What the Editors Say.

All the wheat in England belongs to the government. All the wheat in America is the plaything of the Chicago wheat pit.—Telephone Register.

Things must be moving in New York City when hotels that accommodate a thousand guests are obliged to turn away two hundred daily. For this great loss they are partially recompensed by the charge of twenty-five cents for an orange, sixty cents for two scrambled eggs and fifty-five cents for a pot of coffee. Who wouldn't live in old New York!—Sun

Every time sugar or flour goes up a few cents a sack, people rush in and buy some to stock up before the next rise. Just to be obliging, of course, the jobbers raise it again, and the people rush in and buy more again. If the people would stop it would break the chain. When every raise in price makes increased buying, why should not the dealer raise it again? Quit buying and see what happens. This principle is said to have been illustrated in the potato market here recently, when the farmers had large quantities of potatoes holed up awaiting higher prices. The price dropped when buying ceased somewhat, and many farmers could get no offer.—Telephone Register.

If present prices of wheat are justified by a present or prospective shortage in supply, the government made a serious mistake in not taking over the supply when wheat passed the $1.50 per bushel price. By allowing manipulation to bring prices where they are today, the government has absolutely played into the hands of speculators and has made the public suffer. Only speculators have profited. Because of the many serious problems today before our government no criticism should be made for the failure to take action heretofore. However, it is now time to bring this matter to the attention of the government and to see that some action is taken without further delay.—Observer.

War is no child's game; it is not to be waged by clerks or typewriters in newspaper offices, nor in kitchens, nor in parlors. It is life or death to hundreds of thousands of our best and most capable young men. It may be you or your boy, or your brother whose life will be lost unless red tape is cut, unless the best brains this country contains are put in positions of power. It will not do, now that we are in war, to be "too proud to fight." This is no "peace without victory" contest. We are to have either democracy or Prussianism. We are to be free, or we are to take orders from Germany. It is no time to consider feelings or persons. It is no time to mince words. It is no time to dilly dally and fool along. Men are demanded, not politicians; brains, not sweet words or sounding phrases. Your boy's life is at stake.—Unquaga Valley News.

The idea that is gaining prevalence now that the war is on is that all must cut expenditures to the limit. The idea is growing rapidly, and the worst of it, is, has the sanction of well meaning people. It is very pernicious and will gnaw at the vitals of the world if persisted in. It will cause the greatest number of business failures the world has ever known and will be the means of forcing labor out of employment, for there will be less opportunity to labor. The proper thing to do is to right about face—as there is much money in circulation, and there will be more if the hoarding spirit is curtailed in time—before it gains the mastery. Then the immense war loans to the European countries will to a great extent be spent right here in America, and it will increase the circulation of money. It is not a case of hanging onto every cent, but of being careful and making money go as far as possible.—Itemizer.

The Doctor's Bit.

The call to American physicians and surgeons for service in France is only the beginning of the professional and pecuniary sacrifice demanded, the greatness of which will serve as a measure of our national devotion to the bleeding republic. An army surgeon of the medical reserve corps with the rank of major gets a salary of $3,000 a year. That is the maximum A lieutenant gets $1,500. The other day the head of a New York unit of the corps, enjoying one of the largest professional incomes in the United States, was ordered to France. He gives up the difference between his earnings and a major's pay.

Practices of $20,000, $25,000 and $30,000 annually are being left or turned over to substitutes. Many of these larger practices will be abandoned, however, because the custom of engaging a substitute is said to be losing favor among medical men. They have found the personal factor plays a large part in their success and they prefer to give their patients personal attention or none at all.

The medical reserve corps is filled with volunteer doctors who simply offer themselves (and thereby their incomes) for the period of the war. And as is always the case when the volunteer system is in vogue, many of the best men of the profession have offered themselves and are now subject to call. Among them are the Mayo brothers, whose income has been estimated at a quarter a million a year. But as the French say, "It is war," and the doctors are ready, though to many the sacrifices required must be the cause of much anxiety especially among those who have reached or passed middle age, have families and know they will be handicapped in starting over after the war.—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

Submarines Must Be Destroyed or Bottled Up.

Hindenburg fights defensively on the west front and the allied German and Austrian forces are fighting defensively against the Italian drive. They are hoping to hold back the entire armies till the German submarine can sink enough ships and destroy enough cargoes to reduce England and France to acute hunger and industrial ruin.

It is difficult for American observers to draw definite conclusions regarding the gravity of the submarine menace. The British official weekly statement of losses is not as revealing as it might be, for it does not include losses of neutral vessels carrying supplies to England and France, and it studiously avoids going into tonnage totals.

But the danger is real and great. Government admissions in parliament reveal that much and some of the London newspapers complain that the losses have been more alarming than the government reports have indicated.

The situation calls for vigorous and sustained onslaught against the submarines. Victories on land won with enormous loss of life and material, would count for little if Germany ever got the whip hand over England and France with her submarines.

A nation starved is a nation conquered. If Germany should once reach the verge of starvation, she could dictate her terms and they would be crushing. She would demand possession of the British and French navies, and that achieved, she would be absolute ruler of the seas. A conquered world would have to yield to her policies.

To meet that menace to world safety and independence it is imperative that the United States navy shall join the allies in an effort on a big scale to close all harbors from which the submarines steal out upon their work of lawless destruction.

If German submarines are nesting or hiding in neutral waters, they should be raided there. If the neutrals thus affected campaign against that action, they should be told plainly that they must stop harboring these ruthless enemies of civilization or acquiesce in the cleaning out work of others. This is no time for insincere quibbling and hair-splitting technicalities.—Spokesman Review.

Where to Seek Spies.

Betrayal of important facts about the voyage of the destroyer flotilla to Europe impresses upon the American people with new emphasis the truth which they have learned during nearly three years—that the German spy system exists everywhere, and is most likely to be found in the most unsuspected places. The British and French nations learned the same lesson by painful experience, being by nature reluctant to scent an enemy behind an outward show of friendship. The American people should surely have learned it from the activities of Bernstorff, Von Papen, Boy-ed, and all their creatures.

The world has ever known and will be the means of forcing labor out of employment, for there will be less opportunity to labor. The proper thing to do is to right about face—as there is much money in circulation, and there will be more if the hoarding spirit is curtailed in time—before it gains the mastery. Then the immense war loans to the European countries will to a great extent be spent right here in America, and it will increase the circulation of money. It is not a case of hanging onto every cent, but of being careful and making money go as far as possible.—Itemizer.

It does not speak well for the sagacity of the officials at Washington that they refuse to suspect any of the persons who had knowledge of the orders for the destroyer flotilla because all were trusted employees. An enemy would insinuate a spy into just such a position or would bribe a person who already held it, for the sufficient reason that no other would serve the purpose. When the British in the Revolutionary War wanted a traitor, they went after big game—Benedict Arnold, one of Washington's generals.

Far be it from The Oregonian to instigate a reckless spy-hunting mania, but it becomes the Government to use its proper agencies in the work and when information is betrayed which was possessed only by person in positions of trust, to seek the guilty one among such persons. It would do well to inquire into the antecedents, affiliations and expressions of opinion about the war of all persons in such positions and to put none in charge except persons of proved probity and loyalty. This may involve hardship to men who have these qualities, but it is better that such an one should occasionally suffer injustice than that the interests of the country should be betrayed to an ever vigilant and remorseless enemy.—Oregonian.

Biliousness and Constipation.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me, I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally.—Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by Lamar's Drug Store.

For a burn or scald apply Chamberlain's Salve. It will allay the pain almost instantly and quickly heal the injured parts. For sale by Lamar's Drug Store.

A Symbol of Health.

The Pythagorians of Ancient Greece ate simple food, practiced temperance and purity. As a badge they used the five pointed star which they regarded as a symbol of health. A red five pointed star appears on each package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and still fulfills its ancient mission as a symbol of health. If you are troubled with indigestion, biliousness or constipation, get a package of these tablets from your druggist. You will be surprised at the quick relief which they afford. Indiana Lady Describes Condition, Which She Says Was Due To Constipation and Tells of Relief Obtained From Black-Draught.

Scotts, Ind.—Mrs. Annie Johnson, of this place, writes: "I well remember I suffered for a long time with constipation, which would get me down. I took doctors' medicines and any number of purgatives. They would leave me in a worse condition than I was before taking, and my stomach so upset. . . I know once I suffered . . . from constipation, I was so ill we had to have the doctor, just so nervous and feverish. The doctor said I would have to quit medicines, my stomach was so bad. . ."

My husband was reading and found something about Theford's Black-Draught and brought me a package to try. I used it regularly at first until I began to feel better, then I used just a dose occasionally. I was cured of this constipation and am sure the Black-Draught did it."

If your stomach is out of order, you will suffer from such disagreeable symptoms as headache, biliousness, indigestion, etc., and unless something is done, serious trouble may result.

Theford's Black-Draught has been found a valuable remedy for these troubles. It is purely vegetable, and acts in a prompt and natural way, helping to regulate the liver and to cleanse the bowels of impurities.
