

Uncle Silas Says.

Gertrude—I overheard your discussion today with your guest about the new fashions in women's undergarments, pantalette skirts, and I heard your friend say: "Pauline wears them and thinks them stylish and pretty." I noticed that you disagreed with Pauline and think the garment immodest. Well, dear, I quite agree with you, but, if you are nervous about the pantalette skirt, imagine the shock that you would feel if you should see tomorrow all women going about with ruffled drawers 4 inches longer than their skirts. It almost seems indecent to mention such a matter, yet if you doubt that women of the highest respectability did, at one time—maybe in other earlier periods—go about so clothed, unashamed, and not in the least criticised, you have only to turn to Webster's Dictionary for the proof of your error. Here it is: "Pantalettes—In the dress of women and girls about 1830-1850, long loose drawers, with a frill at the bottom of each leg." I well remember the garments in the long ago, when the wearing of them was almost universal, and the fashion was in vogue far beyond 1850, even up to 1880, among country people in the South. The pantalette skirt is a revival of the fashion of those days, very much modified. There was nothing like a skirt about old time pantalettes. The skirt stopped above the tiny white ruffles, which were a matter of pride to every wearer, and a conspicuous feature of every full dress costume. The revival of that fashion is not, and never will be, universal, because it is too mannish to ever become popular with the misses. Don't lose any sleep over it dear. You won't have to wear pants to be clothed in the best style.

Jenkins, your argument in opposition to the income tax seems to me rather illogical. You say so long as the public will equal and exact justice requires the taxation of every sort of property and asset and credit, just so long the methods employed and the results attained will be ineffective and unjust. Why should this be so? It is because money, stocks, bonds and other securities in which money is invested for profit are hidden from public view and, by reason of their invisibility, they are not property that should be taxed? Now, it seems to me that if visible property only is to be taxed, then none but fools will own it. Every owner of land and other visible property in the United States is now suffering from the very condition you call attention to and that suffering is from a wicked process of strangulation. Those who have visible property are being choked to death by those who have invisible property, and neither the choker nor the choked know what is wrong. If a person owns property its possession is by virtue of our government, is it not? Then why should any one, in any event, escape paying something to the government for that protection, regardless of the kind of property in question? For instance, a person has $100,000 in mortgages and has investment to secure because, (and only because) of the protection of the government in his possession of it and legal title thereto. Another man has $100,000 in real estate, and his holdings are visible, and, like the mortgagor, has peaceable and secure possession by virtue of the government, is there any reason why the man who has invested in property which can be seen must not only pay for his own security but for that of the man who chooses to have or connive at having a property or holdings which cannot be seen? You appear to be convinced that an income tax is not only rankly unjust, but doomed to failure. In my view, however, to allow the swinish gubbs to make money with money alone, at the expense of the government, without cost to them, while all other kinds of property are taxed additionally by reason of their immunity from taxation, would be grossly unjust; but you may be assured that the income tax will be continued and rigidly enforced, and, I firmly believe it will solve all of our government's financial problems. We will never have just government until all contribute alike to the support of that which makes the possessor secure in his holdings.

Aoms, my boy, that woman's chief duty in her home is an assertion that has been applied through all the ages to all women as being the end and aim that justifies her existence. There is no place like home, made comfortable and kindly by the loving wife and mother, as every body knows, and it is by living the life of self-sacrifice of thousands of women that such places are kept for the little people to have their youth safeguarded, and for men who are weary of toil and business to find a delightful haven. Well, regardless of what men have done, women have made more of the sacrifices than men have in giving to the world homes. They are therefore justly entitled to safety and comfort and men in every station of life should give more serious thought and effort in safeguarding the women, who makes possible the home from both present and future misfortune or want. The same may be said of father, but after all, he don't count much, for as the Irishman said in writing to his brother in Ireland and urging him to come to America: "All we have to do here to make a living is to carry the brick and mortar to the top of the building and the men up there do all the work." So it is with father, as he only has to provide the house and the raw material to keep it comfortable and mother does the rest. Mother raises the family, cheerfully giving time, patience, toil and everything that duty calls for never having time to think of self, and her work lasts her lifetime as caretaker, nurse, counselor and best of friends, but if one of her sons become prominent, well, he is the son of his father! Why should such a posterous assertion be made to the exclusion of mother from the honor? In all ages of the world men have built empires, kingdoms and states, while the women have reproduced the people and built and cared for the homes; and from then until now, hand in hand with man, woman has helped to carry the torch of progress across the centuries; and at all times, and in every emergency, she has done her work faithfully and well. Indeed, she has done more than her equal share in the world's work as every true man is willing to admit. However, compliments to motherhood and homemakers won't pay for food, clothing and shelter, and are poor comfort to hard working mother, to which class the majority of mothers belong. They deserve much more than creature comforts and safeguarding from bodily harm and future want—to respectful statement of all men always, and to the tender sympathy and affection of their husband and children. Now, this is for you. Don't think about yourself so constantly and intently that you have no room in your head for thoughts of mother. I have noticed that you are indifferent to the many things she has done for your comfort. When she mends and presses your clothes so carefully, just because they are yours, you should look them over in her presence, compliment her work and give her a kiss in token of your appreciation. When you talk to her always have a tone of tenderness in your voice, and when you part with her for the night, kiss her lovingly, not in a spattering, mater-of-course way. Be good to mother, my boy; she has been good to you all the days of your life.

Mother, I see in the papers here that the learned professors of an Eastern state university have been experimenting with rats to test the correctness of the generally accepted theory of modern science that the interbreeding of animals beyond a certain degree results in physical degeneration. These highbrows claim that results of their experience completely upset the theory, but I suspect that these wise men are perpetrating a sly little jinx in using rats to prove their contention that intermarriage among the human race, that rats, married to sisters, brothers, cousins, etc., become larger is the only result they announce. Yet they conclude that is sufficient reason to warrant intermarriage among people. What if, after several general generations, the rats did become larger? Mere size may be a good thing for a rat, but the human race wants something more than mere size. Some of the world's greatest living thinkers are persons of small size, to say nothing of those in the ages gone by. Then, too, irrespective of the size of the body, noted surgeons have frequently announced that post-mortems upon the brains of noted men showed the brain in many cases to be under size and under weight. Physical perfection, including both size and health is not to be despised, but along with physical perfection must go mental and moral perfection to be of any real benefit to men and women. What did the professors prove to the mental caliber? Nothing. But, then—huh! What's the use? Rats!

Aunt Malinda, I have never heard you say so, but, from the general trend of your talk, I am inclined to believe that you are in favor of woman's suffrage. You say you are a suffragist "with some mental reservations," that is, that primarily, women has as much right to vote as man, but you are not at all certain that conditions would be improved by her voting and you don't believe that a majority of women want to vote. While that may be true, I very much doubt it, but, if it is true, what of it? Had we waited for the majority we would have still been cave dwellers. There has never been a forward step in history of the human race but the stupid majority opposed it. The majority are never in the advance guard; always the few with a vision go ahead and blaze the way for the new and better order of things. When the rocks have been removed and all is smooth going and majority (including the "antis") will come along and claim credit for it all. It is not a question of what women can do with the vote; is it too much to expect women to do in a few years what men have failed to do for ages. Not a question of better laws or more of them, but a question of justice. It is unjust and tyrannical that woman, the conservator of all human life, should have no voice in life's most important function, that of government. Women are not all alike; some fulfill themselves in the narrow environment of the home; others have qualities of mind that do best in an entirely different capacity. To me woman suffrage means a great deal more than dropping a slip of paper into the ballot box. It is the exercise of a natural right of which she has been deprived, namely, self government. I say, away with sex prejudice; open the door of opportunity to all and allow each life to develop in its own way. In spite of the "heavily majority" which the anti-suffragists claim, the fight for political equality will go on, and on to victory, and with it the right for fulfillment, the right to be individual—to be a potent factor in law making and government as well as in the domestic affairs of life.

STATE BOARD FUNDS ARE APPROPRIATED

$212,000 Divided among 12 Counties, $25,000 is for Department's Expenses.

Salem, Or., Nov. 11.—The State Highway Commission today completed its apportionment of the state highway fund for 1916, whereby $212,000 is divided among twelve counties for good roads' construction and $25,000 set aside for administrative expenses of the highway department. Apportionment was made following a conference between the commission members of the advisory board and representatives from counties seeking state aid. At this meeting plans of the various counties for funds were heard. The division follows: Administrative expenses, $22,000; Clatsop County, $20,500; Columbia County, $36,000; Hood River County, $5,000; Hood River and Wasco Counties, $45,000; Crook County, $40,000; Washington County, $11,500; Douglas and Josephine Counties, $20,000; Yamhill and Tillamook Counties, $9,000; Lane County, $5,000; Jackson County, $45,000, and Polk County, $5,000. The commission cut Cantine's recommendation of $18,000 for Yamhill and Tillamook counties in half because of lack of funds. The two counties are rebuilding 5 1/2 miles of road over the divide between them, and when the grade is complete will have expended $25,000.

Please Don't Laugh.

Some ingenious reporter of the Oregonian allowed his imagination to run wild when he undertook to enlighten the readers of that news paper about the Sour Grass road. This is what he says:

"By appropriating $9000 for the joint use of Tillamook and Yamhill counties in road construction, the State Highway Commission has made possible early completion of the road across Sour Grass flats, which are the last remaining barrier against an all year highway between Portland and Tillamook.

The counties of Yamhill and Tillamook have expended substantial sums in the last year to elevate the grade of this road high enough to bar against floods every spring. They have succeeded partially, and the money now due from the state will enable them to complete the project. In connection with this development, the heavy grade over Dolph mountain has been reduced so that a machine can negotiate most of the hill now on high gear. The road is either macadamized or otherwise surfaced so that travel will be open, it is expected through the entire year."

Honey Day.

It has been announced by Floyd E. Smith, of Dallas, Oregon, Secretary of the Oregon State Bee-Keepers Association, that Thursday, November 25, Thanksgiving day, has been set aside by the National Bee-Keepers Association as National Honey Day. This is the first attempt on the part of the Bee Keepers to create interest in this manner in their product, and the idea comes from the "Apple Day" and "Dollar Day" ideas which have proven such a success. The Bee keeping and Honey Producing business is one of the leading small industries of the state of Oregon. It is expected that the people of Oregon will generously help to make Honey Day a great success, and that every Thanksgiving dinner table will present an opportunity of partaking of this wholesome and healthful sweet. Bee Keeping Journals all over the nation are making a great campaign in order to make the first Honey Day a success. The Oregon State Bee-Keepers Association is a branch of the National Association. Bee-Keepers all over the state have been notified and requested to help advertise the day, and notices are being sent to the Press of the state. Get in and boost for "Honey Day."

AFTER ONE YEAR

Hillsboro Testimony Remains Unshaken.
Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Hillsboro story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point that will come straight home to many of us.
William Wolf, Jefferson St., Hillsboro, Ore., says: "My back was so bad that I could hardly get around. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me almost immediate relief. After I had finished one box, my back was all right. There is nothing equal to Doan's Kidney Pills for the cure of kidney trouble." (Statement given Sept. 23, 1911).
Over a year later, Mr. Wolf said: "The cure Doan's Kidney Pills brought has been permanent."

Friends of Foreign Farmers.
The liner Vauban brought in on Saturday (October 23) what is said to be the largest consignment of Argentine beef ever shipped here. She carried 39,532 quarters, or nearly 10,000 head of dressed beef.—New York Commercial.
Will American farmers enjoy this news? To bring in free of duty 10,000 head of dressed beef takes away just so much of the American market from Americans. Under the Payne-Aldrich law there was a tariff of 1 1/2 cents a pound. The Underwood free trade tariff puts dressed beef on the free list, along with pretty much all other agricultural products. Our alien American free-traders are great friends of foreign farmers, are they not?—American Economist.
