What the Editors Say.

C. E. Spence says that he did not start the mud slinging, but at the same time it is noticed that, whoever started it, he does not deny that he has at least done his part in keeping it going. An alibi that sets up a defense that one fellow started what the other finished is not convincing.—Independent.

General economy is needed, but not the kind that ties up trade and depresses industry. Everyone can distinguish the difference between prudent living and wastefulness. If a man buys a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes or a hat, his money goes into legitimate circulation and furnishes uses for capital and employment for labor.—Overseer.

It is whispered among the Granges that there has been a good deal of expense as well as Spence in the State Grange lately and that the present master is the original man who put the Spence in expense. At the next meeting of the State Grange the bet is that the present master is to be de-lined thus: expense, ex-Spence, exit Spence.—a declension devoutly to be hoped for by all those who believe in the great mission of the Grange and want to see rural Oregon progress.—Oregon Voter.

The government must stop the gambling in wheat and other food stuff and lock those gambling centers until after the war and it would be a good idea to keep them locked. The wheat gamblers have gouged millions out of the common people during this war. Gamblers in other food stuff have also made millions. The gamblers do not produce a thing except hardship, woe and misery, for the common class. The gamblers make millions on what others produce.—Banks Herald.

War conditions and war prices have already placed the average American in a financial position where he cannot decently be asked to pay for the war. . . . Reducing large incomes for the period of the war and until the war debt is paid (and soon paid) will have a salutary effect on the country. It will tend everywhere to economy and thrift, which by reducing the demand for luxuries, will lower the cost of necessities to the general public; whereas the alternative of creating huge bond issues and leaving them unretired for years inevitable tends to inflation, to extravagance and to raising the cost of living—already an oppressive burden.—Oregon City Enterprise.

Colonel Roosevelt's step into the war arena—with two hundred thousand volunteers—has been checked by Congress. Mr. Roosevelt's proposition to fight Germany with his army of volunteers was certainly a patriotic deed and shows the true spirit of the loyal American citizen that he is. If congress will not permit a brave leader with two hundred thousand anxious volunteers backing him up to enter the foreign lands to fight our enemies, why talk of sending the flower of American youth into the trenches? The war between the United States and Germany is only in its infancy. No person can foretell what a day in the future will bring forth. The present attitude of Russia is to be reckoned with and it may put an entirely different light on the war situation within a fortnight.—Umpqua Valley News.

Men did not volunteer fast enough to mobilize an army and so the government resorted to conscription. Money has not been volunteered sufficiently to pay for the war, so why not draft it? Is life worth less than coin? The United States should emerge from this war with no debt. Drafted money should pay for it. The lives of this generation will pay their price and the money of this generation for the government to send soldiers into the trenches and on their return home have them go to work to help pay the national debt? When a man offers his life that is all he should pay. That is enough: Men, money and food should be drafted and we should pay as we go with men, money and food. There should be no war debt, and now since money has failed to volunteer, the time has arrived when it should be drafted.—Blue Mountain Eagle.

There are now more than 30,000 pig clubs in the United States. When the census of 1910 was taken there were only fifty-nine. The pig club, which is rapidly becoming a national institution, is a scheme by which the bankers and the boys and girls of the country are enlisted for co-operation in food production. Bankers are urged by the Department of Agriculture to lend boys and girls money to engage in pig club work, and they are responding in increasing numbers, as the figures show. Another scheme fostered by the department is known as the "Endless chain". By this system the banker provides a registered cow for a local club, and at the end of the season receives two choice gifts in return, which he may put out with other boys and girls under the same arrangement. Where the endless chain has been tried both sides have seemed to be satisfied, and the result has not only been beneficial to the food supply but it has stimulated healthy interest in pig raising where it will do the most good.—Oregonian.

"Sit tight and don't get excited is a good rule for us all to follow just at present, for there is a certain amount of hysteria in the many different kinds of propogandas that have appeared since war was declared. The situation is certainly serious and demands the thoughtful consideration of all good citizens, but that does not mean that everything else must be dropped and we must mark time. The nation faces the problems of successfully prosecuting the war, but they will be met. Crop conditions throughout the country are below the average and we must not only feed ourselves, but also see that Europe does not go hungry, but notwithstanding this we are not going to starve. As we view the situation, it simply means a little more hustling and economies where they will count, but hysteria should carry us no further. There is no reason why business projects should be postponed, necessary building carried on, nor in fact why our routine should be changed except as it might divert labor or other resources from industries in the war. Times at present are prosperous, but this prosperity can easily be changed if we all make up our minds to stand still. Therefore it is wise for us all as far as possible to pursue the even tenor of our way, selling what we have to sell and also buying liberally if not extravagantly of what the other fellow offers and see to it that there is no clogging of the industrial machine. Keep in mind that the country is just as wealthy as it ever was, but this wealth must be kept in circulation.—Independent.

Congress Can Stop Speculation in a Day.

Enactment of the administration's measure to empower the government to fix reasonable food prices would put an instantaneous extinguisher on speculation. It would destroy at a stroke the motive of greed, for speculators everywhere would understand that government prices would not be their prices.

An indication of the way it would work is seen in the recent action of the navy department in commandeering naval supplies to Atlantic ports. Congress passed a law in March empowering the government to take that method in the purchase of all supplies for its own needs, and its policy is clearly defined in a letter from the paymaster general of the navy.

"The government is willing and desirous of treating all dealers with fairness," wrote Paymaster McGowan, and is prepared to pay an equitable price for provisions required for the navy. However, in arriving at such prices the present abnormal condition of the market, in so far as inflated prices are concerned, will not govern the prices to be paid."

The law of March 4, 1917, under which this action is taken, provides reasonable redress against possible administrative injustice. Any dealer not satisfied with the prices tendered by the government can take half in cash and sue in the regular courts for the balance of his claim.

This is an excellent law, but it does not go far enough. Its principle should be extending to the fixing of prices by the government on necessities bought by the people for their homes. It is the only effective way of stamping out speculation and checking the unwarranted upward movement in many commodities which government surveys have shown to be in ample supply.—Spokesman-Review.

The German Emperor appears to suffer from a religious mania which projects his own character into his imagination of deity, say the Boston Herald. It is evident from his words that the kind of God he worships is unknown to modern religions and unacknowledged by civilized nations. The god of the Hohenzollern tribe or family it may be, but it bears not the slightest resemblance to God, the Father of all, who "made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth." It is a ferocious deity that smiles on the Kaiser out of his mirror. The following brief selection from his sayings, well chosen by Mr. Lovat Fraser, illustrates what passes in Emperor William's mind for religious thought:

The Kaiser's God.

Only one is Master in the Empire and I am that one; I will tolerate no other.

You must all have one will, and that is My will; there is only one law and that is My law.

If I order you to shoot down your relatives, brothers—yes, even your parents—you must obey me without murmuring.—(Speech to Potsdam recruits.)

The spirit of God has descended upon me because I am German Emperor. I am the instrument of the Most High. I am His sword. His representative on earth. Woe and death to those who oppose My will! Death to the infidel who denies My mission! Let all the enemies of the German nation perish! God demands their destruction—God, who by My mouth summons you to carry out his decrees.—(Proclamation to army, Sept. 13, 1914.)

If there is any shadow of blasphemy in these words the Kaiser, we may believe, is unconscious of it. He seems to think of some sort of puppet perhaps a pocket god somewhat like Laban's gods, of which we read that Rachel "put them in the camel's saddle and sat upon them." At any rate, changing a word or two in an ancient sentence, many thoughtful people will feel bound to say that the Kaiser created a god in his own image, in the image of the Kaiser created he him. He is always in the hands of physicians, but none of them as yet successfully answered the question, "Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased?"

MERCHANT'S WIFE ADVISES TILLAMOOK WOMEN.

"I had stomach trouble so bad I could eat nothing but toast, fruit, and hot water. Everything else soured and formed gas. Dieting did no good. I was miserable until I tried buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ika. ONE SPOONFUL benefited me INSTANTLY." Because Adler-ika empties BOTH large and small intestine, it relieves ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas and prevents appendicitis. It has QUICKEST action of anything we ever sold. J. S. Lamar, druggist.

A Symbol of Health. The Pythagorians of Ancient Greece ate simple food, practiced temperance and purity. As a badge they used the five pointed star which they regarded as a symbol of health. A red five pointed star appears on each package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and still fulfills its ancient mission as a symbol of health. Biliousness and Constipation.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally.—Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala. DULL AND SHARP SHOOTING PAINS
Michigan Lady Suffered Such Pains In Back and Head, But Says Cardui Stopped These Bad Spells.

Palmyra, Mich.—Mrs. Chas. T. Fuller, of this place, writes: "In 1911 I got run-down, and I suffered great pain...with both dull and sharp shooting pains...also back and head. I was weak and could only drag around, and should have been in bed, for I really wasn't able to be up. At times I would have spells that would be so bad I'd have to go to bed, and suffered intensely...
I decided to try Cardui, and saw a great improvement in less than a month's time. I used 7 or 8 bottles and was stronger...I got so much better that my strength returned and my work was easy for me. Cardui did me a world of good. It built me up in health and strength. I haven't had one of those bad spells since. I haven't had to take any more medicine since or have any doctors either and have been able to do my work right along...I recommend it to other women highly as the best medicine I know of for women who suffer from female trouble."
If you suffer from female troubles, follow this advice. Get a bottle of Cardui today and give it a thorough trial. It should help you, as it has helped thousands of other women in the past 40 years. At all druggists.
