

What the Editors Say.

Goethe was the wise prophet who once said, "The Prussian is born cruel and civilization will make him a savage." Many less wise who read the statement in the past doubted its correctness.—Telephone Register.

May heaven pity the old man with a duty tongue who befools and bemirches the pure minds of the young. He is like a rotten sore tainting everything in which he comes in contact. No disease is more dreadful; no disease more contagious.—Sheridan Sun.

Stripped of all cant and hypocrisy, the side issues raised to befog the public mind torn aside, there is but one question for the honest working man to ask himself, and that is, "Do I owe allegiance first to my government or to my Union?"—Financial Chronicle, Seattle.

After all, the young married man is in a duce of a fix. If he claims exemption, he is called a "slacker." If he does not claim exemption, there is danger of the neighbors intimating that there are some things he deems worse than war and you know what General Sherman said. So there you are.—Newberg Enterprise.

Do you ever hear of any one going to Germany to better their living conditions for themselves and their children, to enjoy more freedom, to have a chance to prosper and ride around in automobiles? No! We should say not. What has Germany done for you? And as Americans done for you?—Banks Herald.

We glory with the farmer who gets $2.20 for his wheat until we have to pay ten cents a loaf for our bread. France gets 35 ounces of bread for 9 cents and England pays 11 cents for 32 ounces of bread. Another lesson America must learn from the war is that civilization does not include the food speculator. England and France are getting most of their wheat from America, and America pays close to three times as much for the bread that is made from it.—Oregon City Courier.

We have heard of "clean up" week, "dress up" week, "old home" week, "go to church" week and numerous other varieties of special week, but there is a brand new one. The "Merchants Trade Journal" has inaugurated a national "pay up" week. Sounds good to us! Likewise, we expect it sounds good to our creditors. If every one will pay us up we will be able to pull off our official stunt and keep the money in circulation. The way it works according to the sponsor, one $5.00 bill travels all the way from Maine to California, paying debts all along the line. Let's get in the line of march and help along a good cause.—Mt. Scott Herald.

We read in various parts of the country laboring people are striking for higher wages when they are getting the highest wages ever paid. In too many cases those employed do not consider the interests of those employing them; they see but one side. In a great many businesses today the men drawing the wages are making more clear money than the boss and have not the worry of keeping the business going. The wage-earner, if he would do himself good, would do well to take as much interest in his employer's business success as if it were his own. This is particularly applicable to the smaller business. Too many are interested no further than to draw the Saturday's check.—Itemizer.

The Hillsboro-Beaverton road is an object lesson of the old, wasteful plan of building through highways now happily superseded by a permanent plan by the adoption of the road bonds. At great expense to the two districts and the county a continuous stretch of macadam between the two towns was completed last year. It was good road and pleasant to travel while it lasted, but it was obliged to carry practically all the winter travel between Hillsboro and Portland and it is worn out. As a side road with only a reasonable proportion of the travel by automobile, it might have lasted long enough to repay its cost, but it proved what was already known—that macadam will not carry a heavy and continuous automobile traffic.—Hillsboro Independent.

"I speak from the viewpoint of the foreign born. I and millions of others like me came to this country alone, without money and without friends. We sponged on all that America had—her free lands, her free schools and above all her spirit of openhearted comradeship. She owed us nothing, but gave us all. We swore allegiance to her flag, her Constitution and her laws. We would be recreants, ingrates, perjurers and curs if, in the hour of her need, we concealed with her enemies and were disloyal to her cause."—Chief Justice Andrew A. Bruce of the North Dakota supreme court. And yet some are all this and more, too—in high places and in low places they toil ceaselessly to repay our generosity and our hospitality by conspiring with our sworn enemies to destroy our institutions.—Eugene Guard.

It's an opinion quite often heard expressed that Japan should send an army to Russia. Those who express this opinion, however, do not take into consideration the immense difficulties that Japan would encounter in doing so. At the present time, and in fact almost ever since the war began, Japanese troops could only reach Russia over the Trans-Siberian railroad with its single track, or by the long circuitous route through the Suez canal, the Mediterranean Sea and around the British Isles and the coasts of Norway and Finland to the White Sea and the Russian port of Archangel. The great distance and danger of this route would render the task of transporting an army over it an impossibility. The Trans-Siberian railroad, with its single track, offers a decidedly doubtful means of transportation for a force of the magnitude that would be necessary. The Russians themselves suffered a great disaster when they attempted to carry on their late war with Japan with this railroad as the only means of transporting troops and supplies. It quickly proved totally inadequate to meet the emergency and it is a very sure thing the Japs will profit by Russia's dearly bought experience and will not invite a repetition of it to themselves. Of course Japan could send troops to assist the allies, either on the French, Italian or Serbian fronts, with little less than the U-boat menace to contend with, but these fronts are not where they are needed. It's in Russia, to stiffen the backbone of the raw Russian troops, they are wanted, but how to get them there—even if Japan would send them—which is still a question, is a hard problem to solve.—Seaside Signal.

It's Distribution.

Some weeks ago we referred to the vital problem of distribution of going hand in hand with that of conservation and production. Every farm garden and orchard yields more than the family can use and a great part of this excess production is lost.

At first thought it is the farmer's loss but the city consumer also sustains a loss. The loss is partly concealed in the higher prices paid for the products actually used or in the limited use of fruits and vegetables due to the lack of money to buy and use in liberal quantities.

The transportation of agricultural products is the important thing with a nation in peace or war times, if the people are to be adequately fed at reasonable cost.

The imperative need of the hour as we view it, is not only production, not only conservation, but the transportation of food from producer to consumer as quickly and cheaply as possible.

It is essential that the State College and the County Agriculturists should get busy and form themselves into organizations or direct certain forces that will promote better distribution at cheaper rates.

Producers and consumers are friends by nature. Why is there not better co-operation between them?—News Reporter.

Truth for Germany.

Says a returned war correspondent who knows Germany extremely well: "President Wilson's indictment of the German government will be a hard blow to the kaiser and severely shake the existing governmental system. It will be a revelation to the German people—if it reaches them in a correctly translated form."

The German people he explains, have had it pounded into them by the government controlled press that "coalitions were being formed to crowd them out from equality with other great peoples." They have been led to believe that they are literally fighting for their national existence, that their enemies are seeking to tear Germany to pieces and deny them economic opportunity, and that the United States has lent itself to this "plot."

It will indeed be a revelation to learn that they themselves have been spending their blood and treasure to further an evil plot for extending the dominion of their imperial masters and riveting their own political shackles tighter; and that they may have the peace they so ardently desire, with assured equality in the family of nations, if they will only open their eyes, oust their criminal leaders and establish an honorable, representative government, with which the allies may safely deal.

It may startle them into realization of the true state of things—if they read the president's reply to the pope. But there's the rub.

How can they read it, with the boundaries of the German Empire sealed against truth from the outer world, with a governing class whose continued authority depends on its keeping the truth from the people, with a constitution which makes it impossible to change that government except by the voluntary consent of the kaiser, and with a press that thus far has submitted with shameful servility to the dictates of the imperial freebooters who made the war?

It is said that only one German newspaper ever printed a full and accurate translation of President Wilson's war message to congress, in which he stated our reasons for entering the conflict. It is considered unlikely that any German newspaper will print the recent message to the pope, except in some garbled and perverted form devised by the Prussian authorities.

Our government, however, is taking pains to see that some Germans, at least, become acquainted with the truth. Careful plans are being laid for distributing copies of the message inside the German lines by means of airplanes and "underground" routes. It is hoped that thus, little by little, the facts will penetrate to the consciousness of the German public.

When they do penetrate, we may reasonably expect a revolution in Germany. The Teutons cannot be so utterly different from other people that they will tolerate continued tyranny, suffering and disgrace when their plight is made plain to them and they see an honorable way of escape. They can have peace merely by changing their government. And though hobbled by one of the most ingenious systems ever invented for keeping a nation in bondage, they can free themselves whenever they care enough about it to take the steps that so many other nations have taken.

THAT KNIFE-LIKE PAIN.

Is Only One of Nature's Warnings of Weak or Disordered Kidneys.

Have you lame back, aching day and night? Do you feel sharp pains after stooping? Are the kidneys sore? Is their action irregular? Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the medicine that is recommended by so many people in this locality. Read this Hillsboro resident's experience.

Mrs. A. R. England, 728 W. Oak St., Hillsboro, Ore., says: "Two years ago I had such a bad attack of lumbago that I wasn't able to get up or down stairs. When I sat down on a chair, I could hardly straighten up. Sharp pains, like a knife sticking me in my back, nearly killed me at times. I could hardly drag myself around, as I felt so completely played out. I had taken only a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills when my back commenced to feel stronger. I had used only one box when I was able to get about as well as ever. Since then I have never had any trouble with my back or kidneys."
