A case of charity-He had heard and read a lot about Ireland, but had never been in the country before. As he passed through an almost unin-habitable district he came upon a cottage. He drew near, and, to his horror beneld a poor old woman seated on a stone outside the hut, with all her humble belongings gathered around her.

An eviction! Then what he had read was true, after all. He looked at the resigned face of the old dame seated, without her household goods around her, alone in that disolate land. He must do something. Walking up to her, he tenderly placed a five-pound note in her thin hand. He noted with some pleasure the look of amazement that grew in her eyes as she realized this generosity. "Tell me, what is the trouble, mother?" he asked gently. "Thank ye koindly, sir!
