

COLUMBIA HIGHWAY TO THE SEA.

Will be Graded This Year -Tillamook Slow in Making Connections.

SALEM, Or., Feb. 4.—That the Columbia Highway will be graded this year from Portland to the sea, was the announcement made tonight by State Highway Engineer Bowby. This, he said, had been made possible by the authorization of a bond issue of $300,000 by the voters of Columbia County.

"Everything looks fine now for the completion of the highway," declared the engineer. "Surveys are being made in Columbia County and two locating parties have been working there for some time. The authorities have placed the expenditure of the money in the hands of the state highway commission and contract for the stretch of the road from the Clatsop County line up the river to Rainier will be let in a short time. There will be 32 miles of heavy grading through Columbia County. The county has levied $170,000 tax for road purposes, so that with the bond issue will go a long way toward giving the county good roads. About $345,000 of the bond issue is to be used on the Columbia Highway. The Nehalem and two short crossroads also are to be improved."

While Multnomah, Columbia and Clatsop counties have become quite enthusiastic over the building of the Columbia Highway, and will expend a large amount of money in having the road go through those counties, little interest thus far has been taken in connecting Tillamook county with this important and far reaching enterprise. It means much to every county the Columbia Highway passes through, for it is to be made a great tourist highway so that visitors to Oregon can see the scenery, productive and unproductive resources of the State. Outside of Multnomah, no county in Oregon can connect with the Columbia Highway with as little expense as Tillamook county. All that is necessary is the improvement of about four miles of road on the Necarney mountain, which will be one of the grandest and most attractive spots on the highway. Here is a splendid opportunity for Tillamook county to connect with the Columbia Highway at a small outlay. Everybody in the county should help boost for the Columbia Highway to go through Tillamook County, for it is by far the most important piece of road work that could be undertaken today. True it is that the other road at Nehalem connecting Clatsop could be used, but this does not have the grand scenic beauty and inspiring panorama of the Necarney mountain road.

OLD BROAD CREEK CHURCH.

It is in Ruins Now, Yet Washington Once Worshipped There.

Within eight miles from the national capitol at Washington is an old church which was built in 1604. Its parish was founded even before that. Very few people have ever heard of this old church, for the simple reason that for the past fifty years the place has been falling to rack and ruin.

It is a famous church, and in the early days it was a well known parish, for it was the first that was founded near the city of Washington. Of late years the old families have all moved away, and their children have had interests elsewhere. They have all forgotten the little old church where their ancestors worshipped.

It was this church of St. John's that George Washington attended on his frequent visits to its side of the river. A few years back those old parishioners who could remember their father's stories of having seen Washington rowed by his slaves over from Mount Vernon to service there, put on Washington's pew in the old church a silver plate as a memorial to him.

The old graveyard is overgrown with honeysuckle, but beneath the masses of vine there are many famous old Maryland people buried.

The church itself is a curious old structure. It is nearly square and the bricks, which are of exceptional size, were imported from England. The hardware was also imported.

There is no chance at all in the church. There is a place where the altar should be that is set apart from the church by a small rail. At one time there was a great high pulpit, but this was taken out by some rector who thought that it was unnecessary.—Living Church.

EXPENSIVE DINING.

Prices Soar Sky High at the Hotel des Roches Noires.

Trouville is in the season one of the most expensive spots in Europe. It contains what is assuredly one of the most expensive hotels in Europe. The individual who takes his wife and family to the Hotel des Roches Noires for, say, a month in the high season and does them really well—that is, gives them the best which the house has to offer—when he comes away—if he has paid his bill—has left a small fortune behind him.

The idea that an Englishman because he is being charged a high price is being cheated is absurd. Nowadays—whatever it used to be once upon a time—an Englishman in a really smart hotel in France is looked at askance. French people on pleasure bent are much more extravagant than we are. They do not seem to care what they spend.

I remember dining once at Trouville when a basket of nectarines was offered by the head waiter. They were quite nice nectarines, but that head waiter wanted 25 francs apiece. Five dollars for two or three mouthfuls seemed to me too much. There was scarcely a Frenchman in the room who did not treat himself to one. At the next table to mine was a man with his wife and his daughter. They had three apiece, $45 for dessert as a vindictive, to an extremely expensive dinner!—Richard Marsh in Strand Magazine.

Changing Lead to Gold.

Professor Soddy makes the assertion boldly that it is only a question of application to change lead into gold. He says that while now we can only work with electricity at 100,000 volts it is only a matter of perfecting the method to be able to work at ten times that voltage when the baser metals can be changed into the more precious. In other words, electricity, when brought to its highest efficiency and application, is the real philosopher's stone for which the alchemists of the middle ages searched so long.—New York World.

New One on Him.

Politics was at the boiling point in the negro ward, and the lemon colored henchman undertook to air his superior knowledge in the argument with the ebony hued brother. "Yes, suh," he declared, speaking of a candidate, "he just a neophyte in politics, just a neophyte."

"Why, dat man done tole ouab club las' night he wuz strong 'Publican!' excitedly declared the other. "When dat new pabty start up?"

Devil Worshipers.

That curious people, the Yezidis of Turkey, live sometimes in huts, but more commonly in black tents like those of the Arabs of the plains. Of all the peculiar peoples of Turkey they are the most peculiar or the least understood. It is said that they worship the devil instead of God. They respect Satan as a deity whose power for good or evil is very great, and therefore they will never mention his name.—Christian Herald.

Neatly Managed.

"Are you sure your husband will stay awake and look after the baby?" asked one woman.

"Oh, yes," replied the other. "I gave him a Welsh rabbit for dinner that won't let him sleep a wink."—Washington Star.

Bearded Women in France.

According to a French law passed in the eighteenth century, any woman growing a beard has, ipso facto, the right to dress like a man.

Diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all things to industry.—Benjamin Franklin.

Singing at Sight.

I never really got it through my so as to read musical notation ordinary, conventional, civilized. The fact remains that if today were suddenly to place before me a score of "Robin Hood," "Hinafina," "Fra Diavolo" I couldn't for the of me tell whether a given note A or G, or what key it was in. The same time I could sing it come or any unfamiliar piece of music though I should prefer to hear it ed over once on the piano so as started right on the tempo. The brated Mme. Rudersdorff, who one of the finest dramatic and turn singers I ever knew, once me when I confided to her this larity:

"Never mind; you are all That's the true method of singing sight anyway. The best of them really know anything about more than that—if they know much."—Henry Clay Barnabee in tional Magazine.

Curran's Mistake.

It was difficult to subdue the spirits of John Philpot Curran, Irish lawyer and wit. Indeed, of his most brilliant witticisms uttered in the staid and somewhat stuffy atmosphere of the court.

On one occasion when Curran making an elaborate argument in every Lord Clare brought a large foundland dog upon the bench him, and during the progress of the argument he paid much more attention to the dog than to the barrister. Usually the chancellor lost all regard even ordinary courtesy. In the important part of the case he himself quite aside and began to die the animal. Curran stopped once.

"Go on, Mr. Curran; go on," Lord Clare.

"I beg a thousand pardons, my replied the wit. "I took it for granted that your lordship was employed in consultation."

Physical Energy.

Study of the blood furnishes clew to Julius Robert Mayer's discovery of that fundamental physics, the law of conservation of energy. Mayer observed, while ing as a ship's surgeon in the that the venous blood of his patients (in the days when blood letting still in general vogue) was apparently brighter in color than in practice in the temperate zone. This he concluded there was a nite relation between the chemical action going on in the blood amount of work or heat furnished the body, and thus, following argument point by point, he was led to the conclusion that the amount of energy of a given system is constant; that energy can neither be created nor destroyed, but only converted from one form into another.

When Vapor is Dry.

A popular misconception is the position that aqueous vapor and wet. They are in themselves dry become wet only when they meet water. So dry is aqueous vapor will dry any moist object that it in contact with. Superheated before it condenses, is a dry gas feels wet if the temperature hand is sufficient to melt it; as dry. Another misconception is the air can be either moist or dry is condensed aqueous vapor in that is moist, and it would be there were no air. A given aqueous vapor confined in a space will be wet or dry according to the temperature. At 32 degrees, stance, it might be partially condensed and consequently wet, while at grees, owing to expansion, it is dry.

The First Ironclad.

The French were the first to apply in a practical shape the principle of revolving the use of armor on the of ships. They constructed five ing batteries clad with four iron. Of these the first was the nante, mounting sixteen guns. launched at Brest in 1855. This ironclad warship proper was the Gloire, launched in November, La Gloire was of 5,000 tons displacement and 800 horse power. mous Merrimac and Monitor of the world the first fight between iron but they were not the first metal-fleships. The La Gloire was more than a year before the encounter in Hampton Roads. York American.
