Federal Censorship of Films.

No doubt the lobby that is urging .20 .60 .50 the House Committee on Education to recommend the passage of a bill that would provide for federal censorship of motion-picture films is composed of high-minded persons, actuated by the loftiest motives. .00 They urge upon the committee the fact that there are now 18,000 mo-tion-picture theatres in the United 00

States, with an average daily attend-ance of 16,000,000 persons, many of whom are children. That only clean and wholesome films should be ex-hibited to a miscellaneous assembly, in which there are youthful spectatin which there are youthful special-ors, with plastic minds and immature characters, goes without saying. If the censorship could be restricted to the elimination of immoral and hurt-ful pictures, the wisdom of its estab-lishment could not be questioned. But the human equation can not be ignored. Experience with consorship, extending back to remote times and 43 00 17

00 extending back to remote times and covering many lands, has demon-strated that official power feeds on it-00 self and that bigotry does not hesi-tate to smudge anything that dis-62 pleases it. The action of petty officials and of a few library boards has demonstrated, even in our own country and in our own time, on what whim-sical grounds some of the most mer-00 00 itorious books and works of art may be placed under the official ban. Among Americans one of the most prized possessions is freedom to speak and write, subject to the laws of the land holding a person respon-sible for what he has said or published. It came as a result of an age-old struggle with tyrants of thought. Men rotted in jails and mounted scaffolds and stood at burning stakes in its behalf. It is too rich a heritage, costing too much blood and tears, to be surrendered to an official, even though he be elected by the people. No matter what high purposes may be urged for the establishment of a censorship or how flagrant may be the abuses sought to be corrected, there is an ever-present danger that a censor will become arbitrary in the exercise of his power. The possibilities of the motion-pic-ture are immense, both in the way of entertainment and education. In many respects the films are more im-pressive than the printed page and jobody can estimate the far-reaching effect they are daily producing on the present and future citizens. Reputable theater owners are interested in maintaining the reputation of their places and in holding the good will of their patrons. Parents should see that the theaters attended by their that the theaters attended by their children are reputable. Officers of the law should see that exhibitors of immoral and degrading pictures are relentlessly prosecuted. If the present laws are inadequate they should be amended. But there does not seem to be any imminent peril which would justify the adoption of censorship in advance, a policy so foreign to our free institutions.
