Cheat The Flu.

Wear a mask and cheat the "flu,"
 Cover up your beauty;
 Tragic news is this indeed
 For little Mildred Cutey;
 Spoils that luring rosebud smile.
 Screens the saucy dimples—
 But Lily White
 Is all delight;
 Hides her mole and pimples.
 Don't we know a lot of plugs
 Who ought to wear a muzzle!
 Problem, this has been for years,
 Quite a weary puzzle,
 How we'd work this very thing;
 How the doctors do it;
 Strap some gauze
 On their jaws;
 Let them whistle through it.
 Ought to do a lot of good,
 Hot air conservation;
 Halts the hopping Spanish germ,
 And the conversation.
 Great relief is this to us,
 All these years we've listened;
 To these guys,
 As in our eyes,
 Tears of rage oft glistened.
 All jokes aside, now isn't it
 Just like our village leaders;
 Those grave and portly gentlemen,
 Those hale and hearty feeders,
 To start a "drive"—a hue and cry,
 Replete with "organization",
 Moulding laws
 To force the cause
 Of simple sanitation.
 Certainly it's very tough
 Upon our merchant princes,
 And on the movies, and the gents
 Who sell friend mush and quinees.
 But if the quarantining scheme
 Is futile and defective;
 Let's shut the town
 Tight up and down,
 And storm the main objective.

INFLUENZA MYSTIFIES AS TO TRANSMISSION.

Experiments Put Medical Experts More in Dark.

An experiment which makes the transmission of influenza a more baffling mystery than ever, and which at the same time places on record an act of self-sacrificing heroism by about 100 naval volunteers, has just been completed by officers of the United States Public Health Service, co-operating with medical officers of the United States Navy at Boston and San Francisco.

As nearly everyone knows, scientists all over the world, in combating the spread of influenza, which is still going on, have proceeded on the assumption that it is transmitted chiefly by coughing and spitting.

Experiment is Made.

The theory has been that the diseased mucous thrown out by these acts is filled with the germs of influenza, which thus find lodgment in healthy tissue. All the experiments heretofore made seem to indicate strongly that influenza is transmitted in this way, and it is well accepted that most other respiratory diseases are so carried.

The latest experiment consisted in submitting the hundred men who volunteered for the purpose to every possible method of infection with influenza germs through the nose and throat. These men risked their lives for the general good, and for the advancement of science. They went through a singularly trying and repulsive ordeal. They, and everyone else believed that they were being inoculated with the dread disease which is destroying millions of lives all over the world.

Volunteers Escape Disease.

Their heroism is fully equal to that displayed some years ago by the men of the Army Medical Corps, who exposed themselves in Cuba to the bites of mosquitoes in order to determine finally whether yellow fever was transmitted by that insect. The only difference in the two experiments was in the result. Some of the officers who exposed themselves to the bite of the mosquito contracted yellow fever, and one of them died, thereby establishing the soundness of their theory. The volunteers who submitted themselves to inoculation with the germs of influenza were fully expected to take the disease, and were prepared to die, but not one of them developed any symptoms of influenza!

The astonishing negative result, which is the sensation of the day in scientific circles, should not tempt anyone to be careless in the matter of coughing and spitting or in exposing himself to infection by those acts. As officials of the Public Health Service point out, it may be that the germs of the disease disappear as soon as, or immediately after, the symptoms appear. Something like this is true of other diseases.

Care of Mouth Urged.

In measles, for example, it has been found that the germs which cause the disease are all gone within five or six days after the appearance of the rash, and the case is no longer contagious. The discovery of the fact which was made by Anderson and Goldberger, of the Public Health Service, only a few years ago, has led to shortening the quarantine period for measles by more than half.
 "These new experiments in the transmission of influenza," said Surgeon General Blue, "show how difficult is the influenza problem. They by no means indicate that we can afford to disregard coughing and spitting as common means of spreading disease, and even in the case of influenza this source of infection should always be borne in mind. I believe, however, that we have not paid sufficient attention to other paths of infection, especially to the lips, mouth and hands. The fact that the disease was much less common in army camps, where the sterilization of all eating utensils and dishes were rigidly enforced, shows the importance of the mouth as an avenue of infection."
 There can be no doubt but that these experiments at Boston and San Francisco were carried out with the utmost thoroughness.

Physicians are Puzzled.

The result of this experiment have left the medical world completely bewildered.
 The only thing which can be considered proved about influenza so far is that it is still a mystery, both as to the nature of its causative germ and as to its means of transmission, and therefore especially dangerous. Authorities, however, still consider influenza a crowd disease, and all unnecessary gatherings of people should be discouraged when influenza is prevalent.

Cure at a Cost of 25 Cents.

"Eight years ago when we first moved to Mattoon, I was a great sufferer from indigestion and constipation," writes Mrs. Robert Allison, Mattoon, Ill. "I had frequent headaches and dizzy spells, and there was a feeling like a heavy weight pressing on my stomach and chest all the time. I felt miserable. Every morsel of food distressed me. I could not rest at night and felt tired and worn. Berlin's Tablets cured me and I have since felt like a different person."—Paid Adv.
