THE TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.

Editorial Snap Shots.

The next get together movement is by Republicans of Tillamook County.

What about it, Bro. Trombley, what about it? The Democratic party in its platform four years ago promised to reduce the high cost of living, and now every newspaper publisher has to pay twice the price for news paper.

Bro. Trombley says that the Republicans are joining the Wilson free trade club. If that is true it would be an interesting item of news for Bro. Trombley to give the names of Republicans who have gone over to the Democratic party.

The snap shot man is pleased that he never advocated the city, or the county using taxpayers' and property owners' money for concrete roads. Some of our readers may disagree with us, but time will tell and people will be able to see for themselves that we were right.

The Fair Board, is $300.00 in the hole. Well what of it? Everybody had a good time at the fair, and no one should complain that the receipts did not cover the expenditures. A little economy and less expenses for outside attractions next year, will soon wipe that little sum off.

The Board of Equalization will meet on Monday next. We hope the board will take into consideration the amount of money that have been expended on the Garibaldi-Wheeler and Netarts roads, and raise the assessment on beach lots on that account, and lower the valuation of beach property that have been discriminated against and no road. Judge Hare has repeatedly made the statement that if Bayocean is deprived of a road the valuation of property should be lowered.

If the accusations set forth accusing the justice of the peace and two local legal lights are false, which no doubt they are, then the person who swore to the affidavit and signed his name to it, should be sued for damages. And we believe that a jury would make damages so heavy that it would put a stop to base insinuation and false-hood, for a long time to come in law cases. If a newspaper man published such libelous matter, he would be liable for damages, and we see no reason why this is not equally as libelous.

The opposition to the Bayocean road have started a live agitation for another $75,000 road project. This is another illustration of Douglas-Dougally-Do-lem in this county by some of the timber men. If the timber men can stand the additional taxation, why we who reside in Tillamook can. And the first opportunity the people have of expressing their sentiment at the dilly-dally way in which the Bayocean road is being constructed something is going to pop, for the present projected road is going to be finished and right quick next year. The people of this city and vicinity have made up their minds to that.

Don't laugh. It is too serious a matter to laugh at. After expending $16,000 on the Bayocean road there are those who are advocating another route and abandonment of what work is done. Just because the rock used for rip-rapping did not pan out as was expected. If the early settlers of this county had got cold feet and never surmounted a little difficulty like that this country would have amounted to nothing, but thanks to the pioneers they didn't expend thousands of dollars on a road that was properly surveyed and then want to build it elsewhere. Isn't it ridiculous, and absurd as well, the way the Bayocean road is being fooled with?

The snap shot man has had no aspiration to hold political office but if he was a school director there would be some pertinent questions asked teachers who apply for positions. There is a rotten system prevailing. No sooner does some teachers procure a contract, when they begin to look after other positions especially where more salary can be obtained. If they procure them they throw up their contracts, no matter how it may inconvenience to the school district they contracted with. The school board of this district have had a whole lot of trouble, for the majority of the teachers employed last fall have resigned. Now what is the use of a teacher's contract if it only protects the teacher and not the school district? If the snap shot man was a school director he would compel teachers to put up bonds that they would perform their part of the contract. That would soon put a stop to teachers throwing up their contracts at the last moment. Surely the people have some rights.

If the brotherhood of railroad men ran a bluff on the railroads and president Wilson, it looks as though congress also ran a bluff on the brotherhood in passing the eight hour law that is imperfect in a great many particulars. The people who will have the foot the bills were not considered. The railroads have estimated—and their estimate is declared by them to be accurate in every respect—that the cost of the eight-hour day under the law just approved will be upward of $40,000,000. If the railroads do what their advisers are urging them to do and establish an eight hour day of service which will mean a reorganization of schedules all over the country, the cost will be at least $100,000,000. If the eight hour day should be extended to all employes the added cost will be in the neighborhood of $279,000,000. It is asserted that the result of even the added burden of the limited eight hour day to the railroad finances will be to drive some of them into the hands of receivers and, in any case, to wipe out the surplus. Representative McArthur, of Oregon, throws some light on the Adamson bill that should enlighten the people. He said: "While favorable to the proposition of an eight-hour working day I could not lend my support to the measure passed by the House today. This bill does not limit a day's work to eight hours, but merely provides for extra compensation beyond that time limit. It is, therefore, not an eight hour bill, but a measure to raise and regulate wages. Dispute as to these wages should be settled by the railroads and the brotherhoods and not by Congress. Members of the House and Senate have had no opportunity to investigate the merits of the question at issue and the bill was forced through without hearings and practically without debate. I venture the opinion that not a dozen members of the House knew whether the demands of the brotherhoods are just or unjust. The question was not decided on its merits, but was rushed through as a matter of expediency.

"It is class legislation in that it fails to include the great army of switchmen, towermen, shop workers, agents, telegraphers, section hands, common laborers and others in the railroad service. The bill effects only 29 per cent of the railroad men in the country, ignoring the other 80 per cent. A most dangerous precedent has been established and Congress will hereafter become the clearing house for the settlement of grievances between capital and labor. Incidentally, a death blow has been struck at the principle of arbitration.

"As in all cases of conflict between capital and labor, the general public will suffer. The increased cost of railroad operation will come home to the farmers, merchants, manufacturers and other shippers in the way of higher freight rates. These burdens will be borne indirectly by the long-suffering consumer.

Surely the high cost of living is high enough, without making it higher. But a Democratic Congress, which pledged itself to reduce the cost of living, went on record in favor of increasing the cost of living, for that is what the eight hour law passed last week will do. Pat McArthur told the truth in a nutshell when he said the increased cost of railroad operation will come home to the farmers, merchants, manufacturers and other shippers in the way of high freight rates.

It is somewhat interesting and important to read what Mr. Hughes has to say of the action of the Democratic party. In a speech he made clear when he said:

"I believe there is no grievance with respect to labor that cannot be settled by a fair, candid explanation of the facts.

"We have in the past, had to deal frequently with the opposition of employers to the principle of arbitration. Sometimes they have refused to arbitrate disputes. Public opinion has been against them. I stand here firmly for the principle of arbitrating industrial disputes, and I would not surrender it to anybody in the country.

"I believe that anything that is right in this country can be settled right. What is our Republican government? What are our free institutions? We have come down the long course of history with the people fighting, slowly, slowly—now with defeat and now with victory—for a recognition of the reign of reason instead of the reign of tyranny and force.

"Now then I stand for two things. First, for the principle of fair, impartial, thorough, candid arbitration; and, second, for legislation on facts according to the necessities of the case. And I am opposed to being dictated to either in the executive department or Congress by any other power on earth before the facts are known.

"We have a great country and a great future. But it can only be preserved in one way. That way is the way of all honesty, fair investigation and candid treatment. Show me the way that is right and I will take it; but I won't take any way that I do not know anything about."

Truth About Mexico.
President Wilson will not be pleased with former Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson's assertion that Mexican emissaries of Madero were too "smooth" for him and led him into the tangle with that country from which he is now frantically trying to emerge with a show of credit. Nor will he like that formulation of his creed to the effect that a Mexican without proof is to be taken at his word and that an American with or without evidence is a liar.

The Wicked Composer.
"Bill," the poet gasped, as he entered his friend's room.
"Why, what's wrong?" the friend inquired.
"Wrong! I wrote a poem about my little boy. I began the first verse with these lines: 'My son, my pigmy counterpart.'"
"Yes, yes?"
"The poet drew a newspaper from his pocket.
"Read!" he blazed. "See what the composer did to my opening line!"
The friend read aloud, "My son, my pig, my counterpart."

Confiding in the Telephone—A new use for the trouble department of a telephone office has been discovered. The Southwestern Telephone News reports it in these words: The family had not had their telephone very long, and everyone took a deep and abiding interest in it. On the outside of the directory they had noted the words, "I trouble, call No. 4217."

It had been a hard morning, and everything had gone wrong. Finally the lady of the house in desperation, turned to her trusty telephone and called 4217.

"This is the trouble department," answered the operator sweetly.
"Is this where you report your troubles," asked the lady.
"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, I only wanted to report that our cat got drowned in the cistern this morning; the baby is cutting a new tooth; the cook left without warning; we are out of sugar and starch; the stovepipe fell down; the milkman left only a pint instead of a quart today; the bread won't raise; my oldest child is coming down with the measles; the plumbing in the cellar leaks; we have only enough coal to last through tomorrow; the paint gave out when I got only half over the dining room floor; the main-spring of the clock is broken; my three sister-in-laws are coming to visit tomorrow the man has not called for the garbage for two weeks; our dog has the mange; the looking-glass fell off the wall a while ago and broke to pieces; and I think that my husband is taking considerable notice of a widow lady that lives next door. That's all today, but if anything happens later I'll call you up and tell you about it."
