

State Press Flashlight.

Do you want to know how to get a tip top dinner? Just buy the necessary ingredients and take them home to your wife. She will be more than willing to cook them. The best cook on earth cannot make a tempting dessert out of a hunk of salt pork.—Ione Journal.

The number of accidents due to the blinding glare of auto lights will soon demand legislative regulations, and the sooner it is done the better for the automobile cause. Only last week two deaths in this state were due directly to this cause, and a short time since an accident that damaged two autos and which easily might have resulted in serious injury or even fatally, occurred near this city from the same cause. Most autos are now being equipped with the dimmer lights and they should be more generally used.—Itemizer.

Some agency gets in a pretty deep graft between the pig and the platter. Last week the price of hogs was six cents and the price of bacon 30 and 35 cents. What is done to a piece of port to increase its cost five or six times? Liquid smoke isn't expensive. Farmers tell us today there is a little profit in raising hogs for the market, yet the retail price for the meat is the highest in 50 years. The trouble is the tribute the packing houses levy on it. They fix the price on both the farmers' hogs and on breakfast bacon.—Benton County Courier.

President Wilson is now of the opinion that "we ought to be prepared, not for war, but for defense, and very adequately prepared." The president's words differ materially from his opinion some ten months ago. Then he thought the country had been "misinformed" and that the national defense had "not been neglected." Which opinion is the president's true opinion? Does he not merely voice the fears of candidate for office or is he actually convinced that a year ago he was in error? And this reminds us that "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still."—Astorian.

Before county courts copy Marion County and go into the paving business at taxpayers' expense it would be wise to have available figures as to the full cost, including equipment, supervision and risk; also, to know how the pavement stands up under a few years of wear. One pavement looks as good as another when it is all nice and fresh, but experience teaches that different pavements look very much different after a season or two of weather and wear. And after years of wear, one pretty pavement is gone, while the other is standing up in fine shape, almost as good as new. Which is cheaper for taxpayers, experimentation at their own expense or a guaranteed pavement at the risk of private capital.—Oregon voter.

The Oregon Supreme Court deserves credit for declaring the imbecile new Oregon road law unconstitutional. It proved that thirty per cent of the road funds were for new work and seventy per cent for maintenance. Of the thirty per cent only five per cent could be used for actual road making, the rest was for bridges, culverts, etc. All bridge work, surveying, general supervision, and pay of supervisors had to come out of the thirty per cent. Under this law good roads in Oregon would have been an impossibility and the court deserves a medal for killing the law. Oregon is gradually getting out from under the stigma of being the incubator of crazy-law legislation of all kinds.—Pacific Coast Manufacturer.

Dr. Constantin Dumba, the Austrian ambassador who recently was recalled as a result of being detected in a nefarious conspiracy to foment strikes in American munition plants, is not to go without the reward. The Austrian emperor, so it is reported, has conferred an order of nobility on Dr. Dumba, thereby to show official approval of the retiring ambassador's services. In other words, the Austrian government evidently holds that his duty in striving to advance the interests of his own nation even though his conception of this duty led him to undertake a thing flagrantly and dangerously inimical to American interests and the peace and welfare of the American people. It is entirely within the right of the Austrian emperor to take this course, no doubt, yet it is a procedure that scarcely will contribute to American friendship and esteem for Austria as a nation. It amounts to nothing less than an international slap at the American government for insisting on protecting its own rights and interests—a virtual notice that Austria has no use for this nation unless she can use the latter for her own selfish purposes. Yet one can readily believe that had the situation been reversed Austria would have looked on the offense of Dr. Dumba in a different light. This is a typical fault of several nations in connection with the present war, however—they expect more than they are willing to give or concede. They look only at one side of the question—their own side.—Polk County Observer.

Oregon Under Prohibition

Within two months, Oregon will be as dry as a fatuous and futile prohibition law can make it. In other words we shall not be intolerably dry; we shall shift the bar from the humble mahogany sideboard at home and consume our cocktail in the parlor instead of in the saloon.

But it was something worth while to get rid of the saloon. As we have seen it, we shall never see it again. Some of the Spectator's friends give hospitable heart to the hope that the people will tire of prohibition, and will vote in another wet era. What the people of Oregon may do, no mere man can say; they may reverse themselves on prohibition, but the gastly saloon as we have known it, cannot come back.

The prohibition that we shall enjoy after the first of the year is a singularly mild form of dryness compared with what some of our Eastern friends suffer. We are allowed two full quarts of whiskey, wine, or cocktails, or eighteen full quarts of beer a month. The heavy drinker should be able to get along on that allowance, which can be eked out by the voluntary offerings of friends whose tastes are not so bibulous. But before the law goes into effect, we are permitted to stock the cellars of our homes with all the rare vintages, maltings, and distillings that our tastes demand and our purse can pay for. Where a man sleeps in his home, and the poor, unhappy men who have a wretched existence in hotel or club are taking a little comfort from the thought that before the arid season sets in they can lay by a roomful of liquor for a dry day.

The prohibition law that permits us to have in our possession all the liquor that our cellars can hold, and supplements this by giving us a regular monthly allowance, is not likely to make white ribboners of us within a year. It is a bad law in that while it permits each of us to import eighteen quarts of beer a month, it prohibits our own breweries from making the beer. It seems odd that beer making in Oregon should be put under the ban by the same prohibition law that encourages beer drinking by permitting us to import a dozen and a half quarts a month.

But we need not fear that prohibition, such as it is, will greatly hurt the state. We have been spending about $15,000,000 a year in Oregon for liquor. We shall still have that sum to spend, and if we can't shove it over the bar for "booze" we shall probably spend much of it over the innumerable counters of the state for clothes, shoes, hats, and food. Because no part of the fifteen million dollars may be spent over the bar, many a little child will be better fed and many a mother will be better clad.

Considering all things, including the right to stock up with all the wines and liquors we can buy, and the monthly allowance, the outlook for Oregon under prohibition is not wholly dark.—Spectator.

Walsh-Kuppenbender Wedding.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday morning Nov. 3, 1915 at nine o'clock mass when the Rev. Father Van Clarenbeck, of Tillamook united in marriage Miss Antoinette Kuppenbender of this city and Mr. Michael J. Walsh, of Ketchikan, Alaska, only intimate relatives of both families being present at the ceremonies.

The bride was handsomely gowned in cream silk with silk lace and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations.

The only ornaments worn by the bride was a cross and chain worn by her mother on her wedding day thirty-five years ago.

The only attendants being Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Kuppenbender the latter being a brother of the bride. The maid of honor, Mrs. Hubert Kuppenbender looked charming in her wedding gown of cream silk lacesome trimmed with heavy oriental lace. The unique feature of this wedding that the contracting parties acted as witnesses six years ago at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Kuppenbender.

The wedding march was played by Miss Ruth Kuppenbender niece of the bride.

After the ceremony a hearty wedding breakfast was enjoyed by all. Since coming to this city Mrs. Walsh has won a host of friends by her charming manners and friendly disposition, and will be greatly missed in our social circles.

The groom is also well known both in this city and in Ketchikan Alaska, where he is among the leading business men of the northern city and a favorite among his acquaintances, all of whom join with the Times in wishing the young couple a happy and prosperous voyage over the matrimonial sea. After an extended honeymoon trip on the steamer Great Northern to San Francisco the happy couple will spend the winter at Los Angeles, returning to the Northern city in the spring where Mr. Walsh will resume the management of the large salmon cannery in which he is interested.—Nehalem Times.

Farmers and Homemaker's Short Course.

This is conducted by the Extension Department of O. A. C. and will convene in this county as follows:

Tillamook, November 30, December 1 and 2.

Cloverdale, November 30 and December 1.

Nehalem, December, 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

Many avail themselves of the opportunity to take in the "Short Course" here last spring, so it will be unnecessary to explain to them the nature of the work taken up. For the other, will say that the farm problems of the day as they apply to this particular section will be discussed by experts in the various lines of farming.
