1.65 Krupp, at Essen, was established in 29.74 1811 by Frederick Krupp, who abandoned a successful grocery business at 11.55 the instigation of two brothers named 50,00 | Von Kechel in order to devote himself 7.61 to the manufacture of cast steel.

The process was then unknown in Germany, and the article itself went under the name of "English steel" because it was imported from England. Krupp had money, and the Kechels had or pretended to have technical knowledge. The firm started its op-4 00 erations in an old water power mill 34.44 at Altenessen. The experiments of the Von Kechels were unsuccessful. 10.00 For nearly two years they did their 223.48 best, but all their efforts to produce "English steel" failed. In the end Krupp decided to get rid of them after having spent one-half of his fortune in experiments and took over the management of the work himself.

For a long time he had no luck, and it was only after some years of disappointment and labor that a satisfactory metal was produced. It was under his son Alfred that the business first really began to flourish. Its exhibit at the London exposition of 1851 revealed to the world that a little Court House improvements. 848,12 known German firm was producing iron and steel that could not be bettered by the industry of any other country. Orders from the Prussian government followed, and the name 12.00 and fortune of the firm were made.-

LIGHTS OF THE NIGHT.

33,12 The Heavens Shine as Ever, While This Old World Changes.

Night is the astronomer's accepted time. He goes to his delightful labors when the busy world goes to its rest. A dark pall spreads over the resorts of active life; terrestrial objects, hill and valley, and rock and stream, and the abodes of men disappear; but the curtain is drawn up which concealed the heavenly hosts.

There they shine and there they move as they moved and shone to the 15.38 eyes of Newton and Gallleo, of Kepler and Copernicus, of Ptolemy and Hipparchus-yes, as they moved and shone 12.28 when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for

1,00 All has changed on earth, but the glorious heavens remain unchanged. The plow passes over the site of mighty cities; the homes of powerful nations are desolate; the languages they spoke are forgotten, but the stars 51,50 that shone for them are shining for us; the same eclipses run their steady circle; the same equinoxes call out the 50,00 flowers of spring and send the husbandman to the harvest; the sun passes at either tropic as he did when his course began, and sun and moon, and planet and satellite, and star and constellation and galaxy, still bear witness to the power, the wisdom and the love which placed them in the heavens and upholds them there.-Everett.

In the famous trial of the dean of St. Asaph, Mr. Erskine, the great English lawyer, put a question to the jury relative to the meaning of their verdict. Justice Buller objected to its propriety. The counsel reiterated his question and demanded an answer. The judge again interposed his authority in these emphatic words:

"Sit down, Mr. Erskine. Know your duty or I shall be obliged to make you know it.

Mr. Erskine, with equal warmth, replied: "I know my duty as well as your lordship knows your duty. I stand here as the advocate of a fellow citizen, and 185,00 I will not sit down. The judge was silent, and the advocate persisted in his questions.-London Opinion.

The rose must have been Shakespeare's favorite flower, if one with so catholic a taste can be said to have favored one above another. He speaks of it at least eighty times, using it in several cases as the symbol of perfection, as where Ophelia describes Hamlet as "the 'rose' of the fair state."
