

BRING BACK HOME MEMORIES

Many Reasons Why Snapshots of Familiar Spots Are Dearly Prized by the Soldiers.

A piece of paper covered with black and white blotches—nothing more. But suppose those blotches have been painted by sunlight shining through a camera lens, and form a picture of a homestead, a familiar street or a mother's snowy hair, and face lined with the eloquent handwriting of the years—what would a soldier rather have from home than such souvenirs?

A snapshot of the house and barn; of the family sitting on the front steps; of father spading up the garden; of the old horse rubbing his nose along the pasture gate; of the dog wagging expectancy at the kitchen door; of the baby sprawling in the sand pile, or the older children squinting at the camera with the sun in their eyes—these are the scraps of paper which defy time and distance, a writer in the Boston Globe states. They assure men amid scenes of violence and death that the peaceful, sweet life they have left behind in order to defend still exists.

Now that the sweaters, stockings, wristlets, helmets, jam, tobacco, chocolate—and other creature comforts have been sent off, and brains are being nudged for something else to send the boys at the front, do not disdain the humble snapshot—the amateur photograph that any one can take by pressing a spring; the little peep of home faces and home scenes that can be sent far overseas and taken out of a pocket at odd moments—who knows at how odd moments—for a renewal of faith and hope and memories of home.

NOVELIST HAD HIS REVENGE

Dumas Worked With Subtlety, but Was Satisfied That It Would Be Thoroughly Complete.

When Alexandre Dumas, the French novelist, was a young man, he was seriously insulted by a man whom he had regarded as his friend.

Everyone expected him to punish the offender severely, but instead he began looking upon him with more consideration and apparent friendliness than he had ever shown before.

At length, three years later, when the erstwhile friend was to be married, the novelist was asked to serve as best man, and did so. When the ceremony was over and the guests were leaving someone remarked to Dumas: "I have often wondered at your kindness to this man. Surely yours is a remarkably forgiving nature, for although he insulted you grossly, you have assiduously studied his happiness ever since, and even assisted him in getting married."

"Quite right!" answered Dumas. "I flatter myself that I have given the fellow the most furious and long-eyed mother-in-law to be found in France!"

Making New Words.

We're going to help the dictionary makers with a couple of suggestions. Here are two words we have thought up without the aid of mechanical appliances or paraphernalia whatever—without even brains.

Piscapalate—A taste for fish; for instance, the fellow has one who loves shad so much that he is willing to spend half an hour taking bones out of his teeth just so to eat one slab of fish.

Strenulist—here is now "strenuity," therefore, why not strenulist, one who strenus? The strenulist is one who gets up before any one else and starts in doing a lot of unnecessary things real hard, just to make dust fly. He bores you to death telling you about it, so he should be separated from the common herd.

We'd like to have some more new words. If you've coined any, pass 'em along, please. The language is in danger and needs help!—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

One Quart of Milk.

Doctor Rosenow of Harvard university says that the actual food value of one quart of milk is equal to three-quarter pound of beef, two pounds of chicken, eight eggs, or two pounds of codfish. Each of these costs more, to say nothing of the time, labor and fuel required in preparation. A glass of milk costs only 33-4 cents in Connville today. The food value of that glass of milk is equal to two large eggs, or a large serving of lean meat, or two moderate-sized potatoes, or five tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal, or two tablespoonfuls of cooked rice, or two slices of bread. In other words, a meal consisting of one glass of milk and two slices of bread gives you as much food value as you would get out of four eggs.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

"I didn't much care about the way Josh's clothes looked down to camp," commented Farmer Corntosse.

"Hasn't he his regular uniform?"

"Not yet. If they're going to keep him dressed that way in hopes of deceiving the enemy into thinking he's just an obscure peasant or something, what I say is that it's carrying this new keremoofing too far!"

Behind the Lines.

Last Sunday I attended church service. The padre, during his sermon, told the boys that for every sin they committed they owed a certain amount to God. When I was leaving I heard Tommy remark:

"That settles it. I'll have to give up my pass to L—. I can't afford to go for I owe too darned much to God already."—Second-in-Command.

WHERE GREAT EMPEROR DIED

Longwood, the Prison House of Napoleon, is Maintained Much as He Knew It.

Longwood Old House, the prison home of Napoleon, is about four miles from Jamestown, the capital of St. Helena. Dismally unattractive, the place is in about the same condition that it was in the emperor's time. A low rambling one-storied farmhouse, once the dwelling of a peasant farmer of the island, it is hard to connect the place with the one-time master of the Tulleries and Versailles. But Longwood has an air of romance and mystery of its own, for it was the death place of Napoleon.

The house is badly lighted and ill ventilated. The rooms are tiny and musty. The so-called billiard room could never have held even the smallest table and the players at the same time. The reception room into which the emperor was moved when dying, is the pleasantest spot in the place, for it boasts of more than one window. It was in the space between the two windows that the death bed was placed. Here today is a bust of the emperor. Visitors to Longwood sign the ancient visitors' book in this reception room, while the aged guide tells the story of Napoleon's last days.

Above the first floor are the garget rooms, little more than cubby holes, where former statesmen and marshals of France lived during their exile with their master. Outside is the tiny garden and the emperor's favorite arbor. Here is the fishpool built by his own hands. At the foot of the plateau is Geranium valley, and the emperor's tomb. It was by Napoleon's own request that he was buried here. The famous willow tree of fiction and history still shadows the emperor's tomb.

In 1858 Queen Victoria presented Longwood to Napoleon III, who restored the old place, to the condition in which the great emperor knew it.

NEED NOT SEEK POPULARITY

"Expert" May Achieve Highest Measure of Success, but Naturally He Will Never Be Loved.

There is not much mystery, or even any at all, in the dislike of "experts" that is felt and expressed by not a few. The expert man is a man who goes to other men and tells them that the way in which they are doing their work is not the best way—that it is a bad, costly, or even stupid way—and that if they will only listen to him and follow his advice their work will be improved and their efficiency increased.

None of us takes pleasure in hearing talk of that sort, and the displeasure is greater in exact proportion with length of the hearer's training and experience in conducting his business, trade, or art. All that the expert says carries the implication of adverse criticism directed against the recipient of his suggestions, and usually it is criticism of that recipient's father and grandfather. Of course that is resented, and the resentment is bitterest when the expert goes ahead and gives undeniable proof that his new way of doing things is better than the old ways which have long been productive of honor and profit.

The expert, too, is always open to the convenient charge that he is not "practical"—that he is a man of theories and fads. Sometimes the charge is true—but only of the expert who claims the name without deserving it.

Peculiarities of Electric Ray.

The electric ray is a species of fish found on the Pacific coast. It is known from central California southward to Santa Barbara channel and is very common in Monterey bay. This fish is provided with an electric organ composed of hexagonal cells, reaching from the skin of the upper surface to that of the lower, and situated at each side of the head and gill chambers. The electricity discharged from this ray has the properties of other electricity, such as rendering an iron bar magnetic, decomposing chemicals and producing a spark, says the American Angler. Stories vary as to the volume of the discharge, but even a small ray is capable of inflicting considerable pain. After a few discharges the fish becomes exhausted and must rest before its electric organs are again functional.

Channel Tunnel is Missed.

How great have been the demands upon the British merchant marine for the reservation of ships for purely military purposes is shown by the statistics of the first two and a quarter years of war. During that time 8,000,000 men were transported across the seas and over a million sick and wounded. Of supplies and explosives 9,420,000 tons were carried, besides 1,000,000 horses and mules, and 47,500,000 gallons of petrol. If the channel tunnel had been built in the days before the war, a vast amount of merchant tonnage, now employed on transport service, would have been available for the world's commercial service.—Scientific American.

Saving the Pink Cup.

Three-year-old Buddie had a passion for pink. His latest craving had been for a pink cup out of which to drink his milk. Indulgent auntie got such a cup for him, and he used it for days with great delight.

One morning, however, he was late for breakfast, and some one had used the "sacred" pink cup. Buddie said not a word; his silence was significant. Later when his mother was washing the dishes, he came close to her and murmured:

"Mother, jes put pink cup on top 'self."
