"HER BOY" A GIFT

Supreme Sacrifice for Country Made Willingly.

Spirit of American Women Manifested In Statement of One Who Had Been Called On to Give Up All She Had.

It was in a Red Cross workroom Somewhere in New York City. The Limelight woman moved around among the workers and talked incessantly.

"My boy has gone to France," she said mournfully. "I can't get reconciled. It doesn't seem right for a mother to devote years to the raising of a boy only to have him snatched away in the twinkling of an eye. I am patriotic enough, goodnes knows-I am willing to give everything, within reason, to my country, but I can't help but be thankful that we were able to get our other two boys exempted. I think all mothers feel that way, don't you, Mrs. Smith? It's the 'mother' in

She wiped away some tears and slowly rolled a bandage.

"It is easy enough for those who have no sons to preach these high ideals," answered Mrs. South in sympathy. "I am really not dependent upon my son, but if I can keep him from going by putting in that claim, I certainly shall do it. I think it is every mother's right to save her son for herself if she can. Don't think I'm not patriotic. I am working every minute in some sort of war relief work. Indeed I have no use for these unpatriotic women. What do you think, Miss

A frail little woman in a chair by the window looked up from her work with glowing eyes.

"My boy is in France, and I am glad of it," she said simply. "Your boy?" came in voices in uni-

"Yes, my boy. My sister died when Jack was two weeks old, and I have had him ever since. He was such a dear little fellow, such a dependable boy as he grew older, and such a comfort when he reached his manhood. . . . He has been to me what sweetheart, husband and children have been to you. We were just beginning to feel that life was easier when our country entered the war. For three evenings after the president's war message he sat without talking. I knew what was on his mind, so the fourth evening I told him not to think about it any more, but just go. He said: But you, auntie, you deserve some ease now. You have done so much for me, and you have had such a hard fight to make both ends meet.' I said, 'Nonsense, the fight never hurt me. What if the mothers of Washington and Grant had wept and wailed and kept them at home? No, my boy, I want you always to do a man's part, no matter where it takes you or where it leaves you.' He has gone, and I am glad that he has. I couldn't bear to have some other woman's boy protecting me. If Jack does not come back, I shall still be glad he went-for I didn't loan my boy to my country. I

There was silence in the workroom. The Limelight woman was staring straight ahead of her. Mrs. South hesitated for a moment, then leaned forward and tenderly patted the work-roughened fingers which stitched so steadily. "Thank you," was all she said.

Ships Must Have Wireless. Every ocean steamer that leaves an American port is required by law to have wireless telegraph apparatus and operators. An act of congress, passed in 1910, made it unlawful for any ocean-going steamer carrying passengers to leave or attempt to leave any port of the United States without being equipped with an efficient apparatus for radio communication, in good working order, in charge of a person skilled in the use of such apparatus, which apparatus is capable of transmitting and receiving messages over a distance of at least one hundred miles, night or day. After the Titanic disaster, in 1912, this act was amended by providing that "the radio equipment must be in charge of two or more persons skilled in the use of such apparatus, one or the other of whom shall be on duty at all times while the vessel is being navigated." The provision for two skilled operators was to cover the possibility of one being overworked.

Always a Way.

Some small girls were skipping rope on an East side street yesterday afternoon. The children skipped and twisted in turn, while a little mother, with a sleeping baby in her arms, looked on wistfully. There seemed no place to lay the baby, and the other little girls were far too thrilled to think of offering to relieve her to her charge while she tried her prowess. Finally she could stand it no longer. Casting around in desperation she spied one of the iron barrels provided by the city for refuse paper, and thereby solved her problem. Quickly the barrel was turned on its side, the papers pulled toward the top to make a soft bed, and the baby deposited therein. Gently it rocked in its improvised cradle, sleeping peacefully on .- New York Times.
