 George Fosnot vs. Dora Fosnot is a divorce suit filed in the circuit court. These parties were married at Baker on the 20th of January, 1889, three children being born to the union. It is alleged for the past three years defendant treated the plaintiff in a cruel and inhuman manner, and last January when residing at Salem, defendant notified the plaintiff that she absolutely refused to live with him as husband and wife, notwithstanding the latter had tried to get her to do so.
 On Friday afternoon a number of citizens interviewed the County Court to discuss road matters and bonding the county. Much of the same ground was covered as was gone over at the meeting at Wheeler, with few exceptions. It was suggested that the road from Hebo to the dock be hard surfaced, and County Judge Hare said the road as far north as Bay City would have to be hard surfaced. As the State Highway Commission met on Tuesday, the County Court, with Frank A. Rowe and H. T. Botts, interview the commission to see whether some plan could be devised to hard surface the Three Rivers road.

Dairymen from all parts of the state are anticipating the convention of the Oregon Dairymen's Association which will be held in Hillsboro, Jan. 14 and 15. Dr. J. A. Kiernan will speak on tuberculosis eradication. This subject will be one of the big features of discussion. S. Fine, instructor of dairy husbandry of O. A. C., will speak on experiments in animal feeding, and Dr. R. T. Simms will give an address on important topics. As there will be no Farmer's Week at O. A. C. this year this convention will practically take the place of that interesting meeting.
 Ray Winfield Shultz vs. Esther Shultz is a divorce suit filed in the circuit court. These parties were married at Cloverdale on the 9th of July, 1917. The complaint alleges that on or about the 15th of March, 1918, and for a considerable length of time, both prior thereto and since that date, the defendant has been deeply infatuated and in love with Alfred Goodwin, and lived together as man and wife at Aberdeen, Wash. The defendant treated plaintiff in a cruel and inhuman manner and openly avowed her love for Goodwin, and contempt and hatred of the plaintiff. Defendant gave birth to a child on the 14th of June, 1918, and that she told to others that plaintiff was not the father. Defendant refused to live with plaintiff and has refused every effort of reconciliation. The plaintiff asks the court to annul the marriage contract and give him the custody of the child.

 The Bedloe is Launched.
 A large number of people went to the ship yard of the Feeney-Bremer Co. to witness the launching of the Steamship Bedloe, which was built for the government. The road to the shipyard was packed with autos and the day was ideal for the occasion. This was the first time that a number of our citizens had been on the Bayocent road and the first time they had seen the vessel, both of which caused them some surprise. The time set for the launching was half past one, and when she was freed she made a slow start, only moving a few inches. Miss Anna May Morgan, eldest daughter of Captain and Mrs. Morgan, had the honor of christening the vessel and the young lady was given a bouquet of beautiful carnations. The vessel then moved off slowly, but by the time she emerged from the shed she stopped after reaching the water. The cause appeared to be that two massive chains had been laid along the ways for the purpose of a brake, but this proving too much so as she lifted the heavy chains, and caused her to stop. This was somewhat of a disappointment to the large crowd. She was, however, taken off early Tuesday morning, several donkey engines being used for that purpose.
 Captain Morgan was the government inspector, and it is said that the Bedloe is one of the best built vessels constructed for the government by the Shipping Board.
 WESTERN STATES SEEK TO AMEND HIGHWAY BILL.
 Fear Expressed that Local Resources Are Insufficient to Match Federal Fund.
 Salem, Or. Jan. 1.—Doubt exists whether the northwest states have sufficient resources to match, on a 50 per cent basis, government money for highways construction purpose as proposed in a bill now pending in Congress whereby through a period of six years the Government would appropriate an aggregate of $600,000,000 for use in all states that would match the government money. State Highway Engineer Herbert Nunn left tonight for Salt Lake, where he will represent the State Highway Commission at a conference of highway officials of the Northwest states called for the purpose of formulating an amendment to the bill. The proposed amendment will provide that these states be required to put up less than 50 per cent of the amount made available to the respective states. Twenty five per cent and even as low as 10 per cent have been mentioned as a more equitable basis. Under the bill, with the Government appropriating $500,000,000 and the states the remainder, $1,200,000,000 would be made available for road building purposes throughout the United States in six years. Should the bill go through with the 50 per cent provision, Oregon's share in six years would be about $3,000,000.

WOW! EDITOR HAS SOME MEAL! He Tries Hard to Keep Pledge with People of Tillamook County.

From the Telegram.)
 Of course there is no truth in this story. It is quite as fictitious as if it had come from one of the Journal's favorite founts of information. It merely is a word picture of what might have happened had "Sam" Jackson kept his word.
 Until Sam Jackson, Portland's intrepid editor, gorged himself on the Journal building yesterday afternoon before a gasping, gasping thunderstruck multitude, with Os West as master of ceremonies and Dr. Marie Equi and Dr. Charles Hiram Chapman as timekeepers whose stood out as the most monstrous gastronomic accomplishment of the centuries. Sam's peerless event was pulled off on schedule time, as exclusively announced in The Telegram several days ago, and was witnessed by one of the largest crowds which has ever congregated in one place in Portland. The corner of Broadway and Yamhill, where the Journal building formerly stood, was jammed and packed on all sides by men and women who had resisted the temptation of the New Year's matinee for the sake of seeing Editor Jackson eat his own building, as he promised the citizens of Tillamook he would do should his widely published story of the signing of the armistice prove false.
 Enter Sam—Hungry.
 A special roped in section of the area immediately around the building was reserved for I. W. W., Germans and others of doubtful patriotism. Thunderous handclapping came from this faction as Editor Jackson, garbed in a gorgeous red jackrobe and otherwise looking like an ancient Roman gladiator ready for a tremendous bout, stepped forth, his chest bulging out, his aspect in general denoting one who was hungry from long fasting. This belief was confirmed when Os West told the expectant throng that Sam had forgotten all meals for a week in preparation for the event.
 The crowd's impatience waxed a bit warm because of a delay which resulted from wrangling between Dr. Equi and Dr. Chapman on one side and Os West on the other as to which particular part of the building Sam would start eating first. Os West said he should begin at the top and eat downward so that he would always have a solid foundation beneath him, because if he began at the bottom and ate toward the top his cargo of undigested brick and tile would become so burdensome to his stomach that he might tire before he got through and so disappoint the spectators. Dr. Equi and Dr. Chapman on the other hand, stoutly contended that the event should be divided into two halves, after the fashion of a football game, in order to give him a breathing spell, and that he should begin at the bottom where everything should begin, and that he should eat this out during the first half and let the upper portion of the building stand for the second half. Os vigorously protested that this would be a silly attempt to defy the laws of gravitation, but Dr. Equi and Dr. Chapman replied that such a stunt would be readily possible in a world ruled according to I. W. W. philosophy and they wished to give Sam a chance to demonstrate this fact on this one occasion.
 Os Makes Great Speech.
 It was finally agreed that Sam should be blindfolded and allowed to dive into the building pell mell and devour that portion which his teeth would first encounter.
 As Sam was being blindfolded by Doc Equi and Doc Chapman, Os made a great speech.
 "Ladies and gentlemen and fellow voters," began Os, as he jumped from the rut usually followed by spellbinders in saluting a crowd and put great stress on "fellow voters." "I have not come here to tell you that Friend Sam is displaying either wisdom or commonsense in his desire to eat the Journal building. I could not and would not do that, because to say so would be in contravention of the grand old constitution of these grand old United States of liberty and freedom. But I am here to tell you that he is willing to sacrifice his reputation as a wisecrack in order that he might live up to his word. Briefly, my friends, he is about to become a martyr to the truth.
 Great Scott! Sam Keeps Pledge.
 "As you all probably know, he very foolishly told the people of Tillamook that he would eat the Journal building should the story published by the Journal regarding the armistice turn out to be abortive, or, like the reports of Mark Twain's death, greatly exaggerated. We all know grievously and too well that his story of the signing of the armistice several days in advance of the actual occurrence of it was grossly and troublesomely false. Sam admits himself that it was the rankest kind of a hoax. Admitting it so frankly, he is here now to keep his pledge to the people of Tillamook. I now take great pleasure in introducing Editor Jackson."
 As Sam bowed and smiled profusely, a voice came from the seats reserved for the I. W. W.
 "What is all them papers doing piled up there?" asked the voice.
 "Them," said Os, "is copies of the Journal of November 7, containing Sam's story of the armistice. He has asked to be allowed to wipe his mouth with one of them every time he swallows a chunk of the building.
 More vigorous applause followed this announcement.
 A pathway long enough to give Sam a good start in his first plunge at the building was cleared on the Broadway side. Sam, blind as a bat, was led to the end of this by Doc Equi and Doc Chapman, each of whom held a watch. At the word 'Go' from them, Sam dived at his first meal in a week.
 As luck would have it, Sam's first contact with the building was at the stairway leading into the rooms in which the Journal had been wont to receive press dispatches from the Hearst and United Press service. It was in this room that the untrue armistice story first came to Sam. Instantly and as a ravenous beast did Sam go for this portion of his structure, stopping anon to blubber to the crowd that if he could swallow this part of the building as easily as he had made the public swallow the armistice story, the rest of the building would be easy for him. In a twinkling, and as if under the spell of some master magician, this part of the building disappeared first, stairway, doors, typewriters, telegraph instruments, desks and fixtures going down Sam's yawning maw as an insect would go down the gaping mouth of a python.
 Sam stopped long enough to breathe a sigh of relief at the last piece of this hateful portion of the structure was devoured. The rest of the building was easy for him, as he announced it would be.
 Doc Equi and Doc Chapman, official timekeepers, informed the amazed crowd that it had taken Sam exactly three minutes, the space of a prizefighters round, to gourmandize himself of the last vestige of the once proud old pile.

 As Sam walked away, looking a bit full, but apparently not inconvenienced, Os West read telegrams from Vic Berger, Gene Debs, Bill Haywood, Billy Hearst and Emma Goldman, expressing regret at their inability to be present and extending the hope that Sam wouldn't suffer gout or indigestion from his extraordinary meal.
 All in all, Sam's public New Year's dinner was voted the greatest event which has ever occurred in the Pacific Northwest.
 The above sketch grew out of an incident which took place when the Journal published the false statement that the armistice had been signed, and when asked by Dr. Boals, of this city, whether it was true, the Journal people phoned back that they would eat the Journal building if it was not true, and further authorized Dr. Boals to provide the best banquet that could be obtained for all the people of Tillamook County, and send the bill in for the same and they would pay it. As there are 10,000 persons in Tillamook county, and a banquet at $1.00 a plate, Jackson owes this county $10,000. The Journal has long proved itself to be the most unreliable newspaper in Oregon. The fake news it put over on the people of Oregon in regard to the armistice being signed was sufficient to disgust everybody, to say nothing of the false, deliberate falsehoods it publishes from time to time. The Journal thrives on creating class hatred, sowing the seeds of discord, and is doing the State of Oregon more harm than any newspaper in the state.

 The Flu Ban Lifted.
 The City Council met on Monday evening, with Mayor R. T. Boals and Councilmen W. B. Alderman, A. H. Harris, C. A. Johnson and S. Moulton were present.
 Allen Page sent in his resignation as councilman and the vacancy will be filled by the council.
 Mayor Boals made the following appointments:
 Street Committee—W. B. Alderman, A. H. Harris, and S. Moulton.
 Finance Committee—C. A. Johnson, A. H. Harris and W. B. Alderman.
 Health Committee—S. Moulton, W. B. Alderman and A. H. Harris.
 City Attorney—H. T. Botts.
 City Marshal—W. E. Noyes.
 City Recorder—Mrs. Stranahan.
 City Surveyor—W. S. Coates.
 In the matter of the flu embargo, this was discussed at some length and a vote of the council was taken whether the embargo should be lifted or kept on, when two voted for and two against. This put it squarely up to Mayor Boals to decide, and much against his own judgment he decided to lift the embargo.
