Manage to Have Periods of "Fun," Much as Do the Children of More Favored Nations.

The Aleut boys and girls are very like boys and girls in the States, when you get under the furs and dirt and brown skins. They like fun as well as our children. One of them writes: "I was at Atka all last winter. I trapped two blue fox, which I am sending down to have sold for me. I also learned how to use a gun. Yesterday we went out with one of the teachers and I killed an eagle. The marshal gave me 70 cents for killing it because, he said, I was a girl."

Picking melinas (large raspberries) is a favorite occupation. The bushes grow on the side of the mountain, and to pick the berries one must either sit down and dig his heels into the bank or lie down and hang on with one hand, In spite of care the picker often takes an involuntary coast down the hill. Bogholes, pitfalls and mountain creeks add to the difficulties of the quest.

Clam digging is another change from home life that is welcomed by the children. They do this when, as one of the small boys said, "the tide is getting downer and downer." Salmon catching and curing is another help to the family larder .- Alice M. Guernsey in World Outlook.

A missionary in India gives some Idea of the multiplicity of a^t missionary's duties. (This and the last office are means of providing employment for the unemployed.) A builder, attending to the erection of his own churches and hospitals. A meteorologist, reaching and reporting the rainfall at the request of the government. A money-lender and the supervisor of a local agricultural bank. A literary man, translator and reviser. A colporteur. A seller of soap and tea, to raise money for missionary purposes.

How Woman's Shrewdness Served to Save Her Life and Incidentally Enrich Literature.

No one knows who wrote "The Arabian Nights," but it is related that "The Thousand and One Nights" as they are often called, originated in this manner: Schariar was sultan of Persia and having no faith in women and having carte blanche to marry as many wives as he chose, he had each bride killed the day after he married her. The vizier who did the executive work on this program was filled with horror at the atrocities he was obliged to perform, the more so as he had a beautiful daughter of his own and was in constant terror lest she find favor in the eyes of the sultan. One day his fears were realized and the beautiful Scheherazade was a chosen victim. She did not share her father's apprehension, however, having a scheme of her own for thwarting the sultan's designs. The morning after her marriage she began telling her husband a story, and just as he was about to leave her for his affairs of state, she brought the tale to that fascinating point where we generally find that it is "to be continued." The sultan decided to have her saved till night that he might hear the end of the story. This proceeding was repeated for a thousand and one nights. By that time, Scheherazade had borne him children and the sultan had decided to abandon the cruel practice of killing his wives. "The Thousand and One Nights," translated into French in 1704 by Antoine Gallard, was compiled from these fascinating stories.

Saul of Tarsus.

Saul of Tarsus, known as Paul after his conversion, referring to himself (II Cor. 10:11), says "his bodily presence is weak and his speech contemptible." Ernest Renan, the French writer, after consulting Jewish and Roman writings, says of him: "Paul was small in size, and his personal appearance did not correspond with the greatness of his soul. He was ugly, short, stout and stooping, and his broad shoulders awkwardly sustained a little bald hend. His sallow countenance was half hidden in a thick beard; his nose was aquiline, his eyes piercing, and his eyebrows heavy and joined across his forehead. . . His constitution was not healthy, though at the same time its endurance was proved by the way in which he supported an existence full of fatigues and sufferings."

Roger Bacon's Speculum.

The camera obscura, prototype of the photographic camera of today, is said to have been known to Roger Bacon-who lived in the thirteenth century. By some authorities he is even being credited with its invention, says James Thomson in Photo-Era.

The "speculum" of Roger Bacon, however, may have been simply of the order of the "busy-bodies" commonly employed in some continental European countries, and not unknown in Philadelphia, where in old parts of the city they may be seen in use almost any day.

The "busy-body" is a mirror fastened outside of a window at such an angle as to reflect the view up the street

The Cost of Life.

"To live is always to be hurt in some way," said a young voice recently. It was the half-resentful, halfwondering voice of one still new to the experiences of existence, and questioning their justice.

The statement is true, and the more fully alive one is, the more keenly are the hurts felt. Every joy brings with it its possible price of suffering. Every love opens a door to sorrow, every gift brings its weight of responsibility; wider knowledge brings the only an expression of the state of larger drain upon sympathy. The higher one rises in the scale of being, the ference in the character and form of greater becomes not only the capacity for joy, but also the twin capacity for suffering, but who would choose to be a clod to avoid feeling, a block of

Demand for Canned Milk of Goats.

California has a large ranch stocked with Swiss and Nubian goats, the milk from which is condensed and canned. Goats' milk is said to be very rich, and is in demand as nourishing food for invalids. A well-bred milch goat will produce 12 times its weight in milk. A cow produces yearly three times her weight if she is a good milker, but the goat cannot be depended upon for a steady supply of milk at all times through the year. Therefore it is said that canning is the best method of making a goat dairy profitable. An 11-

ounce can of condensed goat milk retails at 20 cents in the West, and the sale has thus far been confined chiefly Plants still living have been transplanted to suitable soil, and from the growths so obtained in three to six weeks the various kinds have been identified. As reported to the Paris Academy of Sciences, about 20 different species have been so far isolated. The molds are not all introduced into the books or paper, but in some cases their germs appear to have been present in the paper materials, even in the raw fiber itself.

Petulance and Earnestness.

To look mad and growl is almost as bad as swearing. In fact, if one analyzes the two, he will not find any difference between them. Profanity is mind. Of course, there is some difthe expression; but they all mean the same thing. We speak of this because the world notes the mental attitude and regards it the same as profanity, marble to escape the pain of a living | and imputes this fault to the man who Phone Us. wears a growl, remarks Ohio State Journal. And so a religious man who looks mad and growls depreciates his relation as a member of a church and reflects upon the church, too. There is unhappily a good deal of this going on and it is all in violation of Scriptural teaching. We must learn the differ ence between earnestness and petu Name lance and observe the difference in conduct or we injure the cause we are engaged in. There is no room for illtemper in a noble enterprise even if that ill-temper does not break out in epithet and wicked language.
