Birds Ignore Shells.

The indifference of birds to the noise of exploding shell fire in the war zone is regarded as most extraordinary. While horses, dogs, cats and other animals are very sensitive and show every evidence of fear, the birds sing and chirp and fly about as merrily as ever during the heaviest bombardments. The subject has been much commented upon in England and a recent number of the Journal of the Royal Medical Service, after discussing the subject says:

"It is most extraordinary how indifferent the birds are to the noise of exploding shells. In the early morning the whole world is sparkling with the twittering, songs and cries of the various species. A shell suddenly bursts with a loud report in the middle of the wood and you hear tremendous crashing through the branches, but the music of the birds goes on without a moment's cessation. Neither do they mind the shirking of our own shells which daily pass over their heads, nor the bursting of the enemy's anti-airplane shells high up in the air above them."

How to Assure Peace.

The greatest problem is how to settle affairs in Germany so that that nation will never again start a war of conquest. We cannot forever keep troops there. We may take away their fleet and level her fortifications, but they can build new. There must be some change of spirit. It is still an open question how far the course of German people has been due to the evil purposes of their own hearts, or to the deceptions practiced upon them by their rulers. But anyway they have from the beginning been given a garble and a false version of the war and its origin. If the German knew the whole truth about this war, and about the events that shall succeed it as time goes on, they are much less likely to start another. The allies should now insist upon a bona fide free press, so that any German paper that is willing to tell the truth can freely do so. Then at the coming peace conference a just and complete indictment against Germany should be presented. It should bring out the clear proof that Germany started the war, the rupture of treaties and agreements, the perfidies of the German spy system, the outrage of the army and navy, the killing of women and babies, the whole story of barbarity. Then the allied powers should insist that this truthful record be freely printed all over Germany, so that the truth can at last come home.

Wicked and cruel as the Germans have been, yet the truth is a very powerful weapon. It would indeed be surprising if many of them were not convinced by the publication of such a record. If the freedom of the press is thoroughly established, it will not be so easy again for military leaders to sway the people by their falsehoods.—Umpqua Valley News.
