Husband of Tillamook Girl Shot While on Duty.

From Wednesday's Oregonian.

With two bullet wounds in his body T. J. Healey, popularly known as "Big Tim," a special watchman on Portland Heights, late last night returned the fire of two armed men, shot one of them in the right side and then fell to the pavement in front of John A. Keating's residence, 568 Montgomery Drive.

The two men ran up the road to a point opposite St. Helens Court, where three young women stopped them, asking if anyone was shot. The men answered by sending three shots over the girls' heads. They then jumped down a steep incline, falling into a deep gulch ending at Canyon Road.

Wounded Mate Deserted.

The man shot by Healey, who gave his name as Louis Stros, was found half way up a steep slope at the base of the canyon, where he had been deserted by his companion, who had evidently attempted to drag the man with him in his flight. Healey was rushed to St. Vincent's Hospital and his wounded victim to Good Samaritan Hospital.

Healey told the police that he was walking along Montgomery Drive on his regular inspection, when he came upon two men acting suspiciously near the Keating residence.

"I asked them what they were doing around the house and the smaller man said, 'Who are you?' I drew my gun, but before I could fire he shot me through the right shoulder. I fired point blank at him, not 15 feet away, and saw I hit him. He fired again and doubled me up with a bullet in my stomach. They ran on up the drive, but I felt too sick to pursue them."

Groans Heard by Woman.

Mrs. C. C. Strong, at 501 Montgomery drive, heard groans coming from the canyon as she stood on her back porch. She notified patrolmen in the vicinity and they too heard the groans.

Day Inspector Harry J. Strowbridge, of the United States Customs Service, living at 3 St. Helens Court, heard the shot and went to the edge of the canyon, where the men's tracks were left in the snow. He darted into the brush followed by Patrolman Laugeson, and after a course leading over fallen logs and soft steep ground came upon Stros moaning and sobbing lying on his side half way up a steep bank. Strowbridge says he heard a man talking to him as they approached.

Second Man Not Found.

Stros spoke only broken English and Detectives Craddock and Hamersley were unable to gain any information other than his name which he scribbled on paper when placed in an ambulance. Great difficulty was experienced in getting Stros to the ambulance at Canyon road.

Captain Jenkins and Captain Baty assigned every available patrolmen and detective to the search of the canyon. At an early hour this morning no trace of the second man had been found. The police are working with a good description and are in possession of the second man's hat.

John A. Keating, in front of whose house the shooting of Healey took place, is vice-president of the Lumbermen National Bank. It was this house that Healey believes the men were planning to rob.

T. J. Healey married Miss Delia Plasker about six months since, and this morning John Plasker and Miss Mienie Plasker left for Portland.

Colds to be Taken Seriously.

Intelligent people realize that common colds should be treated promptly. It is effective, pleasant to take, checks a cold, and stops the cough which causes loss of sleep and lowers the vital resistance. For sale by all druggists.

His Stomach Troubles Over.

Mr. Dyspeptic, would you not like to feel that your stomach troubles were over, that you could eat any kind of food you desired without injury? That may seem so unlikely to you that you do not even hope for an ending of your trouble, but permit us to assure you that it is not altogether impossible. If others can be cured permanently, and thousands have been, why not you? John R. Barker, of Battle Creek, Mich., is one of them. He says, "I was troubled with heartburn, indigestion, and liver complaint until I used Chamberlain's Tablets, then my troubles were over." Sold by J. S. Lamar.

Do you begin to cough at night, just when you hope to sleep? Do you have a tickling throat that keeps you awake? Just take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It will check the cough and stop the tickling sensation at once. Does not upset the stomach, is best for children and grown persons. For sale by all druggists.

Safe Either Way.

A farmer in a cyclone district was building a superb stone wall. He was building the wall stanch and solid, five feet across the base and four feet high. A stranger stopped his horse and said to the farmer:

"You're taking a lot of trouble with that wall."

"You bet," the farmer answered. "I'm putting her here to stay."

"What's the good of that?" sneered the stranger. "A cyclone'll come along and she'll blow over just the same."

"Well, let her," said the farmer. "She'll be a foot higher if she does."—Minneapolis Journal.

A Poor Place to Sleep.

Travelling in Africa is doubtless beset with more danger than in any other part of the world. Wild beasts, wild men, poisonous plants, storms, fevers and other sickness combine to make a formidable array. A recent traveler in Gwallah, a district in north-east Africa, encountered a new danger. Vegetation is very luxuriant, and when he pitched camp he noticed that a number of dead birds lay on the ground. Before he had time to comment on this fact four of the dogs, which had been smelling around, keeled over and died within five minutes. It was supposed that they had eaten some poisonous plant, but this idea was dispelled when three of the natives, who had slept on the ground, were found dead next morning. Then it was discovered that there was a stratum of deadly gas covering the ground to the depth of three or four inches. The traveler with his troupe lost no time in getting out of that vicinity.

Ruby Mines of Mogok.

The civilized world knows little of the famous ruby mines of Mogok, in a valley of Burma, whence come nearly all the large rubies, for the road lies through a forest which is seldom trod by whites. A few Englishmen who live there have laid out a polo ground, and between this and the town are the mines. The diggings are slowly eating up the village, and the main street is already half destroyed. The work goes on all day and all night, the ruby bearing earth being brought up in iron trolleys. A few strangers who have called at the mines have been told by the officials that they can keep any ruby they may find, but no one has ever been able to find one yet. The gems are embedded in the gold colored clay, which stretches along the whole of the valley, and it is only after the earth has been washed that the rubies are seen on the tables.—Argonaut.

Made the Journey Quite Cheerful.

Mr. Justice Maule once went on circuit with Judge Coleridge in a part of England where the high sheriff was a shy and modest man and very much alarmed at having to entertain his cynical lordship. Coming home in his coach with the two judges he thought it his duty to make conversation for them. He observed that he hoped there would be better weather, as the moon had changed.

"And are you such a fool, Mr. Jones, as to imagine that the moon has any effect on the weather?" said Maule.

"Really, Brother Maule," said Coleridge, who was politeness itself, "you are very hard upon our friend. For my part, I think the moon has considerable effect upon it."

"Then," said Maule, "you are as great a fool as Jones is." After which, conversation in the sheriff's carriage languished.

Napoleon's Masterful Mother.

The relationship between Napoleon Bonaparte and his mother, the Mme. Mere of Imperial times, was peculiar. Mme. Letizia, who was thirty-four when her famous son was born, had always been complete mistress of her household. Even when her son was emperor and his word was law, willing as she might have been in public to do him honor, in private she insisted on the privileges of her motherhood.

Baron Larrey, in his historical essay, writes: "One day there was a family meeting, and Napoleon gave his mother his hand to kiss, but Mme. Mere moved aside the proffered hand. Napoleon then took his mother's hand and kissed it, and she said to him, 'Sire, you know quite well that in public I must treat you with due respect, because I am your subject, but in private I am your mother.'"
