SHOTS AT FREE TRADE.

Culled from the Leading Newspapers of the Country.

In China they take the money out of the treasury by force. Here, the Democrats force it out by the tariff legislation.

Congress will put Democracy to the test on the tariff question. It is revise the tariff upward, a bond issue, another war tax, or go broke.

A change of mind as to the tariff commission is by no means the same thing as a change of mind concerning the tariff, and that is what America is most in need of.

A tariff that permits the workers in factories, mills, shops, etc., of the East to buy the products of the fields and farms of the West and South will bring the kind of prosperity that counts.

The President has changed his mind on the subject of a permanent tariff commission. There are other matters calling even more urgently for a rearrangement of his mental furniture.

The Payne-Aldrich tariff brought prosperity, and a large number of republican leaders, finding it necessary to have something to talk about, found fault with it. They made it appear a hideous thing—and now they want another just like it.

While beating our swords into plow shears is now advocated to transform American industrial plants into owlhunts and storage houses for unproductive American-made goods is just what our free trade friends offer us. How do you like the prospect?

Now that France reports that her export trade to the United States has reached two billion francs during the past year of bloodshed, what may we expect when peace gives her markets a free hand to grab our American markets under President Wilson's welcome open harbors of free trade.

President Wilson completely reversed himself and is now advocating a "Tariff commission" He attempts to justify his change of mind on the ground of changed conditions. We really look for the president to be advocating a protective tariff before this congress adjourns.

In our enthusiasm over war orders, let us not overlook the fact that the railroads of this country paid wages the past ten years aggregating over $11,000,000,000, and more miles of railway went into the hands of receivers under the last year of free trade than at any period of the country's history.

If Congress would "restore the tariff" on the 75 per cent of commodities on the free list under the Underwood Wilson tariff law, that act would fill up a great leakage in the national treasury, and be appreciated by the Democratic sugar planters of Louisiana and the farmers of the country, for their troubles are enlarged by reason of being on the free list.

If you are an honest man and will contrast the industrial conditions under the four years of any free trade term, like the Wilson tariff, with a similar period under protective tariff, like the Dingley or Payne tariff era, for instance, you will have a very affirmative answer to give any free trade friend who tells you this country is in no need of the restoration of protective duties.

Just Turn Back and See.

You who don't believe that the tariff has nothing to do with the progress of this country, just turn back to Cleveland's administration and see how the Wilson bill put this country on the bum, and established the bread lines and soup houses. Then follow the McKinley administration and the high tariff for sixteen years; then come to the present administration with its low tariff, the closing of factories, three million workmen on the bum or tramp; this was the condition of the first seven months of the present low tariff administration, and would have continued, or would have been worse if the war in Europe had not broken out. Then look at the income tax, and last but not least, the great deficiency in the treasury. Who ever know or herd of such conditions when we were under a high tariff? It never existed.

We All Know What Causes it.

We have mentioned it once, but for the sake of saying it twice, we will say it again; there is no use for the administration papers to keep on blowing about business being good. We know it, we all know it, but take this careful from yours truly, we all know what causes it. There is no hope for you to tell us that it is caused by the Underwood tariff law; we know that has no more to do with it than the Mikado of Japan has. Most every thinking man knows what is coming to us when war is over without a protective tariff, but thanks be unto God it will not be long until we have a chance to elect a congress that will enact, or re-enact, a tariff law that will keep from our shores the flood of foreign made goods that the most radical free trader admits that will come.

Why Not Do It.

With great good sense the Philadelphia Public Ledger asks: "But why wait for a commission to settle the dye problem? Every practical manufacturer knows what to do in this dye business. Why not do it?" Why not, indeed? And if it comes to that, why wait for a commission to settle any part of the tariff problems? Protection for the establishment and maintenance of the dye industry is an absolute necessity as plain as day. But just as plain is the necessity for the re-enactment of a protective tariff to support the industries we all ready have. Then why wait for a commission? Why not restore a protective tariff first, and take up the commission afterwards?
