Death of L. D. Ackley.

Lorenzo D. Ackley, a well known citizen of Tillamook County for many years, passed away at his home at Medford, Ore., where he had resided for several years. The remains were brought to Tillamook for burial and the funeral services were held today. The deceased is survived by his wife and nine children, viz: Ralph Ackley, Portland, Ore.; Claude Ackley, Mrs. James Williams and M. D. Ackley, of Tillamook, Ore.; Harry Ackley, of Company C, O. N. G.; Lee Ackley, and Nellie Ackley, of Medford; Mrs. H. Williams, Turlock, Cal., and Mrs. F. O. Fredericks, of Medford, Ore.

Mr. Ackley was born on a farm near Cincinnati, Ohio, August 5, 1884, and is the third of the seven sons and five daughters born to Samuel and Charlotte (Ripley) Ackley. Samuel Ackley was born in New York state in April, 1812, and his wife was born near Marietta, Ohio, on Duck creek, in 1813. As a young man just starting out in the world, Samuel Ackley went from New York to Ohio, married there, and when Lorenzo D. was a year old moved to Putman county, Ill. A few years later he moved to Iowa, and after a winter spent in Black Hawk county, returned to Illinois, where he lived four years. His next home was in Sullivan county, Mo., removing from there in about a year to Page county, Iowa, his intention being to get away from the trouble over the slavery question. Until 1861 he roamed around over Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, and that year crossed the plains with ox-team, arriving at his destination in California at the end of five months. After a winter in Butte county he removed in the spring to a different locality, and for nine years had no settled home for any length of time, in the meantime engaged in ranching. In time the disposition to locate in Oregon led him to make the journey over the mountains with teams, and from Portland he took a boat for Tillamook county, where he lived on a farm until 1871. Then, with the faithful wife who had shared his many wanderings, he moved to San Bernardino county, Cal., where four years later, in 1875 his death occurred his wife and helpmate surviving him for two months only. Lorenzo D. Ackley remained in Oregon when his people went to California, and the following year, in 1872, was united in marriage with Mary J. Jenkins, who was born near Knoxdale, Iowa in 1851.
