Nickolai Lenine is said to have declared that he cared nothing for his country, as such—that "the sole consideration is internationalism." Great minds run in the same channel.

Prof. Geo. Herron has dispatched the American bolshevik, Lincoln Steffens, to Moscow, to gather data for the Paris peace conference, of Benjamin Franklin.

The more we read about conditions in Russia the more we are inclined to insist that President Wilson's eulogist, Prof. Herron, should be compelled to make that visit to the bolshevik comrades.

Democratic members of the Missouri legislature have issued a statement declaring: "The world knows where the Democrats of Missouri stand." Yes, everybody has known that since Nov. 5, 1918.

The peace conference proposes to conduct a trial to determine who it was got us into war. Before adjourning it might give the American voters of 1916 an off-hand opinion as to who it was kept us out of war.

The official, public announcement of President Wilson during his first visit to Paris that he did not approve the plans for a league of nations endorsed by ex-President Taft is now recalled with some amusement.

Four of North Dakota's Non-Partisan party officials are in open revolt against the "autocratic rule" of A. C. Townley, whom they accuse of being a thoroughly selfish and tyrannical boss. There is no cure for radicalism in politics like radicalism in power.

The New York Evening Post uses up a column of editorial space proving that secret diplomacy is really all right if it is one's own kind of secrecy. Why not just admit that this bunk about "secret diplomacy" was intended by its authors to sell and not to use?

An organization of lunatic-fringe radicals prints an advertisement declaring that "the honor of America is pledged in favor of the fourteen points"—several of which were abandoned by their inventor long ago. Just when and where did America hand over her honor to the keeping of any individual in order that he might pawn it?

It is, of course, not surprising that Francis Burton Harrison, the Tammany Hall Governor General of the Philippines now in this country on leave of absence at a time when the most rudimentary sense of public would keep him at his post, has agreed to the abandonment of the Philippines. Abandonment seems to be one of Mr. Harrison's regular habits.

The divisions of the spoils of war at Paris gives Lloyd George the German colonies and what is left of Turkey. President Wilson the league of nations whereby the hold on this territory will be permanently protected in our great ally's behalf, while France will have to take her reward in glory. Strongly reminiscent of the division of the turkey and the buzzard between the white man and the Indian, isn't it?

With surlive faith, the New York World says, in discussing Mr. Burleson. "The peace conference at Paris will not last forever, and when the President gets home perhaps he will find time to put some of our domestic autocrats out of business." Who put 'em into business? The people will attend to the autocrat dismissing job in 1920, with no help from the World and the other administration acolytes.

If, as is claimed, Colonel Luke Lea and other American army officers formed a plot to kidnap the kaiser in Holland and bring him out as "a Christmas present to Wilson" they were engaged in an exceedingly foolish and ill-considered adventure. The United States and the allies can get the kaiser whenever they want him. The troublesome problem is not how to catch the kaiser, but what to do with him after we catch him.

By the way, which league of nations are the gentlemen defending these days? The original league, which President Wilson announced would not be modified? Or President Lowell's league? Or Mr. Taft's or Senator Lodge's, or Senator Knox's, or Mr. Root's or President Wilson's with the amendments which the Paris entourage tell the correspondents are now being made? When you talk about the league of nations just now you have to define your terms.

"The president has told us," says Senator Borah, "that it is our debt to humanity to restore demoralized Europe. But we are asked to perform that stupendous task under the system of those who have wrecked Europe for three hundred years and who under the proposed plan, would have absolute control of the league of nations." This seems excellent sense to me, but I do not insist upon it. If you do not think so, go ahead and finish your sentimental drunk; but rest assured that you will have a awful bust ahead.

Secretary Glass is right about government expenditures being reduced. A Republican Congress has been elected. The orgy of extravagance for which this administration has been responsible is about over. The people who buy liberty bonds from now on can depend upon it that the government is going to get its money's worth.

Congressmen Henry T. Raney says an examination of the income tax statistics shows that the number of millionaires in this country was 7,499 in 1914 and 17,000 in 1916; it is said that the number now reaches 22,000. Twice as many millionaires produced in four years of Democratic than in half a century of Republican national administration; yet the Democratic party came into power calling the Republican party the party of plutocracy, and breathing blood and slaughter against the rich. It would be funny if there was not a more serious side to such vicious hypocrisy.

Col. O. T. Livingston, of Iowa, discussing the political situation while in Washington the other day, observed: "It is hard to find a Democrat in the western states that will assert with confidence that the Democracy will win the presidential election next year. The election of 1918 was a surprise to many of them, who had faith that the president had read the sentiment of the country aright, but when states that had given their electoral votes to Mr. Wilson by overwhelming majorities in 1916 turned about-face and gave almost as great majorities for Republican candidates it made the Democrats wake up. Those Democrats who in 1916 went through the country and told great audiences that he kept us out of war had no slogan in 1918 to offset that. The Republicans, of course, made the best of their advantage, and the result is that today the Democrats are not only discouraged in nearly all of the western states, but they are hopeless."

An Insult to The Soldiers.

The most impudent insult that has been offered the American soldiers who fought the war with Germany to a victorious finish, is the statement of the Wilson worshippers that the central powers were defeated, not by the fighting men, but by the promulgation of President Wilson's fourteen points, which, as a matter of fact, never had any force except as an expression of private opinion by Mr. Wilson. It is the function of Congress, and not of the present, to define the cause for which we were fighting. That was done in the declaration of war, which, recited that we went to war in defence of American life and American rights. The pitiable servility of those who try to make it appear that because Mr. Wilson made a certain statement on a certain date, his declaration was the official utterance of the American people, only gives evidence that there is an element in our population in which the free spirit of Americanism is dead, and which takes its hand-me-down opinions from the throne.

'But Where I Stand Now God Knows'

Colonel Julian S. Carr, one of the best known Democrats of North Carolina and a Confederate veteran, has written a letter to Senator F. M. Simmons in which he declares:

"I have been a red nose Bourbon Democrat all my life. I have followed the fortunes of the party loyally through evil and good report, but where I stand now, God knows."

In explaining his position, Colonel Carr refers to the failure of the recent Democratic Congress to more rapidly press essential legislation, so that as a result the wheels of legislation were so clogged at the end of the session that much of the most important business was left uncompleted, Colonel Carr says:

"The unsettled conditions that the unexpected signing of the armistice produced in this country was bad enough. Now, added to those very unfavorable conditions which had destroyed business absolutely, comes the unhappy adjournment of the United States Congress, leaving such a mass of legislation incomplete, which has shocked the business interest in fact every other interest in this country to that extent that the 'oldest inhabitant' had never dreamed of. I am afraid, my dear Senator, that worse times are ahead, which might have been largely prevented by different action on the part of Congress."

"I think as a business man I know what I am talking to you about. I see as much of the country from San Francisco to New Orleans, and from Chattanooga to Boston, as almost any man in the country. The business interest is so badly frightened that it has about lost its nerve, and in addition to being frightened, we are dreadfully discouraged. To tell you the truth I feel about at my wits' ends. I feel almost disposed after more than fifty years of strenuous business life to throw down the shovel and the hoe, and quit trying. It looks like the efforts of a business life are to be ruined by somebody's unwisdom. Time will tell, but take it from me the people are very much discouraged, disturbed, upset and dissatisfied."

HAS LARGEST SCHOOL.
Great Britain has 2,000,000 Students Who are Soldiers.

Great Britain, with 2,000,000 soldier students, has the largest school in the world according to Gorell, deputy director of army staff duties. Of all of the unexpected things that happened in the war, he says, the educational work among British troops has been the most surprising.

For four years and a half the men have been turned away from everything mental, but their new associations have opened their minds in an incredible manner. Before the signing of the armistice education was given to the men as a diversion from the terrors of war. Since, however, it has given them something to do. It is not education in the ordinary sense, but education with a definite view to resettlement.

Recently 72,000 books have been sent to France. The men, it is said, are still asking for more. Lord Gorell said he also had a request for 2,000,000 pencils.

"The troops" said Lord Gorell, "go in for technical subjects, as a rule. Last June our department was asked to provide 57 subjects. The most amusing thing concerns a Scottish division. In the midst of the fighting in April they suddenly started a lecture course which included psychology, Scotch wit and humor and art."

Some Things You Should Know.

That five years ago the Moose Lodges bought 1014 acres of the best farming land in the United States, located in the Fox River valley, 35 miles west of Chicago. It was dedicated as a home and school for children of deceased members of the Loyal order of Moose. Since that time a beautiful modern city has been built, costing millions of dollars. $1.00 a year from each members dues goes to Mooseheart. Today over 600 boys and girls are being taught useful trades or professions. They have their choice of the following:

Machinist, carpenter, painter, plumber, harness maker, tailor, electrician, barber, dentistry, printing, book binding, drafting, farming, nursery work, stock, horticulture, bookkeeping, stenography, domestic science, music, millinery, dressmaking, cement moulding, fruits, vegetable canning, masonry, brick building, laundry work, all branches of house keeping, black-smith, tin smith, garage and auto repairing. Almost anything useful. Is there another place on earth where boys and girls have such opportunities? The widows and children fall heir to this great home and schools, and farm and factories, on the death of the member. It is theirs. They own it. There is no charity about it. Mothers go with their children and are furnished congenial employment at fair wages.

Do you know of any other fraternity, or society, that owns and operates any such place? No, there is none. A thousand acres, to romp around on, to play, to learn useful trades, to go to school, and go to church, to enjoy the best possible clean living, best for the mind and body, where the hands as well as the minds are taught. Fishing, boating, swimming, trapping, base ball, foot ball, basket ball, tennis, are all there for their pleasure, all on this 1014 acres. Mooseheart has two steam and one electric railway. Is on the Lincoln national highway. Has two express companies and a presidential 2nd class postoffice. Also a new Mooseheart movie theatre. Mooseheart is one feature of this fraternity. Another feature is that all principle cities in the U. S., Canada, Alaska, or Honolulu or Manila, or Havana, Cuba, or Australia, or Paris, or wherever there are Moose lodges, there you find a nice congenial home and club rooms, where any member, or visiting member, his wife and daughter, sister, or mother will find a splendid home where they can enjoy themselves.

Another feature, is the benefits. For instance Tillamook lodge pays $10.00 a week for disability from sickness or accident, for 13 weeks. $100 for funeral expenses. Dues $10 per year. Charter is open for a short time only at special fee of $6.00. Can you afford to be without this protection? Ask your conscience. The answer will be "No". If you would like to see a sample of our homes, go to the Moose Temple, 4th and Taylor St. Portland, the next time you are there. Go up stairs and tell the man you would like to look around. Regular dinners, ice cream for 30 cents. The high cost of living gets an awful jolt there. A nice ladies parlor for the women folks. A class of 40 or 50 will be initiated into Tillamook Lodge on Saturday night, May 3rd, at Moose hall, will you be one of them? For further information see, S. A. Broodhead, Sec., or H. H. Bower, Dept. Supervisor. Literature furnished on application.

Thomas R. Marshall, vice President of the United States; Governor Frank Louden, of Illinois; Governor Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Albert Bushnell Hart., of Hartford University, are four of the leading men of our country who are giving their best efforts to Mooseheart. All of them are Mooseheart governors. All are life members of their respective lodges. There are thousands of other great men why not you?
