THE "PRUDENT MAN"
DOES NOT TRUST TO

MONEY IN OUR BANK

The CAREFUL man—the man who takes no long chances—is the one who will win out over the man who goes blindly into things and trusts to "luck." Nothing can stop the success of a man who keeps sober, works hard and regularly BANKS a part of his income from his labor or his business. Is it not better to have your money and keep your balance GROWING—than to trust to a DANGEROUS "luck?"

Reception a Success.

The teachers' reception which was held in the Guild Hall last Tuesday evening proved a great success in every way. Over 125 were present to enjoy the evening, including the 90 teachers and instructors. The evening's program opened with games which served as introductions to the teachers from different parts of the county. So full was the program that much was omitted when the last event was announced. The local teachers acted out in play from their own interpretation of Lochinvar, dressed in the costumes of the Scotch the little pantomime was a side-splitting event. The banquet was served at the close of the program; and when the teachers and friends were seated around the tables, speeches were made by Superintendent of Schools Onthank M. S. Pittman, of Monmouth; Mrs. Stranahan, of Corvallis; Mrs. Stranahan, the new president of the local Parent Teachers' Association. City superintendent of schools Onthank presided as toast-master. When the closing number was given in the for-

of a reading by Peter Crockatt, and the visitors rose to go home they pronounced the reception the best ever held.

The event was planned as an introduction and get-together affair for the teachers and their friends who are in the city for the three days of the Teachers' Institute and to bring the teachers in personal touch with each other.

Mrs. Hanson and Miss Mabel Goynne planned the program and were ably assisted by the local teachers and students.

STRANGERS HAVE SERIOUS FIGHT IN CITY.

One Man Stabbed Eight Times With Knife—The Culprit Disappears.

On Monday evening a serious stabbing affair occurred between two strangers who had come to this city a few days before, on Third Street east of the Tillamook Hotel. The names of the men are James Donovan and Tom Cooney, and they had gone over the county soliciting work as umbrella repairers, both having a pack of umbrella frames on their back. They had been drinking together quite freely on Monday, and it seems they got into a fistic encounter in which Cooney came out best man after which they mutually agreed to make up and be friends again. Whether they started in to fight again is not known, but Donovan made the statement that Cooney attacked him with a knife, who was wounded seven or eight times in the breast, the back and the hands. Two of the knife thrusts pierced Donovan's lungs and another cut one of the ribs in two. Donovan who was bleeding quite freely made his way to Dr. Wendt's office, who was not in at the time. He went down the stairs onto the street, where his condition was noticed and the doctor sent for. After being attended to in the office he was taken to Dr. Wendt's Sanatorium, where he remained. It was at first thought that he could not recover, but the doctor thinks that he has a chance.

There appears to have been an understanding between the two men after the stabbing that Donovan was to go to a doctor and get fixed up after which they would join one another again, for they had been together for three years.

At first Donovan would not tell who did the stabbing, denying that his pal had done so. He afterwards admitted that he and Cooney had been drinking and got into a fight and that Cooney attacked him with a knife.

No trace of Cooney has been found since the stabbing, although Sheriff Crenshaw has scoured the county and had people watching out. Donovan's hat, a soft brown, was found on the street where the stabbing took place. It is thought that Cooney is in hiding somewhere near the city. Donovan admits that they had often had fistic encounters during the three years they had been together and that Cooney generally behaved himself after a good licking.

Mr. Edmunds further stated that he had personally interviewed the manager of the Board of Underwriters and had been assured that the erection of the proposed plant would have no effect on insurance rates in the city at large.

School Notes.

Prospects for a winning high school debate team this year are quite bright. A class of 15 is now studying the state debating question, and under the coaching of professor P. C. Crockatt, the debate teacher, a well trained team should be turned out. The actual statement of the question has now been received. "Resolved:—That the United States should adopt the essential features of the Swiss system of military training and service." The tryouts for the high school team will take place just before the Thanksgiving vacation.

The Sophomore class of the high school held a party last Friday evening in the school building, and according to the ancient custom the upperclassmen asserted their authority by spending the evening with them. The faculty members also attended and a good time was enjoyed by all. Games were played until a late hour and then refreshments were served.

The first three school days of this week were holidays for the school students, the teachers attending the institute.

The Junior class planned a hayrack party for last Monday night but the weather interfered with the plans so a party was held in the Guild Hall. The Senior class and the faculty was invited and a good time was enjoyed.

Mr. Onthank has received a letter from Alfred Boquist, who is attending the Agricultural College at Corvallis, stating that he is very well satisfied with the work there.

The fourth and fifth grades are in the midst of a contest for perfect lessons in spelling. At present the fourth grade is ahead, but the fifth is beginning to crowd the fourth grade for first place.

Miss Sanders has recently arrived from Idaho to take charge of the second grade.

Arlene Burge, who is finishing her practice teaching course this year is doing special work with a group of first grade students who need special assistance. The aim of all of the practice teaching courses this year will be to strengthen the weaker students and bring them up to grade. This will give the students taking the teachers' Training Course, the practice teaching required and will do work which is much needed in schools, without cost to the district.

The High School has recently received a case and several smaller packages of books from the State Library, for use in the history work in both grades and high school, for debating and other work. These books which cost the district only the cost of transportation, which does not amount to more than a few cents a volume, are of great value in the courses mentioned. Last year some of the books which were kept for only one term were read by twenty or even more students.

PARLETT'S CAREER.

Nationally Known Lecturer and Writer Worked his Way up from Printer's Devil to Flat-torm Apostle.

"Of course I have had more trouble than any one else—everybody has more trouble than anybody else," says Ralph Parlette, who is to lecture here Monday, Oct. 25th. "I have done about everything from playing in a circus and to superintending a Sunday school. I have worked on a farm as hired man. I have trained an orphan call to drink out of a copper kettle. I have driven a yoke of oxen and said the words I used to think had to go with that job. May the Lord forgive me, but I have worked on the section and pumped the handcar. I have worked in factories, set type, edited, taught school, peddled and even begged my dinner."

Ralph Parlette is the son of Rev. John Parlette, a Methodist minister of Ohio and for many years treasurer of his conference. He was born near Delaware, Ohio, August 30, 1870. He graduated from the high school of LaRue, Ohio, in 1887. He learned the printer's trade at thirteen, and worked his way through college, teaching, setting the type and editing the University Herald, meanwhile carrying full college work. He graduated from the Ohio Northern University in 1891 as historian of the class.

His newspaper writings attracted attention and the readers called him to the platform. Here his real career began. He has become a national figure on the platform. He went over Russia at the close of the Jap-Russian war, writing his experience for American publications.

He began lecturing in 1896, and has been at it ever since, making annual tours into every part of the Union. He gives all the year to this work. He speaks in the winter lyceum courses, before clubs, schools, universities, institutes, and addresses religious gatherings on Sundays. He fills the summer with the chautauqua engagements. He has filled over 4,000 pay engagements and speaks to more than 125,000 people each year.

Grace Parlette, the well-known lecturer for children, is his sister. Ralph Parlette became editor of The Lyceum Magazine in 1909. This magazine has become the acknowledged organ of the entire lyceum and chautauqua movement, so much so that many bureaus book the magazine along the lyceum courses, because of the inspiration and direction it gives to committees.

"The proudest moment of my life," he says, "was to go back to the old school building in Ohio where I used to be janitor, and give the commencement address. The greatest blessing of my life was the necessity that compelled me to work."

Where is the old-fashioned boy who called a man a "guinea" instead of a "guy?"

That's a horrible story about the Nicossian, and if true shows that any scutcheon is in danger of an ineffaceable blot when there is war.
