

CLOSED SUNDAYS.

BEGINNING SUNDAY, OCT. 20.

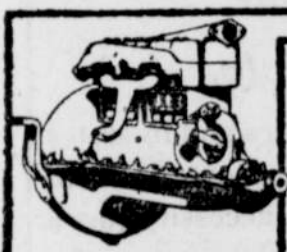

The Oregon State Council of Defence has requested that no delivery of Petroleum products be made on Sundays.

The Standard Oil Co. is glad to comply with this request, and beginning Sunday, October 20th, and thereafter, until further notice, all of our distributing stations in the State of Oregon, including our automobile service stations, will be closed on Sundays.

As in the case of our previous announcement regarding the sale of gasoline and engine distillate only between the hours of Six A.M. and Six P.M. (now week days only), this request is made for the purpose of conserving man power, and we know that our patrons will patriotically co-operate in making this important war measure effective.

Standard Oil Co.

CALIFORNIA.

The Ford automobile engine, illustrated here, like all internal combustion engines, requires an oil that holds its full lubricating qualities at cylinder heat, burns clean in the combustion chambers and goes out with exhaust.

ZEROLENE LIGHT fills these requirements perfectly because it is correctly refined from selected California asphalt-base crude.

"Zerolene is the Best"

Say leading motor car distributors, because the records of their service departments show that ZEROLENE, correctly refined from selected California asphalt-base crude, gives perfect lubrication with less wear and less carbon deposit.

Most cars are now lubricated with ZEROLENE because their owners have learned through experience that there is no better oil.

ZEROLENE is the correct oil for all types of automobile engines. It is the correct oil for your automobile. Get our lubrication chart showing the correct consistency for your car. At dealers everywhere and Standard Oil Service Stations.

What the Editors Say

Nothing has impressed us as finer among all the young soldiers we have met than the absence from their thoughts that they were entering a war inspired by hate, Body and soul, we believe, they have devoted themselves, as perhaps no other army ever has, to a great and holy cause, with "malice towards none."—Itemizer.

And to think that Portland, rich and opulent Portland, thriving and thrifty, caused Oregon to lose first honors among the states of the Union in attaining its Liberty quota! Portland with its war industries, its big payrolls, its shipbuilding plants, its increasing population, owes an apology to the state.—News Reporter.

Our old friend Jim Stewart, of the Fossil Journal, will again represent Wheeler county in the legislature at the coming session, after which he announces he expects to go to France as a Y. M. C. A. worker. With Jim's story telling coupled with his ready Scotch wit he ought to be able to dispel any case of the blues that may show up among the boys around the camp fire. He has two sons in the army, a brother lying wounded in a hospital at Salonica, while another brother was killed while in action.—Graphic.

Some of the clerks who are in the employ of the government getting out publicity copy for the hundreds of country newspapers throughout the United States, might better be employed in munitions factories or the kitchens of some of our society people for all the good they are doing in putting in their time and wasting paper. Newspaper publishers are conserving in the use of paper, and others should. Business men are getting little or no job printing done—saving paper. It is a fact, however, that there is need of more conservation on the part of some of the larger concerns.—Willamina Times.

According to a news article in the Portland Oregonian, the Democratic National committee is soliciting congressional campaign contributions from both republicans and democrats who are officers or stockholders in ship-building companies engaged in building ships for the government and depending upon future contracts from the same source. If this has been done, it is reprehensible in the highest degree. If this has been done in every other section of the country where government contracts have been let. Direct and personal solicitation of partisan contributions from a concern having a war contract is the grossest kind of utilization of the war for partisan political purposes.—Observer.

While the Democratic candidate for governor is conducting a thorough canvass of the state, and did not even let the Liberty Loan drive interfere, Governor Withycombe has been sawing wood down at Salem meeting the perplexing problems incident to the war. His candidacy is not based on the handshaking tour in which he makes promises about an office of which he knows little, as is the case with his opponent, but he is simply referring the people to the manner in which he has performed the duties of the office during his past term and asking re-election on that basis. He knows the work, has met every requirement during a period the most trying in the state's history. His opponent is inexperienced. We believe the voters of the state will agree that this is no time for experimenting with new men and Governor Withycombe will not lose votes because he has stuck to the state's business to the exclusion of his candidacy.—Independent.

One day last week a teamster whose horses could not hold the load he was hauling on the Rex hill shoveled some dry dirt onto the paving in order that his horses might get a toe hold. A shower that followed soon afterward made the clay dirt as slippery as soft soap, which caused a great mix up of autos and motor trucks that passed that way, though no serious accidents resulted. It has been evident all along, to observers, that horses would have a hard time climbing the grade there during the winter season, and unless provision is made for teams at one side of the paved grade there will come times when it will be a "closed highway" for the noble horse. In icy times a coating of sand covering the paving would probably obviate the trouble but rains that would follow would soon take it off. And while the Rex hill is being discussed it may not be out of place to admonish the doctors, the nurses, the undertakers and the grave diggers to hold themselves in readiness, for with the speed that some auto drivers "hit the pike" coming down that long grade and sailing over the fill in the canyon at the bottom of the hill, it seems hardly possible that the slippery season will be passed over without some serious casualties being enacted there. No charge is made for the suggestion and it is not made with the thought that it will cause drivers to be more cautious. It is so easy to turn on the gas, don't you know.—Graphic.

Hits Bank Stock Values.

Activities of the Non-Partisan League in North Dakota have been so successful that the value of North Dakota bank stocks have gone down 20 per cent. As the league is fighting the banks, its leaders is pluming themselves on the damage they have done to the objects of their wrath.

We have recently seen a private letter from a North Dakota banker to an Oregon stockholder, in which he says that stock in his bank is bought for 20 per cent less than it bought on the market two years ago, and that this decrease in banking stock values is about the same throughout the whole state. The reason he sets forth as follows: "You are probably aware that this state is now controlled absolutely by the Non-Partisan League and the socialistic element who are threatening to drive business out of the state. What the outcome will be is hard to predict, but they do not seem to use any reason and are bent on the destruction of all business and financial interests. They have already incorporated a number of farmer stores, and in different towns have started farmer banks, and whenever they start a bank in a farming community, the other banks will have to go out of business. We would not care to buy your bank stock under these conditions, even at the reduced price."—Oregon Voter.

Across the Rhine and on to Berlin.

The terms to Bulgaria must now be the terms on Germany, to Austria, to Turkey—unconditional surrender. Unconditional surrender and immediate evacuation of invaded territory; unconditional surrender and instant stacking of arms.

And the peace treaty must be signed in Berlin, with our victorious armies firing salvos of victory with captured German guns, to impress indelibly upon the minds of the German people that their reckless leaders have brought humiliation and ruin upon them.

This is no time for a negotiated peace, with a kaiser proclaiming such exhortations as "My navy is holding its own against the united enemy naval forces;" "troops of all the German states are heroically defending the fatherland on foreign soil;" "the eyes of those at home rest with pride and admiration on the deeds of the army and the navy."

This is no time for a negotiated peace, when the new German chancellor, speaking before the applauding reichstag, declares:

"Only when our enemies feel that the German people stand united back of their chosen leaders—then only can words become deeds. * * * Thanks to the incomparable heroism of our army, which will live as an immortal, glorious page in the history of the German people for all times, the front is unbroken."

The German people's chosen leader! Chosen by whom? The kaiser still hugs the delusion that he was chosen by God, and he in turn, not the German people nor the German reichstag, chooses all the ministers, including the new chancellor, and his generals—Hindenburg, Ludendorff and all the others.

William of Germany is mightily scared, but unrepentant still. He fishes now for a tricky peace in order that he may save and perpetuate the monstrous evils which inflicted all his death, destruction and misery upon a horrified world—Prussian absolutism and autocracy and Prussian militarism and "kultur."

A negotiated peace which stopped one hour short of driving into the minds of the German masses the knowledge that the kaiser, the crown prince, Hindenburg and Ludendorff had suffered an ignominious drubbing, that the German armies were smashed and routed, that the allied powers and their armies were 100 per cent victors and the kaiser 100 per cent vanquished and suppliant, can not and must not be considered.

Forward, mes braves! Across the Rhine and onto Berlin!—Spokesman Review.

How Germany Will Suffer.

The activity of German submarines along our coasts is stimulating the American sentiment for a trade boycott as a trade punishment after the war. Since the enemy undersea wasps have been destroying helpless fishing fleets resentment has increased strongly. Within a few days 200,000 signatures have been obtained to a pledge not to buy anything made in Germany after the war. The organization expects to get twenty million such pledges.

Such a movement is apart from any government plans under peace terms. It will be effective without any legislation on the subject. Great Britain and France intend to exclude certain imports except under special license, and has tied up under contracts the raw materials in colonies for years to come. The prejudice against Germany's style of warfare will be felt for more than a generation and she is bound to suffer in consequence.

Germany is largely dependent on the outside world for her raw materials and her manufacturers are now much alarmed over the prospect of obtaining them. We shall defend our new dyestuffs and chemical industries against German competition, of course, by a tariff. In many ways Germany is bound to suffer a heavy trade loss through personal opinion in enemy countries, whatever may be the terms of a peace settlement. As our losses grow on the battlefields and her submarine crimes increase, so will the trade sentiment against Germany be intensified in the United States. And very likely, also, will the peace terms be made the more rigid. And today the business men of Germany are considering with alarm the tendency of public sentiment against them.

PRAISES THE YANKEES.

French Editor is Much Impressed by Spirit of Americans.

Leon Daudet, son of Alphonse Daudet and editor of the Action Francaise recently visited some scenes of American activity behind the lines, and his enthusiasm is unbounded.

"What cordial frankness they show," he writes of the American soldiers, "to the inhabitants they offer their bread, preserves and cigarettes with a charming gesture which seems to say, 'Are we not brothers?' They are full of politeness to every woman, no matter what her age, and of kindness to every child."

"In a station, in the middle of the night, I saw some poor little kiddies, the family of refugees, sleeping on the floor. Two American officers passed. They stopped, looked, shook their heads, then without a word, throw over the youngsters their overcoats, which they were carrying on their arms. They themselves sat down nearby and waited for two hours in the cold air of the dawn."

"A French aviator, instructor at a flying school for Americans, said to me: 'They are remarkable pupils; their docility and modesty are wonderful. They learn rapidly and retain everything, and their gratitude to their teachers is extreme. They burn to avenge the devastation of France.'"

After speaking of the American Red Cross hospital trains with the greatest admiration Daudet concluded:

"To the French, to the English, still full of valor but exhausted by four years of terrible war, the Americans are bringing their fresh blood. The older fighters, seeing this glorious aid arrive, understanding its valor and vigor, have felt their forces revive. Hope, the certainty of victory, have bounded in a single leap to the marvelous level of the beginning, and by victory I mean the definite crushing of accursed Germany. I do not know that the world has ever known a sight so grand or one that even resembles it."

Tariff and our Debt.

The United States national debt is growing rapidly. It will soon be over twenty-five billion dollars, mostly for the war. We cannot help this or stop it and we should not stop it but should expend twice the amount to win the war if necessary.

This enormous sum must be paid some time and the easiest way to pay it is through the tariff.

Our government should at once raise the tariff on all imported goods sufficient to pay off this great debt, with interest, in a few years after the war and we will never feel the debt.

Can we expect the free trade Democrats to make such a tariff law? No. Then if the people want to help them selves and especially the producers of this country, they must elect a Republican Senate and Congress who will give the United States the tariff legislation needed. It is up to the electors to protect themselves by electing protective people. Study it over, see what is for your best interest and vote accordingly.

Why Not Leave it to Foch?

"If there were 10 divisions of American soldiers in Italy now," says Charles Edward Russell, returning from that gallant and much-enduring country, "the war could be ended by Christmas or before. This is not a rash assertion of a civilian that has seen only a few battlefronts but is the deliberate judgment of the very best military observers that have carefully studied the exact situation in Italy."

Mr. Russell's zeal in the cause of civilization entitles him to a respectful hearing. His appeals for coal, oil and steel for Italy should not fall upon deaf years. But as to the 10 American divisions, his military advisors, however high in place, may be mistaken.

Marshal Foch has at his command many times 10 American divisions. He has more than 10 that have arrived in France since the tide of battle turned in July. If the war could be won before Christmas by sending these troops to Italy it is highly probably that Foch would send them. If he does not send them it is probably because he does not think that course would win so quickly.

Notice of Final Account.

The undersigned have filed their final account in the County Court of Tillamook County, Oregon, and said court has appointed Monday, November 11th, 1918, at the court house in Tillamook City, Oregon, at 10 o'clock a.m., as the time and place for hearing objections to said final account and the final settlement thereof. All persons interested will govern themselves accordingly.
