

What the Editors Say.

Uncle Joe Cannon believes this nation should precede to establish a military government in Mexico and support it by force until the Mexicans come to their senses. It's a good thing the conventions are over, else some would want to run Uncle Joe for president.—Observer.

If, as it now appears, we are to have unusual seasons this year, why not try to act and think as these few lines from the versatile pen of our dear Hoosier friend, James Whitcomb Riley suggest: "There ain't no use to grumble and complain; it's just as cheap and easy to rejoice; when God sorts out the weather and sends rain; then rain's my choice."—Forest Grove News-Times.

It is a cold day when our munition factories do not salt down a comfortable fortune. They supplied Mexico with guns and ammunition at big profits to menace us, and now they are supplying Uncle Sam with the necessary suit at big profits to clean up the Mexicans. They catch it coming and going. The only thing that will save the world from utter folly is intelligence enough to arbitrate all quarrels between nations.—Telephone Register.

The anger of the Mexican chiefs, at what they call the invasion of their country, is not that they fear the loss of any territory, but that if the invasion in force is made, the United States will insist that a government of order and law shall be established. That is what they dread, for then their sinister occupation would be gone. They could start no more revolutions, make no more raids for food and horses; and possibly might have to go to work to live and there is nothing they dread so much as that. Poor Mexico, "Long is the way and dark that out of hell leads up to light."—Seaside Signal.

Wilson dethroned Huerta and elevated Carranza, the latter holding power through recognition by Washington authorities, though it has never been told how the recognition was brought about. Now "friend" Carranza has turned against the power that made him and the job that should have been done two or three years ago must go forward at this time. It should be remembered, also, that Carranza has been permitted to obtain arms and ammunition from the United States, while all the financial backing he possesses is a result of his recognition by Mr. Wilson. Yet the democratic war cry during this campaign will be "Wilson has kept us out of war." What a howling farce!—Lebanon Criticism.

Now they are going to have a "father's day." What can they do for father? If they make any expense father will have to foot the bill. If they get anything extra for dinner father will have to pay for it. The best thing to do for father is to let him alone, let him sleep as long as he wants to in the morning and let nature take its course. The old man has enough to bear without being shoved into a "biled shirt" and made to sit in an hour in an oak pew, while someone tells him he has been overlooked in the shuffle of life, while his liver is warned and his backbone crooked from being chief bottle washer in a thousand shuffles. Let father alone and give the banquets to the kids and the flummydiddles to the young folks. Pop don't want a darned thing but rest.—Britt (Iowa) Tribune

The richest woman in the world, according to the popular report, died Monday, leaving a fortune estimated at over one hundred million dollars, and the statement follows that she made ninety millions of this herself. This will not seem so remarkable when one considers that she started with ten millions, left by her parents over fifty years ago, and has never been accused of extravagance that would use up any portion of the annual increase, and this has been going on for more than half a century. Take a pencil and figure compound interest on ten million dollars for this time, make sufficient deductions for expenses on a more liberal scale than she probably spent, and the increase does not seem so astonishing after all, and almost any of us would be willing to take a chance to do the same thing if he or she had the ten millions to start with.—Umpqua Valley News.

Whether the fault is with the system or the men who have administered it, the fact remains that the commission form of government as we have it in Portland has proved a dismal, expensive, and utter failure. No one expected that it would be the success that its too fond proponents promised. No product of mere human ingenuity could do the impossible things that these ardent advocates declared would be accomplished by the commission system. Even the very least of the promises they made for it—that it would save the taxpayers a million dollars a year—has not been kept. Indeed, we find that instead of having saved us a million dollars a year, the commission system, through the inherent extravagance of that form of government as well as because of the inefficiency of those who administered it, has cost us much more than did the old councilmanic government.—The Spectator.

The married man gets a home. And, according to the Toledo Blade, he also gets out of a lot of other things. He gets out of being a filler-in at dinner parties where he's not particularly wanted to be. He gets out of a score of horrid invitations, because he has a wife and is expected to be at home, where he belongs at least seven nights out of the week. "I have married a wife," explains the bridegroom of the parable, "and therefore I cannot come." Lo it is excuse enough. It is accepted at face value today as it was nineteen hundred years ago. There are a thousand tiresome things that the world is ever wanting done. There are committees to serve on and Sunday school classes and fraternities and associations for the uplift of something or other. The unmarried man generally does the work. He is the universal, everready server. What possible excuse has he for getting out of anything? He has no wife. He can come. So he comes—even to the threshold of the sanitarium.—Astorian.

A chance remark was made the other day to the effect that if "Norwegian ships continue to be sunk the little nation will be without merchant vessels." The person making that remark did not realize the importance of the little Scandinavian nation on the seven seas. "Little Norway" is today the third nation of the world in strength of merchant marine. It was fourth before the war when the third place was held by Germany. Incidentally it may be interesting to those who suppose we are helplessly outdistanced by everybody else to know that the United States has the second merchant marine in the world, and we have it by a margin exceeding the combine strength of any two nations except Great Britain. The trouble with our shipping is that it is so largely an American monopoly of coastwise business when the service of our merchant marine should be directed to foreign business. Eliminating our great lakes and other coastwise boats, Norway is second in the maritime world. A little nation with a population of 2,391,782, it had 3,242 ships in its merchant marine on January 1, 1913. The total tonnage then was 1,718,606 and that had been increased to 2,425,476 at the beginning of this war, it is reported. Norway is essentially a maritime country and has been since the Vikings of a thousand years ago overran the west coast of Europe. It is carrying on a large percentage of the merchant trade in and around the war zone and may be expected to continue to do so a long time, even if the present rate of loss continues.—Astorian.

Sheridan to Have a Big Juice Factory

Machinery for the logan and apple juice factory of the fruit growers association is expected momentarily. The boiler has arrived and will be installed today and tomorrow. Should the other machinery come in as expected it will be installed Saturday in the cannery building on the S. P. tracks. This will be between a $1,600 and $1,700 plant.

From present indications the loganberry picking will begin about July 5. Many of the growers have signified their intention of making juice out of their crop and the factory will then be utilized, furnishing labor for about ten men.

This is the first undertaking of the fruitgrowers association. From time to time as the fruit industry about Sheridan grows the plant will be added to. Prunes will begin coming in next year in large quantities and it is the intention of the association now to install a prune packing plant next year. This will create a labor demand, supplying a payroll of $100 to $200 for every acre of packed prunes shipped.—Sheridan Sun.

A "Getting-Even" Law.

The prohibitionists are preparing to give another twist to the screws they fastened on us last year. They are determined to make Oregon wholly dry by the passage of a measure that will deprive us of the privilege of importing the small monthly allowance of beer and liquor that the present law permits us to enjoy.

The implacable prohibitionists declare that their action is in retaliation against the citizens who propose a measure that will allow our breweries to manufacture beer that we have been importing. It must be admitted that this measure has much to recommend it—that is, of course, if we are to be permitted to draw a monthly dose of beer from neighboring states that have not incurred the disaster of prohibition notice. If we may drink beer in Oregon, there is no good reason why it should not be Oregon beer. No one can sensibly explain why a local industry should be denied the right to do business and should be ruined while the thing it produces is admitted to the state and consumed "on the premises."

As to the prohibitionists' "retaliation" laws that have no higher purpose are not always passed, and never should be. The Oregon system was not developed as a means whereby a majority or minority could take vengeance one on the other. If it can be and is misused in this way, we certainly should change it. In the meantime, The Spectator desires to go on record as opposing the adoption of any law whose sole purpose is to permit one class of citizens to "get even" with another class.—The Spectator.

Moral: Ask for our Ad. Rates

During a convention of ad. writers held recently some one told the following:

"A man entered a shop one cold day and bought a woolen muffler. When he opened the muffler he found inside the photograph of a beautiful girl with a note couched in these terms: 'If you are single, please write to me.'"

"A name and address followed, and the man smiled. He was single. He placed the photo on his library table. In a week he had fallen in love with the picture of the beautiful girl. So he wrote to her."

"A week passed during which the bachelor was in a fever of impatience. Finally he received the terrific blow in the shape of a letter:

"Dear Sir—The Mary Jones to whom you wrote was my grandmother. She died nine years ago, aged 87. Yours Truly."

Upon investigating this strange case the broken-hearted bachelor discovered that he had purchased the muffler from a dealer who did not advertise."
