NEW IDEAS THROUGH READING

Important to Select Good Books, but Practically Anything is Better Than Nothing.

A teacher who had the real interest of her pupils at heart, and who took a genuine interest in them and their activities after as well as during school hours, was trying her best to reach a particularly trying boy of about thirteen years. He did not seem at all interested in his work or studies, and she was attempting to discover just what he was interested in and how he spent his leisure time. Upon inquiry she found he was fond of taking long and solitary walks, although he disclaimed any interest in the beautiful or scientific in nature.

"But what do you do with yourself?" the teacher insisted. "What do you think about? You don't read very much, do you?"

The boy denied that he read, and asserted that when he was off alone that way he liked to think his own thoughts.

I wonder what kind of thoughts that poor boy occupied himself with? He never read, and he was apparently impervious to new ideas of any sort. He was just content with his own empty thoughts—they must have been poor and stale and empty, for he never opened his mind to new ones.

The best and most efficient way to get ideas is by reading—and it makes such a difference, therefore, what we read. But it is decidedly better to read almost anything that comes to hand than nothing at all. For if one has nothing in the mind at all, such peculiar things are bound to creep in. Isn't it better to re-think the thoughts of fine men than to think your own mean little ones?—Exchange.

EXPLAINING FALL OF JERICHO

Scientists Have Shown How Happening at Which Many Have Scoffed Was Quite Possible.

Many have refused to believe the biblical suggestion that the walls of Jericho fell down before the Israelites as a result of the sound caused by their shouts and the horns blown by the seven priests.

Modern researches and discoveries in regard to sound phenomena, however, show that such biblical miracles could be reconciled with natural law.

Vibration of sound is a thing the possibilities of which we do not yet understand. It is said that one of the great tenor singers can break a wine-glass by singing into its keynote. The sub-bass of the pipe organ is known to rick pews to pieces with its sympathetic note.

The authentic story is told of an old fiddler who, angered by the workmen constructing the first suspension bridge at Niagara, threatened to fiddle it down. Of course he was laughed at, but, seating himself near the bridge he began to experiment with his bass string.

When he found the note that suited him he sawed away on that note. The cables responded and soon the bridge was swaying in an alarming fashion. If he had not been stopped he might have fulfilled his threat. In any case care was afterward exercised to prevent a particle of vibration in the bridge.

Frenchman Given Honor.

The first white man, as far as can be determined, to discover petroleum in America was Joseph de la Roche D'Alion, a French missionary who speaks of his discovery in a letter written 180 years ago. He had crossed the Niagara river and made his way southward through western New York into northern Pennsylvania, where he found a spring from which oil flowed. The oil was highly esteemed by the Indians for medicinal uses. This oil spring was probably identical with one described by the Massachusetts Magazine in 1789, which speaks of "a creek called Oil creek, which issues from a spring, on the top of which floats an oil similar to that called Barbados tar, and from which one may gather several gallons a day." The waters of this spring were supposed to give great relief from rheumatism and to possess many other healing qualities.

The Tsetse Fly.

The dreaded "tsetse fly" (pronounced tset-se, accent on first syllable, whose vowel e has short sound, as in set) is an African gadfly, about the size of a housefly. The symptoms of its victim are at first those of a severe cold. The eyes, nose and mouth begin to "run," the body then swells while emaciation sets in, although not always fatal. The harm done is found to be not the result of poison from the fly itself, but communication to the blood of its victim of a microscopic parasite similar to that of Texas fever which it has received from a diseased animal. Animals or persons that recover are usually immune. The great dread of this fly formerly entertained has proved to be unjustified.
