We, the people of Oregon, just amended our constitution to permit the bonding of the state up to $17,000,000 or $18,000,000 for a rural credit loan fund.

The prisoners at the state penitentiary are a particular lot of individuals. They are much more particular about whom shall be the officers of the pen than they are about their own conduct and morals.

Now comes Dr. MacPherson, after the election, and so far as we can interpret his words, agrees with the Voter's contentions. In this able address delivered this week in Chicago at the National Conference on Marketing and Rural Credits, Dr. MacPherson said:

be for themselves and for those who come after them.—Sheridan Sun.

Here is a financial view of the war of the future given by the Yale Review. "There will be no territorial limits to the war of the future and distance will provide no prophylactic against the annihilation of peace.

And now a wise Portland man with a theoretical acquaintance with hens that probably consists of telephoning the grocer to deliver a dozen eggs, proposes to reduce the cost of living by each Portland householder keeping a few biddies.

The state of Oregon has adopted what is known as a compensation act. It is state-administered, state aided insurance system. Broadly speaking, certain industries insure themselves, by paying premiums into a state-administered fund, against claims for personal injuries that may occur to their employees.

The principal promoter of this amendment—the one man who was most active in formulating its terms and an agitator for its adoption—was that able officer of the state Dr. Hector MacPherson of the Department of Economics of the Oregon Agriculture College.

The Oregon Voter humbly suggested that the bonding amendment was not needed; first, because the Federal Rural Credits bill seemed to provide for Oregon's rural credits needs as well or better than did the amendment proposed; second, because the amendment would have to be further amended to make it thoroughly practical and the legislature had no power to amend same.

"The State of Oregon has passed a rural credits bill, which comes nearer to being on a par with the acts which have been transforming Australia for almost a quarter of a century than anything found in the United States. But it does not go far enough and will accomplish very little that could not be attained by the Federal Farm Loan Act. There are those of us who hope that this bill can be amended, so as to make it possible for any man of average thrift and industry to become the possessor of a farm home of his own."

Meanwhile we have amended the constitution, adopting the very words of Dr. MacPherson's Bill, and bound the state to $17,000,000 or $18,000,000 of bonds, which must be issued to applicants who seek loans and conform to the conditions laid down in the constitutional amendment.

So under our loose system of popular government, we have bonded the state under terms which even the leading promoter of the plan says should be amended and in spite of the fact, now publicly admitted by the promoter, that bonding our state accomplishes little that cannot be attained by the Federal Act which was passed months before we bonded ourselves.

"We the People" will vote for any old thing that sound good at the time, whether it is needed or not and irrespective of whether it needs fixing as soon as we have adopted it. Our Oregon System is a loose system indeed.—Oregon Voter.

First Eliminate the Needless.

It is known and admitted that there must be a curtailment of state expenditures or new sources of revenue devised by the Legislature in order to get within the newly adopted tax limitation measure.

To be sure, counter proposals for raising road money are made, such as an increase in automobile licenses. But if automobiles can properly be made to pay more for road construction and upkeep their contribution can be expended to good purpose in addition to the proceeds from the millage tax.

It is good, hard, common sense, that if money is being expended needlessly that particular waste ought to be eliminated before their is curtailment in needed expenditures.

There is one item of $126,882 in the list of biennial appropriations published in the 1915-1916 state Blue Book. It is a contribution by the general tax-paying public to the insurance risk of certain—not all—industries.

Many states have compensation insurance, state administered. Only one other—West Virginia—contributes to the payment of claims. Some which are most successful are self-supporting as regards administration. This is conspicuously true in California, Michigan and New York.

Industry is able and in other states is willing to meet all its insurance obligations. It ought to be required to do so in Oregon before road building or other essentials of progress are sacrificed.—Oregonian.

Dated this 23rd day of November, 1916. H. Crenshaw, Sheriff of Tillamook County, Oregon.

Danger Signal.

If the fire bell should ring would you run and stop it or go and help put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the disease that causes the coughing. This can nearly always be done by using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, Andrews, Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." For sale by Lamar's Drug Store.

HEAR WITHOUT EARS.

Thousands of deaf people are today throwing away all hearing devices and enjoying all conversation. This method is easily and quickly acquired through our system. Absolutely the only thing of its kind in the country. Our proposition is entirely original. Cost is trifling. See what New International Encyclopaedia says on Lip Reading. Hundreds of people with normal hearing are taking up Lip Reading for the many additional benefits gained. You can understand what the actors are saying just as far away as you can see them. The eye understands beyond the range of hearing. Send no money, but mention this paper and state whether or not you are deaf. All particulars will be sent you absolutely free and with no expense to you. Address, School of Lip Language, Kansas City, Missouri.

Highway Board Hopeful

Salem Or., Dec. 11.—Optimism was expressed by the State Highway Commission today, when the secretary was instructed to notify the secretary of agriculture that there is no doubt that the state will provide appropriate means for securing funds so that all moneys available for Oregon out of the Federal aid fund will be obtained. It was said, however, that the matter is up to the Legislature and how the funds will be secured was not shown.

The Has-Beens.

I read the paper every day, and oft encounter tales which show there's hope for every jay who in life's battle fails. I've just been reading of a gent who joined the has-been ranks, at fifty years without a cent, or credit at the banks. But undismayed he buckled down, refusing to be beat, and captured fortune and renown; he's now in East street. Men say that fellows down and out ne'er ealve the rocky track, but facts will show, beyond a doubt, that has-beens do come back. I know, for I who wrote this rhyme, when forty odd years old, was down and out, without a dime my whiskers full of mold. By black disaster I was trounced until it jarred my spine; I was a failure so pronounced I didn't need assign. And after I had soaked my coat, I said (at forty-three), "I'll see if I can catch the goat that has escaped from me." I labored hard I strained my dome, to do my daily grind, until in triumph I came home, my billy-goat behind. And any man who still has health may with the winners stack, and have a chance at fame and wealth—for has-beens do come back.—Walt Mason.

For that Dull Feeling After Eating.

I have used Chamberlain's Tablets for some time, and can testify that they have done me more good than any tablets I ever used.
