

CLOVERDALE PUGILISTS ARE INDICTED.

Judge Would Not Allow Prosecution to Offer Evidence--Law is Defective--Cases Are Dismissed.

The grand jury indicted Charles Saling, James A. White, Roy Saling and Adolph Ritcher, charging them of the crime of aiding and abetting a prize fight at Cloverdale on April 4th.

When County Attorney Gersoni placed his first witness on the stand Attorney Johnson objected to the introduction of evidence as there was nothing in the indictment to show that a crime had been committed.

Judge Holmes promptly rendered his decision and sustained Attorney Johnson's motion that the prosecution could not introduce evidence.

"The Supreme Court of this state has decided that you cannot bring an indictment upon a common law offense, and so far as this statute is concerned, it relies on what you might call common law.

County Attorney Gersoni was so nonplussed by the ruling of the court that he could do nothing, so moved the court to dismiss the indictments against all the prize fight defendants.

ed in the statute, and with sufficient certainty at least, to enable the court to determine, from the words used in the statute, whether the act charged in the indictment comes within the prohibition of the law.

The rule of strict construction only applies to that portion of the Statute which defines the offense and prescribes the punishment, and applying this unalterable rule of construction, there is no definition whatever in the Statute, to which any effect can be given at all.

County Attorney Gersoni was so nonplussed by the ruling of the court that he could do nothing, so moved the court to dismiss the indictments against all the prize fight defendants.

Made My Life Worth Living

"I feel it my duty to tell others what Chamberlain's Tablets have done for me," writes Mrs. L. Dunlap, of Oak Grove, Mich. "I have suffered with pains in my back and under my shoulder blade for a number of years, also with a poor appetite and constipation. I tried all of the remedies that I heard of, and a number of doctors, but got no relief. Finally a friend told me to try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I got a bottle of them and they soon helped my stomach; by their gentle action my bowels became more regular. Today I feel like praising them to all who suffer as I did, for they have cured me and made my life worth living."

WOMEN WARRIORS.

One That Was Made a Heroine in Spite of Herself.

There are few countries that have not at one time or another had women soldiers in their ranks—either in disguise or openly accepted despite their sex. England, France and Germany have all had military heroines. Germany, which traditionally demands of its women only softness and domesticity, has nevertheless had its full share. One of them, Eleonore Prochaska, had saved her wages as a cook to buy her man's equipment. In her last battle, when storming some heights under heavy fire, she snatched a drum from a fallen Frenchman and beat the charge as she advanced.

"You can sew, cook, wash, sing and shoot better than any of us," said the comrade at her side admiringly, "and now it seems you can drum too!"

A moment later she was mortally wounded. As she fell she called to the nearest officer, with a dying flash of pride and humor:

"Lieutenant, I'm a girl!" Another girl, Anna Luhring, only eighteen, was traced and claimed by her father after she had enlisted, but her captain refused to dismiss so fine a soldier.

A young dressmaker, Sophia Kruger, who made her own uniform before enlisting, won the Iron Cross for bravery. Maria Werder, a farmer's wife, served, undiscovered, with her husband and was promoted to be a sergeant, although he remained a private.

An amusing contrast to these genuinely gallant women is afforded by Johanna Stegen, who quite by accident won a reputation for heroism. She and a companion, Caroline Berger, were caught by chance in the fighting lines at the battle of Luneberg. Caroline fled to what cover she could find, tore off her apron and began blinding the hurts of the wounded who had crawled there also.

Johanna, spying a heap of cartridges, tore off her apron also and began to fill it, for she mistook them for rouleaux of coin. A passing officer supposed naturally she was carrying ammunition to the front and gave her orders where to take it, orders which she dared not disobey. Apronful after apronful of cartridges she carried—and the next day found herself acclaimed a heroine!

Her apron was tied to a staff and borne proudly at the head of the regiment. Men cheered her, the king praised her, and she sat at his right hand at a banquet. Later she married and was lionized by the fashionable ladies of Berlin.—London Tatler.

No Title Page in Early Books.

The idea of a title page did not occur to the early printers. "The books started straight off with 'Inclit' or 'Here beginneth,' without author's or publisher's name. This causes much difficulty in attributing earlier works to the proper sources." The idea of a title page with names seems first to have occurred to a Cologne printer named Theobroden about 1470, but it was not generally adopted until fifty years later. The early punctuation was very simple, consisting of an oblique line and a full stop. One of the first books to introduce the colon and notes of interrogation and exclamation was a "Lactantius" printed at a monastery near Rome in 1465.—Imprint.

London's Gunpowder Alley.

The city coroner, who commented upon the "funny" name of Gunpowder alley (off Shoe lane) and confessed that he had never heard of it, may nevertheless have heard of the poet Lovelace, who died in the alley two years before the restoration. The lodging in which he died was a miserable one, but probably seemed to the poor poet released from prison a glorious palace, for he was philosopher enough already to have written that "stone walls do not a prison make." In this alley also lived the notorious astrologer, Lilly, the Sidrophel of "Hudibras."—London Chronicle.

A Cure For Hiccups.

Fill a glass tumbler with clear, cold water and place on a table. Then let the patient stand where he or she can look directly into the glass and fix the attention about the center of the bottom of the glass for about a minute, when the patient will find that the hiccups have entirely disappeared. This has been known to cure the most violent cases of this uncomfortable disorder.—London Family Herald.

To Make Vinegar.

Save the parings and cores of apples and put them in a jar with warm water enough to more than cover them. Set in a warm place for several days; then strain and add one pint of molasses to a gallon of the water. Put in a jar, tie a thin cloth over it, keep in a warm place and in a few weeks this will be good vinegar.—National Magazine.

Different Proposition.

"What is the object of your society?" "To prevent gambling among women." "Nonsense. It can't be done." "Certainly gambling can be stopped." "Gambling? I thought you said gambling."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Grounds.

"Has your husband given you grounds for divorce?" asked the woman who is always eager to sympathize. "Yes," replied the one whose mind is on alimony. "Plenty of grounds, but I'd rather have some regular real estate."—Washington Star.
