale polygamy. Certainly the question should be revised so that each groom shall be obligated to love and support some specific bride. It would more definitely fix responsibility.

While marriage is such a solemn estate that there should be a decent regard for ceremony, there seems to be a wide variety of opinion as to just what form should be used. Clergymen of denominations having rituals usually follow the same, except where the contracting parties ask for some change in the wording. The rituals if properly read or repeated give an effect of due solemnity. But captious critics find fault even with the most popular rite. The best known Protestant marriage ceremony, on which others are obviously based, cites Rebecca as a model wife. Yet it was a most unwisely trick she played on the blind and helpless Isaac when she aided her smooth faced favorite to steal his brother's blessing. In fact, she proposed the swindle and furnished all the details. But he was an apt pupil and some of his later achievements would have filled the material bosom with pride but for Rebecca's untimely death.

Many clergymen make up ceremonies of their own which are a sort of ritualistic mosaic. Some surpass any particular ritual while others are filled with absurdities.

This is especially true of extemporizing ceremonies. The recent custom of using two rings has added to the difficulties. The justices of the peace have a wide choice of ceremonies, ranging from simplest exchange of vows to the most elaborate ritual, including even, "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." The use of this in a civil ceremony is patently absurd. Bill Nye claimed that when he was a justice of the peace in Wyoming he got around this by substituting his own name in the place of the Lord's. But after all, the ceremony is not the essential thing. What really counts is the mutual love and forbearance of the contracting parties. By the way, the Waterbury dispatch is silent as to one matter of importance in these expensive days. It does not state what reduction in fee is made in wholesale marriages.

Worry Caused His Death.

The death of Lieut. Col. David Du Bose Gaillard in John Hopkins Hospital will cause sorrow throughout the country, although it was not unexpected. Ever since he was driven away from his work on the Panama Canal by Secretary Garrison of the War Department owing to his physical and mental condition there has been little expectation of the recovery of his powers, giant that he was. He became a nervous wreck while battling with the slides in the Colobra cut, disasters that for a time threatened the success of the greatest engineering enterprise of modern times, if not of all history.

According to the statement of his grief-stricken wife he worked night and day on plans for overcoming the slides. Plan after plan he devised and tried in vain. He worked into the small hours on new plans and arose while it was yet night to personally superintend their application. The loss of sleep and the incessant worry showed their effect and his friends futilely tried to induce him to take a rest. He stubbornly persevered until he mastered the problem and left only after peremptory orders were given by the secretary of war. While the country was celebrating the final blast in the great work the hero who had for seven years poured out

CLOUGH, the Reliable Druggist.

A Butter Fat Experiment.

Which is the most profitable breed of cows for Tillamook where the produce is manufactured into cheese is a question which has confronted the dairyman of this vicinity for a number of years but has never been answered with any satisfaction and we are taking this small amount of space in this paper to help throw a little light on this very important question by publishing a few figures which were brought out by a small experiment carefully conducted by the Fairview Cheese Factory by the cheese maker, Mr. Tinner and we will leave the answer to the results brought by this experiment as to which is the most profitable breed of cattle to be engaged in.

This experiment is not what it could be owing to the impossibility of getting enough extremely low or high testing milk at the time of the year when the experiment was made but never-the-less it gives you a basis from which to figure where the extremes are greater. In this experiment the 4 per cent and 4.40 per cent milk was worked in separate vats and following are the results.

Note the fact that a lb. of butterfat from the 4 per cent milk contains 25-100 or 1/4 of 1 lb. of cheese more than 1 lb. of butterfat from the 4.4 per cent milk or in 4 lbs. of butterfat there is an actual difference of 1 lb. of cheese in favor of the lower testing milk.

At 15 cents a lb. the cheese from 100 lbs. of the 4 percent milk would bring $1.78 and from the 4.4 per cent, $1.79 and from the 4 per cent milk a lb. of butterfat would be worth 44.6 cents per lb. and from the 4.4 percent a lb. of butterfat would be worth 46.7 cents per lb. or 3.9 cents less per lb. fat.

California Woman Seriously Alarmed.

"A short time ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and caused me a great deal of annoyance. I would have had coughing spells and my lungs were so sore and inflamed I began to be seriously alarmed. A friend recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saying she had used it for years. I bought a bottle and it relieved my cough the first night, and in a week I was rid of the cold and soreness of my lungs," writes Miss Marie Gerber, Sawtella, Cal. For sale by J. S. Lamar.

Guarding Against Croup.

The best safeguard against croup is a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in the house. P. H. Ginn, Middleton, Ga., writes: "My children are very susceptible to croup, easily catch cold. I give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and in every instance they get prompt relief and are soon cured. We keep it at home and prevent croup." For sale by all druggists.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is intended especially for coughs and colds, and has won a wide reputation by its cures of these diseases. It is most effectual and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by J. S. Lamar.

THE GOOD SUBSTANTIAL KIND.

of Congress shall appear before committees or members of Congress as paid agents of individuals or associations is a matter of taste. Their effectiveness depends on the attitude members of Congress take toward them. The practice is growing in disfavor.

The committee tries to distinguish between good lobbyists and bad ones, or legitimate lobbying and illegitimate. Etymology is spurned in this classification. The National Association of Manufacturers is severely censured for the methods with which it opposed measures aggressively urged by the American Federation of Labor. The representatives of the latter body are given a clean bill of health, their methods being irreprehensible. But those who followed the published testimony will recall that each side ought to aid the election of its friends and each side threatened the political destruction of its enemies. The number of voters a lobbyist represents apparently has much to do with whether he is a good or a bad lobbyist, in the judgment of the House committee.

GEORGETOWN, TEXAS. J. A. Kimbro, says: "For several years past Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been my household remedy for all coughs, colds, and lung troubles. It has given permanent relief in a number of cases of obstinate coughs and colds." Contains no opiates. Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists.

his life for its success lay unconscious in the hospital. He did not know of the praise lavished upon him. He was not aware that a bill had been introduced in Congress to make him a colonel as a tribute to his efficiency and loyalty.

But much as we must admire this distinguished and loyal man who dies at 54 years of age, we can but feel that his zeal might have been tempered with greater wisdom. He had the worrying mind, which is a sore affliction. With many this is congenial, but with all it may be to a large measure corrected by early discipline. One of the most valuable lessons to be taught any youth is poise. With it he masters his work without allowing it to finally master him. As a rule, the men who have accomplished the most work are those who have been able to sleep. The fretful, nervous, worrying person wastes himself. It is a matter of deep regret that so thoroughly a useful person as Lieut. Col Gaillard should be lost to his country and his family at such an early age.
