STORES IN BURMA.

You Can Make Purchases In Them if You Try Hard Enough.

You may walk through the muddy old markets of Rangoon for hours at a regular monthly meeting held this time or through the bazaar at Manda-week, provided a fund of $15,000.00 to lay without any of the salespeople takbe loaned to responsible farmers on ing the slightest notice of you as a possible purchaser of their wares. The dear little ladies sit crosslegged upon long tables in front of the high cupboards containing their goods. They are placidly smoking or chatting or painting their faces or braiding their hair. They are not attending to business in the least.

It requires a great effort to get a Burmese shopwoman (they are nearly Equity in water company, $400.00 friday at the home of Mrs. L. Schrad-Cast in First National Bank,. $73.73 er. Games and music were a feature all women) to show you her silks, and when at last she has spread her merchandise broadcast upon the table and you are reveling in the illusion that you are living in the middle of a rainbow, with a chance of holding fast to some of its colors, she will ask her price, which is seldom more than a rupee too much, and will stick to it like glue.

She is an indolent lady in many ways, who loves a quiet life, and she has determined that her most comfortable course is not to haggle in the market place. So you may make up your mind that bargaining and persuasion are useless arts to practice in Burma, however valuable they may be elsewhere .-- London Spectator.

INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Held by Authorities to Be Part of the National Jurisprudence

The declaration that international law is at one and the same time both national and international has farreaching and very practical significance for the work of building a new international order.

The courts of Great Britain, beginning with Lord Chancellor Talbot in 1733 and including Lord Chief Justice Mansfield in 1764, have held that the law of nations is part of the common good reason for doing so just a little law of England. Sir William Blackstone supported this doctrine in his classic Commentaries. This doctrine holds good as well in the United States as in Great Britain, a fact to which both Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton bore convincing testimony.

In the lifetime of the present generation the United States supreme court has held that international law is part of our law and that, in order to ascertain and administer it in cases where there is no treaty and no controlling executive or legislative act or judicial decision, resort must be had to the customs and usages of civilized nations .-

Parnell's Superstitiens. Several stories illustrating the superstitious nature of Parnell are told in a memoir which his brother has written. His horror of the color green has been touched on by many writers. He would not wear a coat or tie with any tinge of green in it, and he objected to anything like a green wall paper. So strong was his aversion to the color that one day when a lady whom he knew very well came to see him in the house of commons he refused to shake hands with her because she was wearing a green dress and hurried
