If Bro. Trombley is really in favor of a labor organization, he should turn his "scab" print shop into a union shop, with the eight hour rule for his employees.

Evidently Germany is on the verge of a revolution. If newspaper accounts from there are to be relied upon. This is not to be wondered at, where Socialism obtained a deep hold upon the German people, even before the war. But the end is not in sight, for the military party, controlled by the junkers, have started a reign of terror and assassination.

We are inclined to believe that in passing a law for the appointment of a food and dairy inspector for Tillamook county, that it is a tendency to create too many public offices. It seems to us that if the County Agriculturist was clothed with proper authority he would be the proper person to see that the barns and dairy herds were kept in sanitary condition.

In the scrap over the office of secretary-salesman for the Tillamook County Creamery Association, several persons were made "goats". Goat No. 1 is Jim Christensen. A few prominent dairymen of Fairview went out to Pleasant Valley and succeeded in inducing him to become the bell-wether of the insurgents. Where Jim fell down in placing his cards he started in to attack those who expended a large amount of money for advertising. It transpired that he was on the committee and sanctioned the expenditure. Even if Jim was made the "goat" he has been a good friend and a willing worker for the dairy industry.

When will the government and numerous bureaus and institutions quit riding newspaper men to death? A letter yesterday says: "The bureau of Internal Revenue is sending to your office ready to print plates containing timely, instructive and important stories explaining the Income Tax now being collected. The use of these plates is, of course, free of charge." The fellows who are holding down soft jobs in the revenue office are paid, the Western Newspaper Union is paid for preparing and sending out this plate matter; the express companies and postoffice are paid for delivering it. But the newspaper man gets nothing and from the looks of things should expect nothing. Every newspaper man is about sick and tired of being ridden to death on the free horse while other persons are paid war time prices.

The state legislature passed two important road measures. One is to bond the state for $10,000,000, with the emergency clause attached. Seventy-five percent of the money is to be used in construction of pavement and betterment of roads designated in the road law passed in 1917, as hard-surfaced highways; and the remaining twenty-five per cent is to be expended in the discretion of the State Highway Commission in the construction of other roads of any class included in the same law. The new law practically adopts the road system to be improved as in the 1917 law, which designates a hard surfaced road from Clatsop county line, by way of Wheeler, to Garibaldi, and which also provides for 26 miles or more of hard surfaced pavement from Tillamook City. That this county will receive favorable consideration and some of the first work to be undertaken by the State Highway Commission is safe to predict, for Senator Handley put up a great fight in behalf of the State Highway Commission in the senate and evidently won out, although he was in the minority first off. He had the good sense to keep out of the cement trust and paving trust fights.

When a line can be obtained on what the State legislature have done in other road matters, it is proposed to bond Tillamook county, to cooperate with the State Highway Commission in building a hard surfaced road through the county, but this will not be done until the County Court or a delegation waits on the State Highway Commission for the purpose of ascertaining whether the Commission will agree to a 50-50 proposition. The other road bill is what is known as "The Roosevelt Coast Military Highway." It calls for a bond issue of $2,500,000 to be submitted to the people. There are conditions in this law, which provide that the government is to appropriate a like amount of money. In all probability this road would go through Hebo and Cloverdale to Neah-Howin and join with Lincoln county at that place. That a coast road would be a great improvement everybody should admit, but it questionable whether Eastern Oregon will favor it when it comes to a vote.

The report of the co-operative dairy associations in Tillamook county which we published last week are highly flattering in many respects. Weather conditions last summer were anything but ideal for dairying, it being one of the driest springs Oregon has seen for many years, causing a poor crop and almost a failure in some parts of Oregon. Tillamook County suffered to some extent, there being less green feed in the early summer months, but notwithstanding this there was an increase in the production of milk and in the amount of cheese manufactured. Although other parts of Oregon have had crop failures, it can be said of Tillamook county that this is unknown here, and it is interesting to look over the cheese production of this county for the past twenty years and see the rapid strides it has made in that time. Probably the most gratifying feature of the cheese industry in this county is the high grade cheese that is manufactured to-day compared to the poor grade in the early history of the industry in this county. It used to be that good and poor cheese were dumped on the market, and, of course, did the industry a lot of harm. One of the best things the dairymen ever did was when they decided to employ an inspector, and through him a uniform high grade cheese is now a premium on the market. It took several years for all the dairymen to realize the importance of that wise move, but they, for the most part, see the wisdom of placing a high grade cheese on the market manufactured under strictly sanitary conditions. Another thing, the dairymen are managing their own affairs under a co-operative plan with the best of results and the best of satisfaction, which has to do with the marketing of the cheese. It used to be that the jobbers put the price in Tillamook cheese. Not so now, however. It is right here where the co-operative associations have to be on the alert, for several attempts have been made to disorganize the dairymen of Tillamook county, with no other purpose in view than to allow the jobbers and the big packing companies to place the price on Tillamook cheese. There is not much doubt but what the interest of the dairymen will be well looked after by the directors of the Tillamook County Creamery Association and if that body can manage to keep the price of cheese up to a good price it will be doing well, for the changed conditions in the reconstruction of the country is sure to upset things for a time, but manufacturing a high grade cheese there is always going to be a good demand for it at top prices.

Cheese Making in Tillamook.

The review of the cheese-making industry for the year 1918, with comparisons showing its growth in the past ten years, makes interesting reading. The mere statement that the Tillamook county association, for example, handled 45,100,156 lbs. of milk for its members, and produced 5,936,900 pounds of cheese, valued at $1,352,94 shows the magnitude of the business. This represents an increase from 23,416,524 pounds of milk, 2,506,612 pounds of cheese and a valuation of $386,135, in 1909. The quantity of milk has nearly doubled in that period, the output of cheese has more than doubled, and the money yield has been trebled. The moral obviously is that by devoting themselves to a worthwhile industry to which their locality was well adapted, and by working together harmoniously, the Tillamook farmers have made definite progress. They deserve their prosperity, because they have made it for themselves.

The sum of $6,604,503, which has been received from this source in the past ten years, is a tidy addition at the same time to the wealth of Oregon, for there is no doubt that Tillamook dairymen are fixtures in the community, or that they spend their money at home. It is doubtful whether they could have so well served themselves and the state in any other way; certainly they could not have done so by chasing rainbows, or by sitting idly by the railing at fate. Successful dairymen, as a few persons know, requires an admixture of several virtues. The chief of these is tireless industry. The man who owns a herd of cows must keep a watchful eye on them. There is always something to be done around the dairy barn. As in other industries, competent help is not always easy to obtain. We may be sure that the Tillamook cheese producers have had their share of vexations. Yet the figures of growth tell the story of how they overcome obstacles.

We take from the Tillamook Headlight the significant statement that the high price of feed was not an unmixed evil. The dairyman, it appears may also be a philosopher. "The dairymen who played safe (and who increased their bank accounts) are those who followed the example of the early dairymen and who raised all of their own feed." A good many "poor milk producing cows were disposed of and helped out the meat market." But it is reasonable to suppose that in even greater degree the disposing of them helped out the farmer also. The history and progress in the dairy industry is also a history

The People Know Who is Responsible for Waste.
Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, is right in saying that the people of this country are incensed by the extravagance and waste, to use no stronger terms, which has characterized the conduct of governmental affairs during the past two years especially. But the people are not deceived, and cannot be deluded, as to the responsibility of this. It belongs with the administration and the party in power; an administration and a party which promised the American people in 1912 a "return to that simplicity and economy befitting a democratic government." Responsibility for this orgy of extravagance cannot by any sophistry be separated from those who have been exercising the appropriating and expending power. The people understand that Congress has been a mere tool in the hands of the executive power for the past six years, and especially for the two past years, when every demand has been backed by the cry of war necessity which made opposition seem unpatriotic. The people have a pretty clear idea of where the responsibility lies for a carnival of waste which has begun at the top and extended to the very bottom. Possibly there is a feeling that responsibility for the situation is shared, because of acts of omission, by Republican members of Congress who have fallen in with the idea that Congress is and of a right ought to be a mere seismograph for recording White House tremors, but stopping waste sponsored by the executive authority in a time of war is like trying to put out a prairie fire with a garden hose. The people have rendered one verdict on this frightful waste, but it is only a slight suggestion of what they are going to hand the party in power and all its apologists and defenders the next time they get an opportunity.

The London Post on Wilson.
The London, England, Morning Post, discussing the Paris conference says:
"Our conception of President Wilson is that he is a very considerable diplomatist who is endeavoring to commit his country to a policy of dislikes. On the one side, he lulls his own country by giving to a universal system of alliances and interventions a new name. On the other side, he suggests to Europe that he is hostile to the principle of balance of power at the very moment when he is putting it in practice."
"President Wilson, in our view, is the ablest practitioner in balance of power since Lord Castlereagh. He is trying, with infinite skill and address, to save Germany from the consequences of defeat and to deprive the allies of the consequence of victory."

If the last sentence is true, it is possible that the hand of one, Mr. House, is seen?
Private? Private!
A Paris cable says:
"The freedom of the seas, which has been more or less lost in the shuffle of other business, was taken up for the first time today by the Big Five."
"The discussion was private."
"Private? Private? Is this the practical application of Mr. Wilson's doctrine of 'open covenants?' Why have the mighty fallen?"
