Plaintiff prays that the association be dissolved and that each of the defendants be cited to appear and make an individual accounting of his financial relations with the association and that a receiver be appointed to compel an accounting. •
Another accident happened to Miss May Hodgdon and Wilbur Davis' car on Saturday night. Davis was going out to the South Prairie hall to bring in some passengers and when near there he met a number of persons in the road who signaled to him to stop. He turned his lights on the party to see who they were, and then turned to avoid running into them, and as he did so Miss Hodgdon ran to the opposite side of the road, Davis immediately turned his machine into the bank to avoid striking her, but failed to do so, the bumper on the machine struck the young woman and threw her in the air, and as the car went into the ditch it smashed one of the front wheels of the car. The young woman was taken to Boals' hospital being somewhat bruised by the accident. •

BONDING QUESTION DISCUSSED AT FAIRVIEW
State Senator T. B. Handley and State Master of Grange Argue The Question.
The meeting called by Fairview Grange to discuss the bonding question was somewhat disappointing, for it developed into a debate between State Senator T. B. Handley and State Master Spence of the Grange, with no opportunity for others to be heard, but it proved interesting in a good many ways. A large number of persons from this city attended the meeting and there was a large crowd present.
William Maxwell was elected chairman and the first thing on the program was the singing of "America." The chairman then called upon State Senator T. B. Handley, who was taken by surprise, but explained the road bills passed by the state legislature and the opposition that developed. He gave a good account of his stewardship and defended the emergency clause in the $10,000,000 bond bill, for the reason that the road work would afford a large amount of work for soldiers or others thrown out of employment, and drew special attention to the Roosevelt memorial military highway.
State Master Spence then took up the subject of bonding, contending that they should pay as they go. He said he was not opposed to good roads, but it was better roads he wanted for the farmers. He tried to show that there was sufficient money available, without bonding, and in doing so mentioned several cities and counties which had bonded, but the results did not come up to expectations as to the amount of work done. Then he broke away from the question of bonding and opposed letting road work by contract. He contended that farmers who did the road work were more interested and more work was done by them. He then arraigned the patent pavement concerns and abused those monopolies, but did not say one word in opposition to the cement trust, which is charging the state exorbitant prices for cement. He praised the pavement laid in Clackamas county and contended that the State Highway Commission was paying too much for pavement, all of which, however, had nothing to do with the question of bonding then under discussion. He accused the patent pavement concerns of having lobbied at Salem and said that the people paid for the advertisements and $1000 a month rent for a whole flat in the Journal building.
Senator T. B. Handley made a sarcastic reply. He accused Spence, Walter Pierce, Eug Smith and the Federated Association of labor of being mixed up with the non-partisan league, and characterized that party as I. W. W.'s and bolsheviks. This sally caused considerable amusement and applause and uneasiness to Mr. Spence. The Senator then came back at the State Master, in his complaint against lobby, and said that Spence was the greatest lobbyist and was always on the job. In reply to Mr. Spence's argument against contract labor, the State Senator stated that the Master of the State Grange had been hobnobbing with the Federal association of labor to bring this about, and if they succeeded it would mean that the county and state officials would be called upon to grant 7 hours a day to those who worked on road work. In Mr. Spence's argument opposing bonding, he failed to mention the saving that would be made in maintenance charges. The state senator was reliably informed that it cost $600.00 a mile for maintenance on the macadam roads in this county on the main traveled roads. For the first five or ten years it did not cost the county anything for maintenance, that being covered by contract. The county by bonding would raise a little over $400,000 and added to this the State Highway Commission would spend a like amount, making between $800,000 and $900,000, which could not be obtained if the county did not bond. Mr. Handley estimated that that amount of money would build forty miles of hard surfaced road. There would be a saving of between $20,000 to $24,000 in maintenance charges on that amount of road and between $400,000 and $500,000 in the 20 years. Even if it did not reach those figures the county would be several hundred thousand dollars ahead. And another thing the people of the county would have the benefit of the hard surfaced roads. The State Senator estimated that when a hard surfaced road is built through Tillamook county the road tax levy could be reduced 30 per cent. Mr. Handley criticised what is known as the Clackamas pavement, stating that instead of being five inches in thickness a piece that was taken up only measured three and a half inches. Mr. Handley questioned the accuracy of Mr. Spence's remarks about the county getting more work out of men than contractors, and said that

Mr. Spence was endeavoring to do away with the contract work so that the labor organizations of Portland could dictate to county judges and county commissioners, which could be done if the contract system was done away with, for Mr. Spence was working tooth and toe nail with the labor unions of Portland, and he had the dope to prove it.
Mr. Spence made reply, and considered that Mr. Handley had treated him unfair in the insinuating remarks about I. W. W. and bolsheviks. He refrained from mentioning one word about his association with the Federal Association of Labor and the lobbying they did at Salem. He again defended the Clackamas pavement, and showed that he was prejudiced against Messrs. Benson and Thompson, of the Highway Commission, but spoke a kind word for Mr. Booth. Mr. Spence twitted Mr. Handley for not mentioning the matter of some defects in the pavement laid south of this city, but failed to mention that the auto trucks carrying heavy loads of rived spruce and lumber was somewhat responsible for the defects.
Chairman Maxwell asked Mr. Handley to make some statement about the port of Tillamook, but as it was growing late he simply said that a bill had been introduced to do away with the port. He made another plea for the Roosevelt memorial military highway, for this was of great importance to Tillamook county.
MEETING AT NEHALEM.
Spence Comes Out in Favor of Bonding and Roosevelt Highway.
Wednesday morning it was noised around that State Master Spence would speak at Nehalem, although that gentleman had endeavored to keep it quiet that he would address a meeting there. It was decided to spring a surprise on the Grange Master, and State Senator T. B. Handley and a number of business men decided to go along.
There was a large meeting at Nehalem in the afternoon, A. C. Anderson being the chairman, and when the State Senator walked in with his delegation, this took Mr. Spence greatly by surprise. The meeting was called to discuss the bonding question, but Mr. Spence seems to have changed his mind about discussing the bonding question. He talked about oleomargarine and gave a good talk on Grange matters, and at the close of his speech made a few remarks in opposition to bonding, and the meeting was adjourned. This was a great disappointment to the people of Nehalem and at their request the State Master was induced to address the people on the bonding question, with State Senator T. B. Handley.
There was a large meeting in the evening, Mr. Spence making the opening and closing address. He made about the same remarks as he made at Fairview the previous evening, with the exception that he made a more personal attack on the State Highway Commission.
State Senator Handley, who was better prepared to handle the question than he was the previous evening when he was unexpectedly called upon at Fairview, fairly roasted the State Master and defended the personnel of the State Highway Commission. He stated that the late Governor Withycombe had appointed the best men he could get for the positions and that Governor Olcott had decided to retain them. The State Senator told why Mr. Spence was opposed to contract labor, who was working with the labor organizations of Portland.
In his reply Mr. Spence came out in favor of the Roosevelt Military Highway, and when the meeting was over admitted that conditions in Tillamook county warranted bonding to obtain hard surfaced roads.
