Lous Clark, president of the Hood River Commercial Club, was in the city on Wednesday. Mr. Clark is one of the leading citizens of that city, and was a county commissioner who was recalled but was reappointed.

A number of petitions are being circulated, and signed by prominent business men and heavy taxpayers, to refer the matter of a new city hall to a vote of the people. There appears to be a large proportion of the citizens who favor the erection of a new building.

Mate Johnson of the Geo. R. Vosburg, had a close call on Friday making soundings crossing Tillamook bar. The vessel was struck by two big breakers, pouring tons of water on the deck which washed Johnson overboard. A life buoy was thrown to him and he was fortunate in grabbing it. He managed to get on board without any serious injuries.

Mrs. Frank Rhodes Sues for Divorce.

A divorce suit was filed by Mrs. Evelyn Rhodes against her husband Frank A. Rhodes in the circuit court. These parties were married on the 12th of July 1910, in Marion county. The complaint alleges that the plaintiff's parents provided a home and established defendant in business in Tillamook City, and gave him an opportunity to lead a successful domestic and business life, that shortly after the marriage defendant began a course of cruel and inhuman treatment, a careless life, neglected business, frequented saloons and squandered his money; that on account of this defendant failed and refused to render plaintiff support and she was compelled to earn her own living; that in 1912 defendant, in order to raise money, borrowed $500 and mortgaged the furniture which had been donated to her as her separate property by her parents; that on account of the defendant's misconduct plaintiff was compelled to leave him on the 29th of March, 1915. The plaintiff asks that she resume her maiden name Evelyn Woods.

Volunteers Wanted.

Attorney J. L. Henderson is organizing a party to slash out the old lighthouse road to Cape Meares light station. This can be done by 20 or 30 men offering their services for one day. Those who are willing to help in this work should advise Mr. Henderson at once, who will set a date later. This road used to be well traveled some years ago, and the object of slashing it out now is to give people an easy way to get to the lighthouse and Bayocean. It will only take about a day's work with about 30 men. Will you be one of those who will put in a day's work, and supply your own tools, to put this road in use for the summer travel?

Mr. Henderson will leave for Hood River on Sunday, and will be back on Wednesday, and those wishing to help should give their names to Mr. Eberhardt. It is expected that those who volunteer will bring their own tools.

down the stairs, 42 steps. She sustained a broken jaw, three broken teeth, a scalp wound and minor injuries and bruises, and is under the care of Dr. Hawk, of Bay City.

Chas. McMillan and Ivan Ivancovich went to Manhattan beach Wednesday, and while there investigated conditions on the McMillan ranch.

Successful Musical Given by L. B. Erwin's Pupils.

The musical which was given by the pupils of Leland B. Erwin, piano instructor, and under his direction, at the M. E. Church Thursday evening was well attended, every inch of seating capacity being occupied with many people standing up in the hallway and out into the street.

All of the numbers were so well rendered that it would not be fair to give anyone particular mention. However we will say that the rendition of some of the piano numbers stood out quite remarkable and displayed real genius to a marked degree. Mr. Erwin deserves much credit for the success of the musical, his pupils all displaying thoroughness, and everything going off like clockwork.

During the evening Rev. Gittins gave a nice talk on "The First Musician," which was not only interesting but instructive. His remarks fit in just right.

The evening was one long to be remembered. Tillamook is to be congratulated in having such an abundance of musical talent.

Just at the close of the program the pupils and friends of Mr. Erwin presented him with several large bouquets of red and white carnations.

A Dangerous Man?

When Henry Ford established a minimum profit-wage of $5 a day for the employes of his Detroit factories and inaugurated the scale plan to share profits with the wage earners, the capitalistic world variously derided him. He was "playing to the gallery." He was a "sensational advertiser." He was a madman. He was heading for the bankrupt court. Altogether he was a man to be regarded with suspicion, contempt and hatred. The press, affecting to applaud, ridiculed the quixotic departure from the well defined path of sane business. There was hardly a motive, other than that of a sincere, intelligent purpose to serve his fellow man, that was not ascribed to him. We can well imagine the contemptuous snorts of the men who have become multimillionaires through the gentle art of tossing their employes little better than a living wage and themselves pocketing the profits of an industry.

Since that time much water has raced under the bridge, and wicked Mr. Ford continues his "play to the gallery;" he goes on being a "sensational advertiser;" persists in his quixotic views of life and personal responsibility; but he inconsiderately refuses to go into bankruptcy or qual-refuses to go into bankruptcy or qual-inconsiderate of the sensibilities of the Carnegie-Rockefeller pattern of accumulators as to say that it is better that many men be made comfortable than that a few be made rich. Moreover he had the effrontery to say in an unaffected manner to the United States Commission on Industrial Relations last year that his company, on a capital of $2,000,000, earned between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000, with profits between $25,000,000 and $28,000,000 in spite of the fact had judgment of sharing goodies with his men and paying wages 15 per cent above the market price.

But Mr. Ford was not content with flying in the face of Providence in his altogether unbusiness-like and reprehensible fashion; he flies in the face of social prejudice as well, by employing "ex-convicts" (good Christian word that, and eloquent of the beatitudes). He admits, not only shamelessly but with undisguised satisfaction, that he has—not one or two, or half a dozen, but—150 "ex-convicts" working "just like other men", in his factories. He pretends that these ex-convicts are making good, recovering self respect, proving efficient, loyal workmen. As if that were not heretical enough, he smashed a bomb into social orthodoxy by declaring his perfect willingness to give employment to every man discharged from imprisonment in Sing Sing, actually imputing to the great majority of such men an earnest desire to work for adequate compensation.

What can be done with a man like this Henry Ford, who is so mischievously bent on upsetting all our cherished social conventions? He believes in giving men who have been in prison a chance to rehabilitate themselves! He believes they are just like other men! He believes in profit-sharing with workmen! He believes that "no man can bring up a family and hope to own a home on the ordinary rates of wages!" He believes that "no man can do good work mentally and physically for more than eight hours a day!" He not only believes these things, but puts his belief into practical expression! In the fine old days of a glorious past when there was a proper regard for the divinely constituted difference between the man with the money and the drudge, Mr. Henry Ford would have mended his eccentric ways or been taken quietly out and drawn and quartered by good stout horses; but in these careless days, when madmen are tolerated as oracles, philosophers and priests of the humanities, he is a socio-political peril against whom our millionaires should band themselves, or the first thing they know he will persuade the unreasoning mob that Plutocracy is not a wise profession.—Good Words.

When Uncle Russell Sage was eating 15-cent lunches, did he ever dream that his wife would give $15,000 for the protection of wild life?

The Ford is lighter than any other car of its size and power. Light weight means economy. Economy in gasoline consumption. Economy in tire expense. Economy in repair bills—less than two cents a mile for operation and upkeep.

Yet with all its light weight the Ford is the strongest sturdiest car that is built. It is the longest lasting car. Vanadium steel is responsible for that. "Anti-fatigue" steel, scientists call it—the strongest, toughest steel put into automobile construction.

Buyers will share in profits if we sell at retail 300,000 new Ford cars between August 1914 and August 1915.
