COAXING YOU TO SMILE.

A Disheartened Surprise.

They had been engaged for full thirty minutes by the cuckoo clock. "I have a surprise in store for you, Alfred dear," she replied. "I can cook as well as I can play the piano" "That being the case, darling," he replied, "we had better live in a boarding house."

His Father's Chance.

The teacher was teaching the meaning of some new words. Among them was the word "monopoly." She told of the monopolies of Elizabeth's reign and then of some of the present day. Then to make sure that everyone understood it she decided to make a more specific example.

"Jackie"—she turned to the son of a pawnbroker—"supposing that there was a great snow on the ground and that all the sleds this town held belonged to your father. What would he then have?"

Jackie's eyes grew bright and his voice eager as he flashed back the answer. "A chance to make a lot of money."

Cabman was the Loser.

A cab halted at a street corner and a man alighted. The latter had evidently not the means at hand to pay his fare by the manner in which he dived first into one pocket and then the other. He was relieved, however, from his embarrassment by a man tendering a treasury note to the driver with the remark:

"Take your fare out of that; I know this man."

The change was given and the cabby was soon out of sight.

"To whom am I indebted for this kindness?" asked the first man.

"Not me, sir. On the contrary, that's a bad note I've been wanting to change all day."

Implied Self Praise.

Modest Young Lieutenant (reporting to C. O. after a thrilling raid in No Man's Land)—Captain, I wish to report private Hicks conduct in the highest terms of praise. He is the bravest man in the world. He followed me every place I went.

A Muddled Moujik.

Mr. Tower, former American ambassador to Russia told this story of a typical moujik entering a railroad station and inquiring when a certain train would leave. He received the information and departed.

A little later, however, he was back again, asking the same question.

"Why" exclaimed the agent, "I told you that only a moment ago."

"You did truly" the moujik answered, "but it isn't myself that wants to know this time, it's my mate outside."

There are Some.

Two little boys were overheard recently discussing their respective schools. "My teacher is a war bride," boasted the older one.

The little one thought a minute, then a look of relief spread over his face. "That's nothing," he retorted, "ours is a Civil war veteran."

Gallantry Saved His Neck.

Musing over the thought that good manners are at all times a valuable asset, there came to mind a pleasing little tale of a happy result to their possession. In the Jacobite rising of '45 a Roger Maculloch of Glasstullich had been taken. He was a very tall man and, while being escorted to the Tower, a woman remarked loudly:

"You tall rebel, you will soon be shorter by a head."

"Does that give you pleasure?" inquired Mr. M.

"Yes, it does."

"Then," said Mr. M., removing his hat and bowing low, "I do not die in vain."

This answer so moved the woman that she at once took an interest in the plight of the unfortunate Mr. M. and, mainly due to her exertions, the royal clemency was extended to him.

As proof of her pertinacity, there is still existent a document in the handwriting of George II, which reads: "Let Lady—have access to her tall rebel, and be damned to her."

New Story from Vermont.

Representative Frank Green, of Vermont has brought a new Vermont story to town. It is based on the care with which his fellow Vermonters take strangers into their arms. While ambling around the state during the recent recess Green visited a town where several of his ancestors were born. Finally he came up in front of a village store and, encountering one of the oldest inhabitants, he tried to start a conversation.

"Looks as though it might rain," Green suggested.

The oldest inhabitant's response was a quick glance.

"Oh" Green responded, "I'm young Green. My grandfather used to run the quarry out yonder. My grandmother too, was born in these parts."

"Is that so?"

"Yes" Green continued. "I had a lot of relatives born up here, too. One of my uncles ran the livery stable for years; a cousin was in the furniture business; one of my aunts was the champion bread baker of the county for six consecutive years, and I don't know how many of my folks took other high honors hereabouts."

The resident was impressed. Looking Green over carefully and observing that the young fellow appeared

Mary Pickford A Mountain Girl in Strong Picture.

Among the early successes scored by Mary Pickford, "Caprice" was one of the most brilliant. "This picture has been re-issued by Paramount in greatly improved form and it will be shown at the Gem Theatre Friday, June 13. It is said to be one of the best pictures in which "Our Mary" ever has been seen, and that is saying a great deal.

In this photoplay, Miss Pickford is wooed and won by a youth from the city. His father opposes the match, but the youth marries the girl and later realizes that his father was right when he said Mercy Baxter was not the social equal of his son. The bride is taken home by her father and later sent to a boarding school, where her chum proves to be her sister-in-law; but the wife conceals her identity. At a commencement ball the husband meets his wife, but he fails to recognize her. All's well that ends well as the sequel proves.
