Great Britian Delivers .her Hardest Blow.

Whether the offensive operations by allied armies in Northern France expel German troops and drive them to the other side of the Rhine or not, the outcome will be decisive. It will be the last great stroke of the war. For a year Great Britain has been preparing; she has conserved her men and has accumulated an abundance of munitions, and is now at the maximum of her strength. If this blow fail she will never deliver another of equal strength.

Peace, for the first time since August; 1914, is in sight. It may be expected, reasonably, by the first of the year. If the Allies reach the Rhine it may come within a few weeks, and if they fail to pass the Northern frontier of France they will surely realize that they will never get to German soil. Once they do realize this all the talk about crushing Germany and about the dismemberment of the kaiser's empire will cease. Terms of accommodation will be sought by both sides, probably through the solicited mediation of President Wilson and the King of Spain.

The slaughter of today is heart-breaking, but if it lead to a cessation of hostilities, exen through exhaustion the thousands going to death will not have die din vain.

The Gravest of Dangers.

We are in receipt of the following letter from Major A. H. Heisey, of Newark, Ohio, under date of June 5: "I would like to call your attention to the fact, that there may be a condition after the European war is over that has been in a measure lost sight of. The Allied powers have under consideration a commercial alliance to prevent the selling of goods of any description by the Germans, Austrians and Turks in any of the coun-tries controlled by the Allied powers. Should this be enforced, then practically the only market open to the fermans, Austrians and Turks is the United States and South America, which means that they will be compelled to sell their wares in these countries at any price obtainable, not from choice, but from necessity, and under the present Democratic tariff they can flood the country. Should this occur it will give us a practical demonstration of what is possible, and if it must be, I regret that it will not take place before the next presidential election.

The importance of Major Heisey's suggestion of June 19 is indicated in a cable dispatch of June 20, relating to the action of economic conference in Paris in which the allied govern-ments of France, England, Russia and Italy were represented by members of their respective cabinets. The conference agreed upon sweeping measures of Tariff restriction to be put in force during and after the war. the Paris Cable referred to says:

During the war, citizens of the Allied nations are forbidden to engage n any commerce with enemy subjects All merchandising from enemy coun-tries is likewise forbidden. Commercial houses having enemy connections are sequestered. During the reconstruction period the allies declare their purpose to carry on joint action in restoring the industries, agriculture and merchant fleets. All treaties with prices. Of this there can be no posible doubt. Major Heisey regrets that this avalanch of cheap goods may not begin previous to the presidential election. If it should occur before that time, there would be no question as to the result of that election. But whether the deluge shall come before or after November 7, 1916, ought not to make the slightest difference in the result. And it will make no difference f the protection forces work shoulder o shoulder and prepare for peace.

A Novelist's Big Task.

Sir Richard Haggard, the English ailors on land after the war, sailed who is on a tour of British oversea lominions to investigate ways and ancans of placing British soldiers and sailors on lan dafter the war, sailed for New Zealand last wcek, having finished his work in Australia. He will nend about a work in Australia. spend about a month in New Zealand nd will then go on to Canada.

"The Queensland Government," he said, "is prepared to provide a milion acres for agriculture for the setton acres for agriculture for the set-tlement of cx-service men from the United Kingdom. The New South Wales Government by its irrigation schemes will be enabled to increase its settlers by about 1000 in two years and in this is prepared to put time expired United Kingdom sol-diers on the same footing as its comdiers on the same footing as its own mcn. Other states are also willing to extend to ex-service men from the United Kingdom the same advantages in land settlement as they offer their own. "When the war ends we shall be faced suddenly with the problem, of handling great numbers of the 5,000,-000 soldiers who will be released with changed spirits. Unless some-thing is ready for them there will be from the emigration of 125,000 men from the Unitel Kingdom to the United States after the Boer war."

Two Electorial Tickets in Field.

Salem, July 7 .- If the republicans and progressives desire to make doubly sure of the electorial vote in Oregon for Justice Charles E. Hughes the republican candidate for president it will be incumbent upon the two parties to combine, and put only five candidates for presidental electors in the field, according to an opinion ren-dered by Attorney General Brown.

Five candidates were nominated by each of the parties at the recent primary election, and since both have indorsed Hughes it developed recently that, if the candidates of both parties remain in the field, there is a possibility of the vote being sufficently divided to give the electorial vote to President Wilson. To make sure that this would not occur, republican leadlitical parties could be combined and counted for Hughes. The attorney general replied in the negative, saying the only solution would be for the two parties to combine and put only five candidates in the field.

Several inquiries have come in re-garding the prospects for a market for the Digitalis or Fox Glove. In answer to a dozen letters sent out by various drug firms throughout the United States, quotations were given all the way from 51/2 cents to 90 cents per pound.

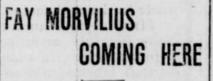

Samples of our product have been sent to several firms with the request that they examine them and make us an offer. Returns should come from these houses sometime this week or the first of next.

New York commercial papers quote this drug at 85 to 90 cents, but all the drug houses say that they are not

Mr. Seymore came in in the interests of the Industrial Club work of the schede A trip work of the schede work of the schools. A trip was made to Sand Lake on Friday night, where a rousing meeting of the club mem-bers was held. About 90 per cent of the members described and the school of the members who enrolled at Sand-lake have sent in all reports and are keeping the work up in fine 'shape. The meeting was in the shape of a pie social to raise funds for the school booth at the County Fair this fall. About 75 people were in atten-dance and $12,00 was raised by the sale of pies. We hope that all the other clubs in the county are keeping up their work as well, and will come through this fall with a fine showing.

Drainage. The drainage experts from O. A. C. will be in the county beginning with July ²4th for a period of two weeks or so. The first work to be tackled will be the completion of plans for the Big Nestucca Drainage District. After that the private problems and small districts will be taken up. Send in your application early if you need help along this line.

shall not be accorded to any enemy powers during a number of years, to be agreed upon by the allies after hostilities cease. They further de-clare in favor of the allied nations dealing among themselves as far as possible in their natural resources.

The Allies agree to prevent "dumping" of enemy goods by fixing a time during which enemy commerce shall be subject to special rules and prohi-They further agree upon bitions. joint collaboration after the war to procure complete independence from nemy countries relative to raw products and manufactured goods essen-tial to the development of their economic activities. They will adopt subventions and advances to encourage enterprises and research, scientific and technical. Besides subventions and advances to certain industries, the Allies will consider tariff changes and prohibitions, temporary to per-manent. The mutual exchange of goods among the allies will be en-courage by rapid transit, reduced freight rates and common arrangements concerning postal and telegraph communication.

it will be seen that trade currents and conditions are certain to undergo radical changes. The countries now arrayed against each other in a military war are going to fight on industrial lines as well. Not only do they prohibit the interchange of products while the war lasts, but they will continue the interdiction after the war closes. That means that England, France, Russia and Italy will neither buy from nor sell to their present enemies. It will follow that Germany, Austria and Turkey will refuse to buy from England, France, Russia and Italy. The surplus products of these countries must find new markets. As Major Heisey points out, they will be compelled to sell their wares whereever they can find customers and at whatever price they can get.

Where are the markets which the warring nations must seek for the export of vast quantities of industrial products which heretofore have found sale in European markets? In the straning and struggle for neutral markets the competition will be the fierc-est ever known. The biggest neutral market in the whole world-bigger than all the rest of the world-is the United States. The consuming power of this country in manufactured products alone amounts to more than $22,000,000,000 a year. Under Pro-tective Tariffs the American people have consumed 95 per cent of American manufactured products. The tremendous total of over twenty billions of consuming power is a rich prize for the Europeans to struggle for. They are looking toward this country as their main hope of a market, as their salvation. They will not look in vain if the return of peace shall find the Underwood free trade tariff doors wide open. They will flood our mar-Rets with goods cut to the bone in was spent for road improvements.

the enemy being abrogated, the Allies agree that favored nation treatment draw. If no more than five candidates are to be put in the field, it will be incumbent upon the leaders of the two parties to see to it that only one more candidate hereafter accepts. According to the attorney general, an acceptance of a nomination is necessary for the candidate's name to go on the ballot.
