

HOMSTEADERS' FAIR A DECIDED SUCCESS.

Held at Blaine Last Friday with Large Attendance.

In the lot across the Blaine road, in front of the Magarrell home was the scene of the Homesteaders' Fair on Friday.

The day was ideal and before the farmers had their exhibits in place the autos began to roll in from all parts of the county. The secretary and officer were so busy with placing exhibits that no one could get time to keep gate and sell tickets, as they had intended to charge 15c. admission to help pay expenses. Mr. Magarrell called the officers over to where was and said "The people have been exceedingly liberal in donating premiums and we have not advertised that we were going to charge, so I think we had as well not charge any admission," which was readily agreed upon. So it was all made free.

The hour of ten o'clock arrived, when the secretary called for the parade. But some got the impression, because of the rush of work, the parade was called off. However, there were enough entered to represent the occasion. Mr. Speace leading off with his cow hitched to a sled loaded with Homesteaders, farm implements, followed by a hay wagon representing harvesting hay, then followed a gravel wagon, representing building roads out from homesteads. Next a marketing wagon hauling products to town. Then followed the well to do farmer driving to town in his buggy. Following that was the two beautiful daughters in a buggy all decorated with flowers, representing the happy young people raised on farms. Then followed the up-to-date automobiles. It was near twelve o'clock when the parade ended and the speaking called for. Attorney H. T. Botts made a good speech, urging the necessity of co-operation and rehearsing some incidents in connection with his homestead. Rev. J. E. Youel gave a rousing good speech which was enjoyed by all who heard him and impressed all that he would make a good granger.

Miss Fannie Smith, secretary of the Nestucca Grange, capped the climax with the reading of her own composition on the history and work of the Nestucca Grange.

The judging was done by Mr. Shronk, County Agriculturist of Yamhill County. The afternoon was spent in viewing exhibits and the races by the young people.

All seemed to enjoy themselves and it seemed to be the universal opinion of all present that the fair was a great success and better than last year.

This was the poem recited by Fannie Smith and which was a welcome address to the visitors:

Nestucca Grange, No. 503. As lively a grange as ever you'll see in point of years it's not very old, But the story of its achievement is worth being told. Organized in 1913, in the month of December.

A date we grangers are glad to remember. From the day of its birth it has thrived and grown Till its name and its fame are everywhere known.

The very next May, at the State Grange convention, Our grange was represented—a fact worthy of mention. In the month of August, the 8th to be exact, Our first Grangers' Picnic became an actual fact.

The crowds who thronged the grounds on that day Gave us an idea that we worked out this way: The next year instead of a picnic there, We inaugurated an annual Homesteaders' Fair.

But before I leave the subject of that first year's events, I must mention an item of considerable consequence. In the latter part of August occurred the Tillamook County Fair.

And our grange decided to place an exhibit there. Now the day of our picnic had been cloudless and bright But the week of the fair—oh, the weather was a fright!

The wind whistled and roared the rain simply poured! Fill Neptune, himself, seemed fairly outscored. But spite of warring elements and storm God sublime, The County Fair proceeded on schedule time.

And our grangers, tho' bedraggled and dripping wet, Were on hand with their exhibit and won a prize, you bet! Two years have passed since then, and at each subsequent fair Our grange has never hesitated, nor failed to do its share.

And tho' each time first honors were just beyond our reach, 'Tis grange that keeps them from us next year must be a peach! There is a good old motto, suited to grangers as well as men, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again!"

In a parade in a neighboring village, on the 4th of July, In 1915, our grange float scored high. In 1916, the present year of grace, We celebrated the 4th at our own festal place. VanWinkle was the name of the orator of the day, But you'll never catch him napping like the Rip of other days. His address on "Americanism" was well suited to the occasion; With so many loyal patriots why need we fear invasion? One of Tillamook's legal lights and the City Recorder too, Pulled off amusing stunt that, perhaps, may interest you, They essayed a three-legged race, and there was no lack of mirth When their delightful noses collided with old Mother Earth. Once again we meet where the dark green branches quiver, Where is heard the gentle murmur of the softly flowing river. The occasion of our meeting, on this day so rare, Is the date of our second annual Homesteaders' Fair.

This fair is not held for grangers alone, But the products of each homestead may be here shown. True, many of our homesteaders are grangers, too, So the grange backs the project, to see it through.

And we trust that the work we have here begun May flourish long after our day is done. So in this cosy little neck, by the Magarrell Hall, We extend a hearty greeting and a welcome to all.

And hope when the day is ended, and to your homes you repair, You'll be glad you attended the Homesteaders' Fair.

I am in Tillamook again to tune, regulate and repair pianos and player pianos. I guarantee my work to be satisfactory or money back. Leave orders or phone to Todd Hotel. M. G. Hughes, Cornelius.

Miss Julia Miller, the instructor in Home Economics in the Tillamook schools, wishes to announce that she is willing to organize a class in home cooking open to the women of the city. Her time is all taken except from 2 to 4 p.m. on Wednesdays, and for the next three months at that time she would be pleased to meet persons who are really interested in attendance at the classes and a payment for the supplies used.
