THE TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.

Editorial Snap Shots.

The City Council is adopting a novel method of keeping the hose company together. It will pay the boys each $1.00 whenever they respond to the fire alarm.

The Nehalem Valley Reporter must have changed to a semi-monthly, by the look of last week's issue, as well as a third edition of the Headlight of March 4. What's the matter Bro. Hamilton? Has the good old Democratic free trade party put Wheeler on the bum?

Probably quite a number of the dairymen in Tillamook County know how to run county and state affairs economically, but those who are paying $20.00 a ton for hay are not running their farms very economically, and, if we may be permitted to make a suggestion, it seems to us that they need some elementary lessons how to run a dairy farm economically and profitably.

The State Legislature was rough on political sore heads. When a person runs for office in the primary election he has to swear that he will not accept a nomination if defeated. So many office seekers are strictly party men when running for office and wanting the nomination of some political party, but when defeated they flop over to some other party or run as an "independent." The legislature was surely rough on political sore heads.

Quite a number of our citizens who had never seen a type setting machine before, have visited the Headlight office the past few months and watched the machine. We understand that others would have done so, but they thought they would be intruding. We want to say that the latching is always out for citizens to visit this office and see what the snap shot man thought impossible in his younger days—a machine that would set type as fast as ten type stickers.

The city authorities have started a clean-up movement, and those who keep their premises in a dirty condition are going to be prosecuted. We move that a delegation of the Civic League accompany the city officials when making their inspections. It is not only imperative that the city should be cleaned up, but it should be kept clean. Tillamook is somewhat behind other cities in matters of beautifying the city with flowers, etc., but we hope to see a decided improvement and much progress made this year. Everybody get the clean-up spirit and vie with one another who can make their homes look the prettiest with beautiful flowers.

The snap shot man is of the opinion that too much money is going out of the county for hay, and that the dairy men would be far better off if they grew more roots etc. In the early history of the dairy industry in this county, the dairymen bought little or no hay, depending upon their own crops to feed their cows. Now a whole lot of dairymen are paying $20.00 a ton for hay, and feed at that figure means only one thing—very little profit. With so many kinds of feed that can be successfully raised in this county, it is surprising the large amount of hay and other feed that is shipped in and a big lot of money shipped out to pay for it. But this is not the only way to view the situation. How can those with high priced land make both ends meet? We don't want to be misunderstood, but there is only one solution to the feed problem for those who are encumbered with high priced land. They've got to quit buying hay at $20.00 and raise their own feed, or the sheriff will sooner or later have to sell the high priced farms.

Under the present arrangements with Tillamook, Polk and Yamhill counties in one judicial district, there will be three terms of the circuit court each year, which is now necessary. When the law goes into effect making Washington and Tillamook counties a judicial district, it will confine this county to two terms of the circuit. There was no need of this change as far as Tillamook County was concerned, and for that reason the law should be referred to the vote of the people. Why create more offices when there is no demand nor need of them? The taxpayers should have something to say about this extra and unnecessary expense. We hope that some organization will be formed to have this bill referred to the people, for as we have just been informed, there is no more need of this judicial district in Washington county than there is in this county. On general principles this bill should be defeated, and we hope the grangers and other organizations will get busy and swat the bill by having it referred.

With the manufacture of lime in this county, this will cut some figure in the cost of hard surfacing the county roads. There are a number of different kinds of pavements, some of which are excellent, but it is the cost that makes it almost prohibitive when a large amount of hard surfaced road is contemplated. Since it is generally concluded that macadam roads will not stand up under the present mode of travel and the cost is so great for maintenance, it is almost imperative, as a matter of economy, to lay hard surfaced roads as soon as possible and as little money on macadam roads. We believe in home industry and want to lend a helping hand to those who help to create payrolls in the county. The Tillamook Lime Products Co., is a local enterprise, and with commendable enterprise has consummated a plan that will give Tillamook County hard surfaced roads at a figure far below most other materials used. We are going to make a suggestion, which we hope the county court will consider. There is a small stretch of road north of the city, between the Warrenite and concrete hard surfaced roads, we would suggest be paved with new material advocated by this company. The cost of doing so would be small, and it would give the people an opportunity to judge as to the merits of the three different materials and its costs. The county court did right when it experimented with Warrenite and concrete, and now that it appears that a much cheaper road can be constructed with home materials, we believe it is right to experiment with this also. Why can't the county court and the new company get together and put in the small piece of road we have mentioned?

The death of Captain Paul Schrader removes from our midst one who played an important part in the early development of Tillamook county. The most difficult problem this county had to contend with was transportation in its early history, in fact, until a few years ago, and it was here where Captain Schrader showed his worth, and enterprise during his 27 years residence in this county. It is no small boy's job to navigate small steamers during winter storms on the Pacific coast, and when it is taken into consideration that for the most part of 27 years Captain Schrader missed only a few weekly trips during that long period he held a remarkable record, for he met with but few accidents and little loss of freight on account of weather. Captain Schrader used good judgment when and when not to cross the bar, and from his long experience with the Tillamook and Columbia bars, took no chances of losing his vessel or the lives of his passengers. That was the secret of his success as captain of the Augusta, W. H. Harrison and the Sue H. Elmore. Probable the most serious accident he encountered was soon after the Sue H. Elmore was built, and after she had put to sea from Tillamook. If we remember correctly, something went wrong with the pumps and instead of pumping water out of the vessel it pumped water in. The Captain promptly returned with the steamer to Garibaldi, where the defect in the pump was adjusted and the water pumped out, the only damage being to the labels on the canned salmon he had on board. Those who were passengers on the Augusta, and Harrison, which lacked accommodations, know how pleasant the Captain used to make them under the circumstances, especially when sea sickness layed most of his passengers out, giving up his own cabin for their benefit and comfort. We regret very much the death of Captain Schrader at this time, when he was planning a little ease and enjoyment in his declining days after a strenuous life on ship board—baffling with storms and fog and other dangers of the deep. Tillamookers will always have a kindly word for Captain Schrader, and we want to express their sympathy to the bereaved family in this hour of sorrow.

The Man Who Came Back.

The Hon. Joseph G. Cannon was visited at his home at Danville, Ill., the other day by a federal grand jury which had been impaneled to investigate the mode and manner of his election. About the middle of November last, after it was seen that Republicans had returned to Congress all of the standpatters defeated two years earlier, who had stood for a reelection, stories of fraud, intended to break the force of such a blow to the Democrats, were manufactured in Washington. It was announced that grand jury investigations, under federal law, would be made. It is possible that, at the first, the administration really did fail to believe that the Republican party was reuniting around its old leaders. At any rate, it soon made the discovery that there was not a shadow of a case of fraud to be shown against the former speaker, and when the grand jurors assembled in Danville and reviewed the case, they were not slow in reaching the same conclusion. At the close of their work they signified to Mr. Cannon that they would be glad to call upon him, and were cordially invited to come.

It was a "smoker", of course, with Uncle Joe in his best vein and best humor. Some of the jurors thought his prime Havanans a trifle strong, and marveled that a man at his age could consume so many. They had a pleasure in watching the smoke of an old man who has "come back", after a thousand brass-faced gongs had counted him down and out. They took a personal view of the case. The political view is as interesting.

According to the dispatches Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations, has been making a display of his panaceas before the Chicago congregation, adding a few of his already large assortment. Among them is the demand that a $2.50 a day wage be fixed by law as the minimum for unskilled labor. It is not understood that he is pressing this at present. This is not exactly the psychological moment. But being one of these "forward looking men", of whom we heard much two years ago, he naturally expects the return of a Republican administration, when men will be discussing the size of wages instead of spending their time looking for a job at any old wages. Mr. Walsh is also accredited with the statement that every man with a great fortune must at some time have crossed the line of ethics and of criminal laws. Of course, he would not include successful lawyers in this category. And he surely should have exempted Mr. Ford and a few other choice spirits who have shown such fine enthusiasm for Mr. Walsh's general program.

"COME BACK" AT SHERIDAN.

The Headlight Turns the Limelight Onto that Burg in Yamhill County.

"Tillamook still keeps in the limelight of publicity and its doing things seem to be one darned thing after another."—Sheridan Sun.

We commented upon this last week and since then the editor of the Headlight has been allowed to peep behind the scenes as to what is happening in Sheridan, and upon this matter the Sun is holding its whistle, or to be more correct, afraid to express it. Since that newspaper has taken a whack at Tillamook, we propose to "come back" good and hard. We hope it won't raise the indignation of the Sun nor hurt the feelings of a few prominent citizens of Sheridan, now that we have decided to turn on the limelight and give a graphic description of "one darned thing after another" that happens in that burg. Peaceable law abiding citizens will have nothing to fear at the revelation we are going to make.

Our information is from a reliable source and came from Sheridan, and we hope the Sun will read carefully what is alleged in the exposure. Here it is in part:

"I see the Sheridan Sun seems to think Tillamook is doing one darned thing after another, but does not mention things that are going on around his own little town that can outdo Tillamook. He would have you believe everything is very nice here."

That is the first rap over the knuckles the Sun got from our informant. Now how does this read:

"Last Tuesday night some of the school boys from this place went to Willamina to play basket ball. A lot of others went along. Some of them came back drunk and as noisy as a lot of wild Indians."

Surely the Sun must have known something about a lot of school boys being drunk and raising hell in Sheridan, and our informant mentions the names of two prominent citizens who were amongst those who were gloriously boozed.

This is not the worst feature of this disgraceful affair, for it is alleged that one of the drunks: "Went to his home and got into a fight with his wife, and after she got lose from him she ran across the street to the bakery screaming till she raised many of the neighbors. The man went after her and cuffed her around and he got her by the feet and dragged her in that way out into the street without a stitch of clothing on her, except what was under her arms, in the presence of people that had been aroused in the after part of the night by the racket. He took her back across the street into the house. He then came back to the front of the house with his gun and made the people who had gathered around raise their front feet high towards the heavens, and although their reach was not exactly to his satisfaction he requested them to go higher. During this time his wife escaped through the back door and ran several blocks screaming and raising the neighborhood saying her husband was after her with a gun. I understand this is not the first time she had her face bruised by him."

This shows where the Sun got its information of "one darned thing after another" happening, and then our informant goes on to say:

"Many of the better class of the people here are talking of trying to have something done" with these two prominent citizens, and deposit them from their positions!

Then our informant had a slam at the city authorities, which the Mayor and City Council of Sheridan should investigate, for it is neither to their credit nor to the credit of Sheridan to have such disturbances as we have revealed, to pass off with a paltry fine. For the information of the Mayor or the city councilmen, we will quote what our informant has to say:

"All the Sheridan Sun knows of this is that there was a little disturbance on Main street and that a fine of $5.00 was imposed."

Gee Wiz, Mr. Mayor of Sheridan, is $5.00 all that the city can impose on those who are guilty of such disgraceful, drunken debauchery and brutal conduct by prominent citizens of Sheridan? Or is it, Mr. Mayor, that some of your city officials are friends of the guilty parties and they were let off with a paltry fine?

We are sorry that we have to "come back" good and hard at Sheridan, but it won't do any harm for a fearless outspoken newspaper to draw a graphic picture of what is going on, for it helps to improve the moral atmosphere of any town to expose "one darned thing after another" that happened in Sheridan.

Mr. Bryan will continue to go a chautauquing. It would be cruel and unusual punishment to hush him and consequently in violation of the constitution.

Swastika Club.

The club met at the home of Mrs. E. E. Koch, Feb. 26. The table and rooms were decorated in honor of Washington's birthday. After the games, the hostess invited the guests to the dining room, where an elegant lunch was served.

At a late hour hour all departed, and will meet with Mrs. C. Miller, March 26. The officers elected for the year were: Mrs. B. D. Lamar, Pres.; Mrs. Carl Hunt, Vice Pres.; Mrs. C. Miller, Secretary.

Tom Watkins Commits Suicide.

The lifeless body of Tom Watkins was found early on Saturday morning in a stall of the old Dawson barn by Nick Melchoir and Howard Edmunds. He had committed suicide by taking a dose of chloroform. The deceased had worked on the P. R. & N. and was the first conductor on the passenger trains, first running between this city and Mohler and afterwards was the conductor on the trains running to Portland. He lost his position on account of a spotter detecting him drinking. This seems to have worried and depressed him so much that when his money was gone he took his life. He had a wife and son in Cambridge, Mass. The deceased was a Mason, and the remains were buried in the Oddfellow's cemetery on Monday.

Death of Captain Paul Schrader.

We are sorry to announce the death of Captain Paul Schrader, which occurred at midnight at his home in this city on Friday. Although his death came as a surprise to a number of the citizens, it was known that the doctor had predicted that he would not live many months, the cause of his recent sickness and death being a contraction of the arteries of the heart. He was born on March 21st, 1850, at Bremner Germany, and went to sea when he was only 13 years of age. During Franco-Prussian war he was in the German navy and served on a torpedo boat. After the war he followed the sea and became captain of the sailing vessel W. R. Wiley, and made one trip to Montreal Canada and San Francisco, after which he came to Oregon and bought a farm in the Waldo Hills near Salem. He was married to Miss Lillie E. Hunt in that city December 4, 1881, and six children were born to the union, two of whom died. The Captain soon became tired of farming and a longing to follow the sea again took possession of him. One reason the Captain used to give for quitting farming that it was too dangerous an occupation, that was when old bossy used to kick when he was milking her. Having disposed of his farm Captain Schrader went to Newport and built the steam sloop Augusta in the year 1887, and the next year he made his first trip into Tillamook in that vessel with material for Cape Meares light station, which was under construction in that year. The Augusta was put on the run between Tillamook and Astoria, which was a great acquisition to the transportation facilities of the county in those early days, for it insured a regular service. The Augusta was succeeded by the W. H. Harrison, both of which were wrecked, one in Alaska and the other on the Pacific Coast, Captain Schrader had the Sue H. Elmore built and he supervised her construction in Portland, and when she was put on the run between Tillamook and Astoria it was a great improvement; over the other vessels, for the Sue H. Elmore had two state rooms and a number of sleeping bunks for the convenience of passengers. For 27 years Captain Schrader was on the run between Astoria and Tillamook, and during that long period he was unusually fortunate in not meeting with accidents, for he was a most careful skipper and would not put to sea when the weather was bad or threatening, and although some persons at times questioned his judgment those who knew the dangers of getting into a storm or butting into a big breaker on the bar, were always ready to abide by the captain's discretion, preferring to be safely tied up in port to risking the dangers of a severe storm and being kept at sea on account of bad bars. It is true that the Captain several times ran into bad storms, but he knew how to handle his vessels and kept them out of danger. With the exception of a few small mishaps, and when the pumps went wrong on the Sue H. Elmore, Captain Schrader had a remarkable record, not losing any freight or lives during the 27 years he ran to Tillamook making over 40 trips a year.

The Captain is survived by his wife and four children, the latter being Mrs. Augusta M. Schelling; Mrs. July E. Hinkle and Otto and Frank Schrader. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, and a member of the Masonic Lodge of this city.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon under the charge of the Masonic Lodge, and the business houses closed during the services out of respect to the deceased Captain.

Nonogenarian Dies at Nehalem.

A. S. Handy, the oldest resident of the Nehalem Valley, died at his home Monday. He was 92 years old and had lived here 15 years. He was planning to make a trip East with one of his grandsons and arrangements had been made for the departure when he was taken ill suddenly. He is survived by four sons who live at Nehalem.

Douglas County Gets $20,000 From State Highway Fund.

When County Judge Reuben W. Marsters and Commissioner Nichols took office the first of the year they felt that Douglas county had something coming from the state highway commission. Last year this county paid a considerable amount of money to the state and part of this went into the highway fund. None of the money however, was paid back to Douglas County in the shape of road improvements by the state. Shortly after the new state administration came into office Marsters and Nichols left for Salem in an effort to get the state highway commission to pay to Douglas county sufficient money to assist in the work of bettering the Pacific Highway through the county. They appeared before the board which consists of Governor Withycombe, State Treasurer Kay and Secretary of State Olcott. Then the board agreed that Douglas county should have something in the nature of a refund. Still nothing was definitely done and so the matter rested till Tuesday.

Thursday morning County Judge Marsters appeared before the board at Salem and went into the situation very fully. After careful consideration the board finally agreed to give to Douglas county the sum of $20,000.00 to assist in the permanent improvement of the Crow Creek Canyon. This money will be available within a few weeks and will materially assist the county court in the betterment of the Pacific highway for the heavy tourist traffic which is expected this year on account of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.—Umpqua Valley News.

Gives Birth to Four Babies.

Redding, Cal., March 12.—Mrs. C. O. McKnight, wife of a rancher of Ballavesta near Redding, is the proud mother of four babies—two boys and two girls—who were born shortly before midnight, all within the short space of two hours time.

Each was perfectly formed and normal in every way. At noon the attending physician said that Mrs. McKnight was well and happy, and that her babies were progressing finely. A baby incubator was rushed by automobile from Redding to the McKnight ranch.

Mrs. McKnight is 40 years old and weighs 150 pounds. She is the mother of nine children living, all born singly. Her husband is 45 years of age.

The McKnights were unprepared to cloth this remarkable burden, so kindly women of the neighborhood went to their aid. Other prospective mothers carried to the McKnight home the dainty baby clothes and other infantile necessities they had themselves. Within a few hours each baby had a wonderful wardrobe.
