

TWO FISHING BOATS CAPSIZE ON NEHALEM BAR.

One Astoria Fisherman Drowns and Another Dies from Exhaustion.

Four Astoria fishing boats left Astoria on Tuesday, each of which had two fishermen on board, on their way to Nehalem, where they intended fishing. They arrived off Nehalem bar about noon and attempted to cross in, but in doing so two of the boats were caught in heavy breakers and were capsized on the bar. Three of the men managed to reach shore but one died from exhaustion soon after. The body of the other man was picked up at Twin Rocks by the life saving crew on Wednesday morning. The two other boats crossed in the next day.

Wheeler, Ore., September 18.—The capsizing of two power fishing boats late today on the Nehalem river bar caused the death of Adolph Bernula and Anita Ojala is believed drowned. The former died from exhaustion after swimming ashore. Anton Hahto and Salmon Hahto, boatmates, respectively, of Bernula and Ojala, reached shore safely.

Another power boat manned by John Maki and John Myra, was unable to cross the bar on ebb tide, and with a rough sea running the men tied their frail craft to the bell buoy outside the river entrance. It is reported that the Garibaldi lifesaving crew has gone to the men's rescue. The men were heard ringing the bell buoy in the darkness.

A fourth fishing boat manned by John Karhela and Andrew Juntilla crossed the bar safely, arriving here early tonight.

The fishing boats were operated by the men for the Union Fishermen's Co-operative Company, of Astoria, and left Astoria early today for this place.

After swimming ashore at Manhattan beach Anton Hahto collapsed and is now being cared for at that place. His brother walked five miles to Wheeler.

Death of H. E. Weston.

We are sorry to announce the death of H. E. Weston which occurred on last Friday morning. The deceased had been in poor health for some time. He was a member of the G. A. R. and during his residence in Tillamook was greatly respected. The funeral took place on Sunday, when a large number of sympathizing friends attended, including members of the Corinth Post and W. R. C.

Although ill health prevented active participation in the business life of Tillamook, Horace E. Weston was one of the most interested spectators of the life by which he was surrounded, and a sincere admirer of the people and institutions which comprise this wonderful coast country. This former agriculturist, and courageous defender of the Union during the Civil war was born in Somerset county, Me., August 18, 1843. His father, Edward, and his grandfather Isaac Weston, were also natives of the great timber state, but his great grand father, Eli Weston, was born in the seat of Puritanism in Massachusetts. This remote site and founder of the family of Maine, lived with his parents on a farm, and when yet a lad accompanied his father, and another boy and his father, to look over land with reference to making a permanent settlement. Selecting a favorable location, the fathers returned for their families to Massachusetts, leaving the boys to care for the stock during their absence. Only those who have been there, or have indulged in recent fiction passed upon the wild and uncouth and dense timberlands of the north, with their turbulent streams, their appalling solitudes, are in a position to realize what these boys underwent while watching their father's stock. Longingly they waited for the familiar faces of the home folks to cheer the terrible monotony, but the river being frozen the expected ones failed to arrive, and the herders were left the whole winter with Indians only for their companions. The boys were eleven years of age at this time, and after the great grandfather had grown to maturity, had married and had children and grand-children to cheer his old age, he used to tell the story of the dreariest experience of his life in the north, long before the Revolutionary war. Edward Weston went from Maine to Wisconsin, in 1855, located in Pierce county, where he farmed until his death in 1888. As became a patriotic son of the Union, he served during the Rebellion, in Company A, Twentieth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, participating in many important battles of the great contest. He was survived by his wife, formerly Abby E. Johnson, of Maine, who came to Oregon in 1889, and at the age of 83 was in good health and spirits, making her home with her children. She prides herself that her husband, four brothers, three sons and two son-in-laws served as soldiers in the Union army, and only one son, John, was left on the field of battle.

The Weston family was represented by yet another soldier in the Civil war for Edward Weston inspired his sons with admiration for his example, and Horace E., then twenty years of age enlisted in Company A, Twelfth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, serving two years, or until his discharge in Louisville, Ky., in July, 1865. As a soldier in the Army of the Potomac fought in Georgia, North and South Carolina, and other southern states, taking part in sixteen battles. After the war he returned to the home farm in Wisconsin, assisted his father up to the death of the latter in 1888, and then assumed entire control of the property, having bought out the other heirs. Never of strong constitution, many years of farming undermined the health of Mr. Weston, and he was advised to seek a change. Since selling his Wisconsin farm and removing to Tillamook, in December, 1895, he was benefited physically, and made many friends and associations.

In Pierce county, Wis., Mr. Weston married Achsa Howe, who was born in Pennsylvania, and died in Wisconsin, leaving one child, Edward who lives on a farm in Tillamook. The present Mrs. Weston was formerly Mary Fowler, a native of New York state, and an early settler in Juneau county, Wis. Mr. Weston was a Republican in politics, and in former years while living on the Wisconsin farm, held many local offices, including those of supervisor, assessor, member of the town board, school director and clerk, and justice of the peace. He is a member of Corinth Post No. 35, G. A. R.

"Hell Morgan's Girl."

San Francisco before the earthquake and fire. The interior of "Sailor's Rest." The proprietor, "Hell" Morgan, and his daughter. A conniving politician who coveted the queen of "Sailor's Rest." Thus the stage is set when Roger Curwell, a portrait painter, comes upon the scene—and then the story of "Hell" Morgan's girl gets under way. Harvey Gates puts into novel form and Ida May Park prepared for the screen this thrilling tale of love, cunning and adventure that ends in the Presidio, where thousands have fled following the disaster that appalled the world and laid a wondrous city prostrate for a time. No more thrilling or gripping tale of love's struggle for supremacy has ever been screened and presented a master work of the presentation that will be exhibited at the Gem theatre on September 25, with beautiful Dorothy Phillips playing the title role of "Sailor's Rest" for the love queen of "Sailor's Rest," artist and actor, Roger Curwell, artist and man of refinement, sunk to a lower stratum, only to rise to the level of the girl he loved and bring her on with him to the fullness of life's best ideals. "Hell Morgan's Girl" pictures in gripping scenes the transition of two souls, passing, as it were, in their flight, to eventually join the happiness of perfect redemption through love.

PLAN TO EXAMINE ALL DRAFTED MEN.

War Department's Proposal Is Agreed To By Governor.

Salem, Or., Sept. 18.—Governor Withycombe said today that he had consented to a tentative plan, proposed by the war department, for the examination of all men who will be included in the second draft, and that it was probable that the military machinery of the state would be put into operation to this end in the immediate future. "Some time ago the war department suggested a tentative plan for the examination of all men who will be included in the second draft, and I have given it my approval," said the governor. "The suggestion was advanced by the war department that by proceeding and examining those subject to the draft now, all of them would be ready when the call for the draft was made. I expect to receive word at any time that the plan has finally been adopted, and for us to proceed with examination and exemption work."

Governor Withycombe's decision is the result of a suggestion by the provost marshal general of the United States army it was suggested that the various states decide the question as to whether or not it would be advisable to proceed immediately with the examination of all men who are subject to the draft.

Seven million men in the United States will be affected by the plan and 63,000 in Oregon. All men who are subject to the draft are to be leisurely examined by the various boards throughout the states. It is believed the rush and suspense that have previously existed will thus be eliminated.

Up to this time it has been the practice of the boards to examine only those men who were included in the first quota of the draft.

SWEDEN REALIZES SERIOUS SITUATION

Stockholm.—Sweden realizes the seriousness of the situation created by the recent disclosures at Washington regarding the transmission of German dispatches and expects to take all steps possible to put matters right. Foreign Minister Lindman stated during an informal talk. All transmission of German dispatches had been stopped, he said, and Germany had been asked for an explanation of the abuse of the privilege formerly extended.

The foreign minister, during the entire conversation, seemed imbued with the desire to see the situation cleared up fully and completely on a basis satisfactory to the United States and Sweden, and in a way to permit the continuance of the most friendly, cordial relations with the American government and people.

"As soon as I was informed of Secretary Lansing's statement," he said, "I immediately gave orders to cease this practice. This would have been done earlier as a matter of course had my attention been called to the undesirability of the practice."

The foreign minister has as yet been unable to explain the exact circumstances under which the practice of transmitting dispatches in code for Germany had come into being, as it was an inheritance from the administration of his predecessor. He had ordered a rigid investigation within his department as to the origin of the system, he said.
