

FAKED PAINTINGS.

Imitations and Forgeries of the Works of Old Masters.

SHARP TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

Specialists Who Are Real Artists in Showing Antique Effects—The Split Panel Deception and an Ingenious Swindling Scheme That Failed.

In addition to a considerable mass of historical information concerning methods employed in producing pictorial works of art, M. Moreau-Vauthier's "Technique of Painting" presents much new and interesting matter concerning devices of imitation picture faking—"trouge," as the French art world calls it—and systematic, deliberate, skillful forgery that have in recent years rendered extra hazardous the purchase of any picture by a recognized master who has joined the great majority.

Many of these tricks require great skill and knowledge—enough, in all seeming, to enable the forgers to become recognized artists of the first class.

If an old canvas can be found—and there are many thousands in Europe—the production of a Titian or Correggio or Veronese is easy. The worthless picture is painted over or cleared off or the latest fashion—provided with a new canvas face on which a fine forgery has been painted.

Varnish tinted with bitumen gives appearance of age; licorice juice, ashes steeped in water and lampblack are used to imitate the dirt of time. There are specialists in fly stains, clumsy retouching designed to emphasize age by contrast, and in signatures—a select class, these latter, who call themselves monogramists.

They know the manner of each great painter, the way he signed his pictures and the place and color used. Sometimes the name is cunningly concealed under a layer of dirt or paint, so that the buyer of this particular "old master" may have the pleasure of discovering it for himself.

The author gives the names of several painters who find a ready road to wealth in multiplying for foreign markets the Rousseaus, Diazs, Corots, Daubignays and Courbets and the like, without which no home of luxury is deemed complete.

Unfinished studies by famous artists sold after death at some official venue bear the regular sale stamp, a priceless token of authenticity, wherefore the clever forger makes the dimly suggested picture a finished composition, which carries on its back an indisputable certificate of genuineness.

Still more adroit is the trick played after the Fromentin sale, where one of these art harpies bought the painter's "Arab Falconer," painted on a wooden panel. The panel was sawed through edgewise, giving the forger a genuine Fromentin without the sale stamp and a black panel bearing the sale stamp. Result, two "genuine" Arab Falconers, sold far apart, with no way at hand to disclose the imitation.

Sometimes, it is pointed out, the novelty of the trick employed works its own defeat, as in the case of a Florentine dealer who sold a rare old painting to a French collector. He offered to send it to the buyer's hotel and asked him to write his name and address on the back of the panel in order to remove all doubt. This was done, but then the collector changed his mind and carried the picture off despite the dealer's protestations.

When the traveler got home he took the picture out of its frame to clean it. He found that he had brought away two pictures. The first, which he had bought, concealed a copy, on the back of which he had signed his name.

This was almost perfect rascality. If the collector had had the picture sent to his hotel he would have received the copy. If he had protested that it was not the picture he bought he would have been shown his own signature on the back of the panel.

The Italian government prohibits the exportation of native art works except by permission that is very hard to get. But the collectors and the owners of old family pictures find no difficulty in evading this. They order copies, but send in place of the originals and secretly send the latter out of the country. Thus a genuine old Italian master is one of the easiest things to acquire in the realm of high priced art.

Advertising Pays 100 Per Cent.

A Kansas man lost a five dollar bill and advertised for it. In a day or two a man appeared in his office, saying that he had seen the advertisement, and handed him the bill. In a few days the Kansas man was going through his "other" clothes and found the original bill which he thought he had lost. Notwithstanding the fact that the events in this story may sound suspicious, the lesson is obvious.—Kansas City Star.

PUZZLED THE DRIVER.

Now He Believes the Policeman is a Real Mind Reader.

A certain truckman in the habit of using the new Manhattan bridge on his morning trip to Brooklyn has abandoned that route because of superstition.

Several days ago while the truckman was taking a load of chicken crates to Brooklyn a fine cap flopped down before him just as his team had passed under the Manhattan tower. He looked around, and seeing that none of the teamsters ahead of him or behind him was bareheaded, he picked up the cap and put it under the cushion of his seat.

Now, it chanced that the cap had been blown from the head of one of the engineers of the bridge department who was high up in the tower at the time. On reaching the tower base he called up the policeman at the Brooklyn approach on the telephone, described the teamster and his wagon and told how he had lost his cap.

As the long file of trucks passed by the policeman the latter halted the thieving driver, saying: "Til trouble you to hand over that cap you picked up on the Manhattan" side. It's a black and white check, and you've got it right there under your seat."

Amazed and frightened at the cop's demand, the driver pulled out his hidden find and tossed it to him. "Here you are," he said. "You're a mind reader or one of them guys what can see around corners."—New York Tribune.

MASSENET'S HOBBY.

A Story of the Composer and His Dear Friend, the Bookbinder.

In the recollections of Massenet a story is told, says the Hamburger Nachrichten, illustrating the composer's passionate admiration for beautiful bindings. Not a week passed without a visit from him to his bookbinder when he brought a new book or a new edition to be bound. In the course of time he and his bookbinder became the best of friends, and when Massenet arrived the talk was at first of everything on earth except the real object of his visit.

"Look here!" Massenet would say eventually, giving the man the volume to be bound. "Splendid!" replied the bookbinder, and then for his customer and friend he would devise some fresh wonder in the art of binding.

One morning Massenet suddenly learned that his friend was giving up business. He hurried to his shop. "Heavens! Is it true you are leaving Paris?" he asked.

"Why, certainly! I have bought a charming little country house near Nantes."

"What! A country house! And in the provinces?" And he added sadly, "Ah, my poor friend, I am partly responsible for that!"

Who Am I?

Last leap year I did not want to embarrass my best girl to make her propose to me, so asked her to be my wife, and she said, "I would rather be excused," and I, like an idiot, excused her. But I got even with the girl. I married her mother. Then my father married the girl. Now I don't know who I am.

When I married the girl's mother the girl became my daughter, and when my father married my daughter he is my son. When my father married my daughter she was my mother. If my father is my son and my daughter is my mother, who in thunder am I? My mother's mother (which is my wife) must be my grandmother, and I being my grandmother's husband, I am my own grandfather.—National Monthly.

A Bargain.

A young society woman met a count and fell in love with him. Her father was opposed to a match of this kind and declared the foreign nobleman was simply after his money.

"Count," said the young woman one evening, "you can't imagine how my love for you distresses my parents. My father told me he would give $10,000 if I would never see you again."

"Ah, darling," said the count, "see your father in heels offees now, you sink?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Very Complimentary.

Mrs. Gray (meeting two acquaintances on the parade)—Oh, I didn't know you were here, Mrs. Green! Awfully pleased! You must come and spend an evening with us.

Mrs. Green—It's very kind of you, but you must really excuse us. You see, we've never been in the place before, and we're only here for a few days, so, of course, we must make the best use of our time.—London Express.

Old Age.

Old age as it comes in the orderly process of nature is a beautiful and majestic thing. It stands for experience, knowledge, wisdom. That is old age as it should be, but old as it often is means poor digestion, torpid bowels, a sluggish liver and a general feeling of ill health, despondency and misery. This in almost every instance is wholly unnecessary. One of Chamberlain's Tablets taken immediately after supper will improve the digestion, tone up the liver and regulate the bowels. The feeling of despondency will give way to one of hope and good cheer. For sale by all dealers.
