Band Serenades Various Tyros During Day and Plays for Street Dance.

(From the Astorian)

The Dramatic Order of the Knights of Khorassen took the city over yesterday and last night for their initiation of approximately 100 tyros into the mysteries of Khorassa. Two hundred members of the Abd Uhl Atef temple No. 117, arrived yesterday noon bringing with them their drill team and a thirty piece band.

The band is said to be the best band of any social order in the state. It is led by Frank Maughan whose father plays solo alto in the band. The father has five sons, three of whom are in the band besides the leader. The drill team in charge of T. C. Freeburg, of the Portland temple.

The afternoon was spent in seeing Astoria from the cars of a number of citizens. The band also enlivened the occasion by grinding out the old jazz stuff that puts pep in stuffed monkeys.

Marched in Cosumes

In the evening the people of Astoria were treated to a beautiful exhibition of the customs of the order.

Arrayed in wonderful combinations of silk, satin and costly brocade the parade started up Commercial Street. The parade was led by the Tillamook delegation that had come over in 25 cars. They also had with them their pet mascot, a very much alive bear. This animal rode throughout the parade on the head of one of the members of the Tillamook lodge.

Danced in Street.

After the dance, the band furnished the music for a monster street dance in front of the Weinhard hotel. The knights and tyros danced until a late hour when they adjourned to the Astoria theatre where the real initiation of the tyros took place. It was there that they trod the hot sands and finally after some very thrilling experiences reached the sacred oasis of Khorassa.

The ritualistic part of the initiation was taken care of by H. J. Clark, the master of ceremonies for Oregon. He was assisted by chief officer of the viziers, M. C. Larsen; F. J. Johnson, formerly of Astoria, who is grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias for Oregon, and by W. G. Gleeson the grand keeper of records and seals for this state.

Astor Lodge is Host.

Mr. Clark, the master of ceremonies said to a representative of the Morning Astorian last night: "This celebration is put on by Astor lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias of this city. M. R. Brown, of Astoria, has done wonderful work in arranging the plans and the chief credit for the very successful celebration and initiation should rest on his shoulders." But the big feature of the evening was the parade.

First came the two bands, the Portland and Tillamook. Perched high on the water wagon were some tyros. Their faces were the picture of innocence. As they passed along their many friends passed numerous remarks about their appearance on such a thing which gave some to think that it was an entirely new experience for some of them.

Patrol on Flat Wagon.

Following on the heels of the water wagon came the coach. In it in all manner of positions were more of the tyros. A guard of honor knights went along by the side to see that none of them changed their minds about treading the sacred sands. "They can't be heated up for nothing," remarked the guard.

On a huge flat wagon the Arab patrol and drill team of the Portland temple rode. But next came the ambulance loaded to capacity with the grinning and sheepish looking tyros.

He Had to Hunt For It.

Mr. Myers was in a local restaurant when he noticed "Hunter Steak" on the menu. He inquired of the waiter what the "Hunter" meant. The waiter stated that the steak was stripped with bacon. Myers ordered same and says he hunted for the steak a long time and finally found it hidden under a strip of bacon.

The same Mr. Myers is trying to get as many "Dokies" as possible to go to the opening of the L. O. O. F. and K. of P. joint hall at Cascade Locks next Saturday night.

The whole Tillamook bunch were unanimous in the opinion that they would have arrived a half day sooner but they waited for Wolf to change a tire on the road.

C. W. Freiberg was the whole trombone section of the Portland tyros' band. "Hasn't Portland any more trombone players, or does Freiberg possess wind enough for the whole trombone section?" asked a Tillamook musician in commenting on the matter.

A. H. Gaylord, of Tillamook, slipped one over on the rest of the bunch yesterday morning by coming to Astoria and getting married.

Stanley Clark, also of Tillamook, took some of his colleagues down to the city bastille and thinking he was playing a good joke on them had them placed in cells. Desk Sergeant Donnelly, having a keen sense of humor, placed the men as directed but also put Clark in with them. It is said that when the time came to let them out, the sergeant mistook a real miscreant for Clark and freed him, keeping the joker in. The error was discovered soon enough to catch the real "jail bird" but Clark says "never again."

Joe Mannix one of the most promising attorneys and hailing from Tillamook, was very much in the limelight during the day.

Dr. Lewis, Tillamook's promising physician, could be seen very plainly amidst the crowd around the Weinhard.

"We can't quite conceive of the necessity of a water wagon in a dry state" said a Portland tyro.

All boys or girls who expect to attend high school this term are urged to select the subjects which they wish to carry for the year, whether they plan to enter the opening week or later. By enrolling at this time more attention can be paid to their individual needs. Students who plan to enter college after graduation should let the fact be known, so that they may be able to meet the entrance requirements of the particular school which they may wish to attend.

Children desiring to enter the grades from some other school should see the superintendent on these days for assignment to their grades. If possible they should bring report cards from the school attended.

Children beginning school for the first time will not be enrolled after the second Monday of the semester, September 22. Pupils less than six years old cannot be admitted. A new class of beginners will be enrolled at the beginning of the second semester, in January.

The pupils will report at 9 a.m. at the rooms to which they have been promoted. After having been assigned seats and given lists of books and supplies needed they will be excused to purchase them. This is the year in which the Oregon State Text Book Commission has selected books for the next six years, so there are a number of changes from last year. To avoid mistakes it is desired that no books be purchased until the teachers have informed the pupils as to the exact things needed.

The superintendent would like to hear from anyone who expects to take teachers as roomers and boarders or either, during the coming term. Telephone 150 or 131-R.
