CRIMINALS ESCAPE

SELF-CONFESSED FORGER AND PARTNER BREAK JAIL MONDAY

Leave no clue by which they can be traced; Signed checks for nearly $160 on local people

By one of the most clever manipulations of chair rounds, twisted arms, and wooden legs imaginable, two criminals escaped from the county jail Monday night, leaving neither trace nor sign to tell where they went. Outside the cell door, was the box with the lever which controlled the entrance to their door, and by breaking the rounds out of a chair, they pried the box open, pried away the bar that fastened in the lever, and then pulled out the lever that released their door.

The men were in jail here, charged with having forged and attempting to pass checks to the amount of nearly $160, sixty dollars of which were cashed. They are George Miles, alias Jack Jones, 28, of Cedarville, California and Harry Newell, 19, of Hood River, Oregon.

After they had opened their cell door, they had to get out the barred window. This they did by taking a chain from their bed, and wrapped it around the bars of the window, and then it is supposed they used the older mans wooden leg as a lever, and twisted the chain till it bent the bars, then they slipped out. The hole they went through is scarcely ten inches wide, so they must have taken off most of their clothes before going through the window.

Harry Newell worked around here at odd jobs, and when paid, if paid with a check, gave the check to Miles who would draw up another. Newell also would find checks and take them to Miles to copy. They successfully passed off eight checks, signing the names of the following people to them:—Chris Weiss, Mrs. Fred Biggs, Jim Brown, James A. Biggs and Pete Luther. Miles forged the checks, while Newell would cash them. The check on Luti was found in their mattress, and was not cashed.

Deputy Sheriff, John Aschm, returned from Hood River Thursday with Newell, where he had gone to arrest him. Newell says he did it in order to help Miles raise money enough to buy a new foot; Miles being a cripple with a peg leg. They both have signed confessions of their guilt, Miles having written all the checks and Newell passing them off.

Miles has been in the penitentiary at Walla Walla, Washington, once, and in the Salem pen twice. The case will probably hold over until the October term of the court.

When he arrived here, deputy Aschm arrested Miles, who had stayed here, working as a teamster for Joe Glaisyer. If the judge should come in next week, as it is possible he may do, district Attorney T. H. Goyno will probably call the grand jury, and bring the case to immediate trial.

First Prison Break in Number of Years.

It has been a long time since the last prisoner escaped from the county jail. H. Crenshaw, who was sheriff at the time has forgotten the number of years, though it must have been seven or eight. The man was Artill, Mr. Crenshaw was coming from his home, when he saw Artill coming along up the street, almost running, and with his coat over his arm. Mr. Crenshaw slipped behind some bushes and waited till the man came up and told him he would shoot unless he stopped. Mr. Crenshaw drove him the whole distance to the courthouse, and down into the cell, making him open the cell himself.

Artill in order to get out, had broken two heavy padlocks before passing through the doors to get away, and Mr. Crenshaw says he doesn't know to this day, how those padlocks were broken. Artill escaped a second time in the night and stole a horse and got as far as the Indian Reservation before he was discovered. After being put in the pen he escaped again from a road gang.

Escaped Forgers Caught.

The two escaped prisoners were caught in the Grand Ronde this morning. Miles, the older one had crawled into a cabin and gone to sleep, and was caught by a posse headed by deputy sheriff, Clarence Stanley. Newell the young man, was caught by another posse, among the members of this group was E. M. Condit. All the details of the arrest are not known at the time of going to press, as the party with Newell went to McMinnville, and haven't arrived in town as this is being written.
